Lien Not Like Mortgage.

Attorney G. Halvorson secured an order from Judge Watts last week compelling Register of Deeds Quist to return fees he had collected for recording mechanic's liens, says the Thief River Falls News. The law requires a tax of 50 cents per $100 for recording mortgages which is paid to the county, and Register of Deeds Quist and County Attorney Germo held that a mechanic's lien was the same as a mortgage. Judge Watts, however, holds otherwise and in the future this tax will not be demanded and all sums so collected in the past will be returned to the person who paid the same. So far as is known this is the first decision made under the law which recently went into effect taxing mortgages.

Dairymen's Meeting.

It is the desire of the association to receive as well as impart information, and the meeting will be one of general discussing.

Every dairyman and farmer in the community is cordially invited to attend the meeting. The program and particulars will be announced later.—Thief River Press.

Mrs. C. C. Jackson, of Thief River Falls, underwent an operation in a Minneapolis hospital last week and had one of her kidneys removed. The operation was entirely successful and she is said to be recovering nicely.

The new steel bridge across the Clearwater river two miles south of here was finished on Tuesday of this week. The crew has been at work on this brikge for about two weeks and the people living in that vicinity say they did a fine piece of work. From here the crew went to Thief River Falls to put a new steel bridge over the Red Lake river.

SENATOR DAVIS HAS WAY TO CURB TRUST

IN AN IMPASSIONATE ADDRESS HE CHALLENGES CONTEST OF THE ISSUE.

CALLS THE EVIL A "CANCEROUS SORE"

Arkansas Member of Upper House of Congress Says He Has an Anti-Corporation Bill Which Will Effectually Do the Work.

Washington, Dec. 12.—Senator Jefferson Davis of Arkansas delivered a passionate address before the senate Wednesday. After declaring that his bill, rigorously enforced, would kill the trusts, with dramatic effect he challenged any senator to step forward and contest the issue with him. When Senator Davis secured the floor and began his address all of the senators, both Republicans and Democrats, were in their seats and they gave strict attention to his remarks. The galleries were filled with spectators.

Would Forfeit Its Charter.

A domestic corporation found fixing the price of any article would, by his bill, he said, have its charter forfeited and a foreign corporation guilty of such an act would not be allowed to do business in the United States.

"The trust evil," said Senator Davis, "is a cancerous sore upon the body politic just as upon the human body. The only remedy, the only successful treatment, is the surgeon's knife. Cut it out by the root, destroy the virus before the whole body politic is affected and destroyed."

He spoke of the Sherman antitrust law. "Has it proven effectual?" he asked. "Has it destroyed a single trust? Nearly seven years of Mr. Roosevelt's strenuous term has passed with all the machinery of the government at his back, with the great power of the chief executive in his hands, yet I ask will some Republican senator upon this floor tell me one trust that he has even tamed, much less destroyed?

Shrouds Have No Pockets.

"This is an age when men have gone mad in their frenzied efforts for the dollar. This is an age when money is placed above men; when gold is placed before God; when we would sell our souls, our government, our all for one bright smile from the god of mammon. What is money, Mr. President, that it is held so priceless? You cannot eat it, you cannot wear it, your shroud has no pocket in it and St. Peter will not receive it for admission into the golden gates.

Where St. Peter Takes No Sugar.

"When we look to the leading cause for this great wealth upon the part of these great corporations, and the causes leading to their formation, to the formation of trusts, we are compelled to go no further than Republican authority itself and take the sworn testimony of Mr. Havemeyer, the great sugar king, who has gone to his reward, be it good or bad, who has gone to that land and that clime where St. Peter does not take 'sugar in his,' and where money is of no value."

He recalled Mr. Havemeyer's statement before the industrial commission that "the tariff is the mother of trusts."

Fortunes of Multimillionaires.

"Under the operation of this system of government," he said, "51 men in the United States, multimillionaires, if you please, have amassed a total fortune of $3,295,000,000. Of these 51 John D. Rockefeller, the oil king of the world, leads with $600,000,000; Andrew Carnegie, the steel king of the world, follows with half this amount."

The secretary of commerce and labor had calculated, he said, all the property owned by 89,000,000 American citizens is $107,000,000,000, so that these 51 citizens own one thirty-fifth of the entire wealth of the nation.

Day When Money Is King.

"What an alarming concentration of wealth; what an alarming concentration of power!" he declared. "In this day and time money is king; money is god. Without the doors of opportunity are closed, the doors of society are shut. Yea, even in some instances the doors of the church do not welcome so enthusiastically the man in rags and tatters as the man with millions. How shall this condition be changed? How shall this government be saved? One way and one way only—that is to kill, destroy, annihilate the source of all this evil—the trusts."

Plant to Resume.

Helena, Mont., Dec. 12.—The East Helena plant of the American Smelting and Refining company has announced that it will resume the buying of all custom ores. This will mean the resumption of many mines in Montana, which have been closed as the result of the recent action of the smelter in refusing to accept any ore but that from contract shippers.

Planters' House Burns.

Hopkinsville, Ky., Dec. 12.—The Planters' association prizing house at Pembroke, Ky., was burned early Wednesday. The building contained 20,000,000 bushels of wheat, but no tobacco. The loss is about $25,000. The fire caught from a defective flue.

Slays Wife and Self.

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 12.—While his two little children slept in an adjoining bed George Stimson shot his wife to death as she lay in her bed, and then fired a bullet into his own brain.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

Well Provided.

St. Peter.—There are well filled granaries and root cellars at the St. Peter state hospital for the insane. From an agricultural viewpoint the year has been remarkably successful at the institution, and the showing is the best ever made by the hospital farm. In 1906 the value of farm products reached a total of $31,000, but the figures this year will exceed that figure considerably.

Diversified farming is carried on on quite an extensive scale at the hospital. There are 450 ares of land under cultivation, and John Hurst, the institution farmer, made them yield abundantly. Potatoes head the list of products with 10,000 bushels, and there are 6,000 of barley, 5,000 of corn, 2,000 of oats. Onion eaters among the patients will revel in 1,000 bushels of strong-scented bulbs; there are 1,500 bushels of carrots, 1,000 bushels of turnips and 6,000 bushels of other grains and vegetables. During the summer the inmates consumed 5,000 quarts of strawberries and 15,000 watermelons and canteloupes, and fully 20,000 heads of cabbage, with as many bunches of celery, have been stored in the cellars.

Asbestos.

Tower.—What promises to be two of the greatest ore finds in this section of the country has been discovered of late and is being thoroughly investigated by the local business men.

Within a radius of three miles of the city of Tower an asbestos mine has been discovered, and within four miles a ledge of soft iron ore has been discovered.

These latest discoveries were made by two of the local men, Dr. J. D. Murphy and D. Graham. The asbestos ledge is about one-fourth of a mile square at the surface and is of a rich quality. The men have in their possession some rich specimens, but as to the extent of the ore in depth they cannot state at the present time, as this part has not as yet been thoroughly investigated. The specimens of iron ore are rich, but nothing is known as to the extent of the body.

New Ditch Law Void.

St. Paul.—The ditch law passed by the last legislature was laid away on the shelf in an opinion handed down by the supreme court, in which Justice E. A. Jaggard declares chapter 191 of the Laws of 1907, the new ditch law, to be unconstitutional and void.

The new law gave the owner of wet lands the right to drain them across a neighbor's land. If the man whose land was affected by the drain offered an objection it was up to the town supervisors to appraise the damage.

William Pautzke of Rockford attempted to dig a ditch across the land of Charles Schubert, who entered a protest, on the ground that the new law permitted the taking of private property for private purposes.

Big Christmas Dinner.

St. Cloud.—Inmates of the state institutions will be given a good Christmas dinner as usual. The state board of control is now securing bids on various delectables. Christmas trees will also be furnished and every effort will be made to give the inmates a real Christmas day.

Bids will be asked for on oranges, bananas and lemons, 3,350 pounds of nuts, 3,545 pounds of candy, 8,375 pounds of poultry, 223 gallons of oysters and 20 barrels of cranberries.

A Surprise.

Minneapolis.—Dressed in blue jeans and apparently not overburdened with wealth, a gentleman strolled up to the counter of the city controller's office and calmly stated he would like to purchase some of the recent issue of park and school bonds.

When assured that the bonds could not be purchased in lots of less than $50 each he smiled blandly and produced currency and certified checks to the amount of $10,000 which he said he wanted to invest in the bonds.

NEWS NOTES.

Breckenridge.—The Breckenridge Telephone company has filed articles of incorporation. The officers and directors are all local residents.

St. Paul.—The corner-stone of a temple being built by the Sons of Israel congregation at Fairfield avenue and Robertson street was laid.

St. Paul.—A man named Callen, thirty-eight years old, supposed to be a wood sawyer living at Swede Hollow, was run over by a Northern Pacific switch engine at midnight near the Seventh street tunnel, and died an hour later at the city hospital, where he was taken in the Margaret street patrol wagon.

Minneapolis.—Of the forty seven novels written by the famous Laura Jean Libbey, "Miss Middleton's Lovers" was the one selected by Charles E. Blaney, the well known theatrical manager, to give a stage production of, and the dramatization will be seen at the Bijou Opera House, the week of Dec. 15.

Belle Plaine. — Frightened by a prospect that their taxes will be increased, because the city has voted to put in waterworks, fifteen farmers have petitioned the district court to permit them to withdraw from the borough, so far as the assessment and collection of taxes is concerned.

Fergus Falls.—The bank statements just published here show an increase in deposits of $96,180.34, as compared with this time last year.

St. Paul.—Fire of unknown origin destroyed the home of late Senator Cushman K. Davis, Laurel and Farrington avenues.

MR. EDWARD M. BURTT, 5 N. Jefferson Ave., St. Louis, Mo., writes: "It affords me much pleasure to announce that I have used your medicine at various times for several years, and that it has given entire satisfaction, not only in my own family, but also that of others of my friends. And would cheerfully recommend the use of Peruna, as I certainly do endorse your medicine."

Catarrh of Head, Nose, Throat.

Mr. Charles Levy, 80 Allen St., New York, N. Y., writes;

"I am very glad to tell you of the cures wrought by Peruna in my family.

"My son, aged seven, who had catarrh of the nose, was cured by two bottles of Peruna, and I had catarrh of the head, nose, throat and ears. One bottle of Peruna cured me."

How He Did It.

Early in the morning session, when the pupils were feeling bright and happy, the teacher thought it a good plan to give them sentences to correct, both as to grammar and sense. She accordingly wrote on the blackboard:

"The hen has four legs. He done it."

Thoughtful little Ignatius, at the foot of the class, pondered deeply, and at the end of 15 minutes' time, allowed for correction, he wrote:

"He didn't done it; God done it."

ECZEMA COVERED BABY.

Worst Case Doctors Ever Saw—Suffered Untold Misery—Perfect Cure by Cuticura Remedies.

"My son, who is now twenty-two years of age, when four months old began to have eczema on his face, spreading quite rapidly until he was nearly covered. The eczema was something terrible, and the doctors said it was the worst case they ever saw. At times his whole body and face were covered, all but his feet. I used many kinds of patent medicines, to no avail. A friend teased me to try Cuticura. At last I decided to try Cuticura when my boy was three years and four months old, having had eczema all that time and suffering untold misery. I began to use all three of the Cuticura Remedies. He was better in two months; in six months he was well. Mrs. R. L. Risley, Piermont, N. H., Oct. 24, 1905."

WHEN SANTA CAME BY WATER

BY CLYDE ALISON MANN

Capt. Riley was intently watching from his net-loft window the approach of his biggest fishing tug, the Alice Riley. Even in the inner harbor she was pitching and rolling in the December seas and was sheathed in ice from bobbing timber head to the overhang aft.

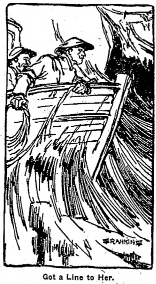
"Not a boxful, not one," he groaned, seeing the nested fish boxes still lashed to the deckhouse roof. "But the boys 'll get their pay, somehow; they'll get it, if I have to slap a mortgage on all the outfit." No one else should know it, but the truth was Christmas cheer was not in Capt. Riley's heart as he turned gravely to the twine-reeling he had busied himself with since he broke his ankle and Billy Noonan had proudly taken out the Alice Riley, the most powerful tug that fished off Skilligalee in the Straits of Mackinac.

The tug tied up to the dock with a bump, there was some shouting, heavy footsteps clumping on the icy wharf, then up the shaky stairs and the door flew open letting in a blast of raw north wind and an ice-coated being in oil skins who presently shed his chrysalis and became a crestfallen skipper, a curly-haired, alert young fellow, who almost hugged the roaring stove, for he was drenched and shivering.

"Not a pound, cap'n," was his greeting. "Breezed up so we couldn't touch the nets," he added.

"Old Michigan must be cuttin' up considerable," the old man answered cheerily. "Never mind, boy, ye'll get 'em next time."

But Billy Noonan knew how bad the fishing had been all year, and could figure as well as his employer how bad matters must be. Not a man of them all but loved the grizzled old man, and marveled at him, for he knew the lake bottom from Point Betsie to the great log rollway that scarred the bluffs north of Waugoshance light, as most men know dry land. Billy Noonan, however, also loved the old captain's daughter, Mary, and had hoped—how he had hoped!—to bring in a big catch of whitefish when he was given the big tug to lift the last nets of the year. Now a lean Christmas, a very lean Christmas, seemed certain in the Riley home—a home for all homeless lads at Christmas time. Mary's laugh had been infrequent of late and her merriment had been forced.



Got a Line to Her.

Here she was herself in the doorway as the crew clumped in. "Billy Noonan," she called, "don't you know you'll swamp the tug with the fish jammed to the gunwalls, so?" There was a note in her raillery that cut him to the quick. How queenly she was, this straight, blue-eyed brunette, wrapped in the captain's oilskins, flushed from facing the storm!

Billy Noonan lay awake that night, notwithstanding the long day at the wheel of the lurching tug. Through his window he stared out at the blackness, and he listened to the wailing wind; wailing, it seemed to him, complaint at the year of misfortunes and pitiful catches of fish, wailing complaint at the wages and prices of fish fixed by the union that made the lot of Capt. Riley so hard in an "off" year. Far out on the Charlevoix pier no white light shone, up and down the angry lake the lighthouses and lightships were nowhere else on watch, the fog signals were silent, although belated barges still stumbled up and down the lake. Suddenly, a flash in the north, and another and another, the flash of rockets, brought him out of bed.

"This side o' Waugoshance, about White Shoals," he calculated. "Bad place with this wind."

He shook his bed-fellow, Kelly, the fireman, and finally roused him.

"Get out Kell, someone's in trouble near the straits and maybe the Alice Riley can get a line to her first." Kelly knew what that would mean, at least $400 a day for "the old man," and he knew the need.

Everyone said the Alice Riley had an uncommon crew; two hours later the tug's whistle blew four booming blasts in the darkness—"strong ahead"—and five more that were Billy's farewell to Mary if she was awake—or cared. She saw from her bedroom window the tug steam through the channel, sparks flying weirdly in the wind, out to the open lake where no light shone to mark the way for the 30 miles of desperate tussle with waves that now at times buried the very deckhouse roof. Again the five short blasts as the starboard light turned north beyond the pier. then was gone.

"Here's hopin'," growled Billy as he whirled the wheel over. He was hanging on grimly, for at times the tug stood about on end. A sea smashed one of the pilot-house windows and he fixed it as best he could by the dim binnacle light. He lashed the wheel to a course two points east of north. In the blackness he could see only the white crests of waves. The panting of the tug's exhaust told him Kelly was stoking like a fiend and that O'Neil was squeezing the last ounce out of his big engine, 16 square. Ahead was blackness, the maddened waters and the infrequent flash of rockets.

It was still dark when Billy saw, as the tug topped a great wave, a ship's light ahead twinkle a moment where the whitecaps marked White Shoals. At dawn he had a line to the derelict and the great seven-inch hauser was going to her overside; an hour later they were fast by the forward towing post. It would be easy in such a sea to trip on the hauser and "turn turtle," or to be snatched by a great wave and have the hauser break. The barge on the shoal was an ore freighter loaded to the water's edge, a heavy tow.

With his hand on the bell cord to signal to O'Neil, Billy muttered: "Here's for Mary and better—"

He rang, the engines started, then, crash! Billy's Christmas wishes were cut short; the tow post was gone and water poured into the hole in torrents. It was hours later when they got that hauser again, when the tug's hoarse whistle roared, "All right," and the bellow of the stranded barge replied. It was dreary work and Billy and the crew were gaunt with hunger and weariness.

Again slowly in the teeth of the wind they went ahead, jerked tremendously at intervals when the waves snatched the tow. When they were getting into deeper water O'Neil's engines suddenly stopped, and ten minutes later the barge had drifted back to the shoal. The eccentric had slipped; the tug was but driftwood; bad business in such a sea.

Billy Noonan and O'Neil kept her afloat someway, and all the time Billy, still clutching the wheel, was muttering of Mary and Christmas; he had strange vagaries, but was still sane as a skipper. When at last the frantic hammering in the engine room ceased, near evening of the next day, they were still near to the barge that was pounding on the shoals. The sun broke through the clouds, a red sun near to setting beyond the tossing waters, the sunset of Christmas eve.

It was never clear how they got the slow steel barge to move so fast once they got her off again. But in the midnight hours when St. Nick, Kris Kringel and all the Christmas fairies were abroad on land, when the last embers of the yule logs smouldered cozily under lines of stockings in many, many homes, the Alice Riley's deep whistle sounded off the Charlevoix pier. Capt. Riley still sat before his fireplace, waiting hopefully—as was his nature. But for the hundredth time he looked about the room at Mary's pitiful efforts at Christmas decorations. Suddenly he heard, faint but unmistakable, the bass call of the Alice Riley.

Instantly he picked up his crutch and rapped on the door of Mary's room. So quickly did she appear, suspiciously red-eyed but smiling, she must have been awake, too.

"Listen," he cried, holding up his hand.

Boo-oo-oom, boooo-oom, boo-oo-oom! "All right!"

Again, deep, full and growing less faint, the whistle sounded, "All right."

"That means a Christmas for all of us, Mary, in spite of the fish!"

Then there came a succession of short, sharp toots and the captain stared perplexed. With a twinkle he turned to Mary.

"Do you know what that means, Mary?" he asked.

She flushed crimson, but before she put her arms about her father with a hug that he understood she flashed her answer from the bow window with a lamp. The captain, smiling, for a long time sat looking at a picture over the mantel, the picture of her mother. "Merry Christmas," he said to the picture, very softly. "I knew it would come."

Billy brought it—and Billy had it, an unforgetable Christmas—with the Riley's. When at last he "rolled in" with Kelly, the fireman would have his joke—he called it "Mary Christmas."

NEW STRENGTH FOR OLD BACKS.

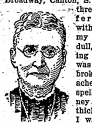
No Need to Suffer Every Day from Backache.



Mrs. Joannah Straw, 526 North Broadway, Canton, S. D., says: "For three years I suffered everything with rheumatism in my limbs and a dull, ceaseless aching in my back. I was weak, languid, broken with headaches and dizzy spells, and the kidney secretions were thick with solids. I was really in a critical condition when I began with Doan's Kidney Pills, and they certainly did wonders for me. Though I am 81 years old, I am as well as the average woman of 50. I work well, eat well and sleep well."

Daily Thought.

A little fun,
  A little play,
A little laughter
  Day by day,
A little school
  And we'll confess

A little grief
  A little woe
As down the later
  Years we go.
A little love,
  A little strife,
A deal of hope—
  And this is life.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

His Advice.

"Well, Uncle Josh," said the fond mother after her daughter had trilled a few times for the purpose of impressing their relative from the country, "what do you think of it? Would you advise me to have Daisy's voice cultivated?"

"Yes, I guess I would. Git it cultivated a while and then have it seeded down. Gosh, but you people seem to be warm-blooded here. I'd freeze if I had to depend on them steam pipes for heat."

Preacher's Comforting Remarks.

At an evening prayer meeting in a Maine village the senior deacon, Dominicus Jordan, arose to make appropriate scriptural remarks about the death of the late Miss Simpkins. In conclusion the deacon said: "I respected Miss Simpkins, the members of this church respected Miss Simpkins, the citizens of this town respected Miss Simpkins, but now she's dead and gone to the Lord, and the scripture saith, 'The Lord is no respecter of persons.'"—Exchange.

HAD NO DOUBT OF HIS FATE.

Mr. Jerome Evidently Was Aware of His Wife's Culinary Ability.

Some weeks ago the wife of Judge Blank, of Pacific avenue, lost her cook, and since she had no other resource she rolled up her sleeves and for a week provided such meals as the judge had not enjoyed since those happy days when the Blanks did not keep a cook. The judge's delight was so great that by way of appreciative acknowledgment he presented Mrs. Blank with a beautiful ermine cloak. Quite naturally, the incident was a good deal noised about among the social acquaintances of the Blanks and a spirit of envious emulation was developed in certain quarters. It was in this mood that Mrs. Jerome recited the story to her husband. "What do I get, Jerry?" she asked, "if I will do the cooking for a week?" "Well," said Mr. Jerome, "at the end of a week, my dear, you'll get one of those long crepe veils."—San Francisco Argonaut.

BOTH GAINED

Man and Wife Fatten on Grape-Nuts.

The notion that meat is necessary for real strength and the foundation of solid flesh is no longer as prevalent as formerly.

Excessive meat eaters are usually sluggish a part of the time because they are not able to fully digest their food, and the undigested portion is changed into what is practically a kind of poison that acts upon the blood and nerves, thus getting all through the system.

"I was a heavy meat eater," writes an Ills. man, "and up to two years ago, was in very poor health. I suffered with indigestion so that I only weighed 95 pounds.

"Then I heard about Grape-Nuts and decided to try it. My wife laughed at me at first but when I gained to 125 pounds and felt so fine, she thought she would eat Grape-Nuts too.

"Now she is fat and well and has gained 40 pounds. We never have indigestion any more and seldom feel the desire for meat. A neighbor of ours, 68 years old, was troubled with indigestion for years; was a heavy meat eater, and now since he has been eating Grape-Nuts regularly, he says he is well and never has indigestion. I could name a lot of persons who have really been cured of indigestion by changing from a heavy meat diet to Grape-Nuts." "There's a Reason." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

CONTAGION A QUESTION OF PREVENTION

Sinks, drains, eating and cooking utensils, sick room linen and clothing frequently carry the dreaded disease-germ unnoticed by the household.

Thorough and hygienic cleansing is the best safeguard against infection, and such a safeguard is found in the universal household necessity—Borax.

This simple preventive carries in itself, disinfecting qualities which enter the fabric or act upon the article to be cleansed in a hygienic manner, eliminating every unwholesome property, rendering it contagion-proof, while at the same time Borax is of itself as harmless as salt.

Unlike most disinfectants which depend upon their strength of odor or harmful-to-the-system qualities, to arrest or prevent contagion, Borax is Nature's remedy, being easy to obtain and easy to apply, a simple solution in hot water being all the application necessary and requiring no prescription, it can be obtained from any grocer or druggist in convenient, economical household packages.

In addition to its disinfecting qualities, Borax is especially a household necessity, and can be used for softening water, cleansing and whitening clothes, clearing the skin, whitening hands, makes an excellent dandruff remover and can be used on the finest laces or most delicate fabrics without injury, while as an adjunct to the bath it removes all odor of perspiration and leaves the skin soft and velvety.

Corpse In No Hurry.

Respect is due to the man on his last journey to the cemetery, and the New York cabman who was making for the Central station showed the proper feeling in driving for some distance along the procession without trying to cross it. But at last he could contain himself no longer. Turning his horse across the hearse, he said, in a cabman's whisper: "Look 'ere, my fare's in a 'urry, an' yours ain't!"

Fine Recipe for the Quick Cure of Coughs and Colds.

Mix half ounce of Concentrated oil of pine with two ounces of glycerine and half a pint of good whisky; shake well each time and use in doses of a teaspoonful to a tablespoonful every four hours.

This is the formula prescribed by the renowned throat and lung specialist who established the camp for consumptives in the pine woods of Maine and whose remarkable cures attracted widespread attention among the medical fraternity. He declares that it will heal the lungs and cure any cough that is curable and will break up an acute cold in 24 hours. The ingredients can be secured from any prescription druggist at a small cost and is easily mixed at home.

Be sure not to buy the ordinary bulk oil of pine nor patent medicine imitations, as they will produce nausea. It comes put up for medicinal use in half-ounce vials enclosed in round air-tight cases which protect it from heat and light.

THE PIANO'S SOUL.

It Is Imparted to the Instrument by the "Scale."

"Every piano factory," said a piano manufacturer, "employs what we piano men call a 'scale.' It would be too long for me to explain to you all about it, but in piano making the 'scale' is the man who after all else has been done imparts to the piano its soul.

"I cannot tell you how they do it. They do not know themselves, and no man can teach another. It is born, like all art. The 'scales' are very few and hard to get, and we pay them handsome wages. But they are as difficult to manage as the great tenors of grand opera and as sensitive as women. Like all artists, they are forever squabbling among themselves about little things, and, as you may guess, jealousy is their besetting evil.

"But I have not yet explained what the 'scale' does. When a piano is all strung and tuned and ready to leave the factory, the 'scale' sits down to it all alone and screws it to pitch. His ear is so true, his hand so fine and his sense of the reasons for sound is so delicate and exquisite that when he has finished his work that which was a mere box containing strings has become a voice that can sing if you know how to make it sing. The 'scale' has given it a soul—a part of his own soul."—New York World.

Didn't Please the Critic.

When Verdi was putting the last touches to "Il Trovatore" he was visited in his study by a privileged friend. The friend was one of the ablest living musicians and critics. He was permitted to look at the score and run over the "anvil chorus" on the pianoforte. "What do you think of that?" asked the master. "Trash!" said the connoisseur. Verdi rubbed his hands and chuckled, "Now, look at this and this," he said. "Rubbish!" said the other, rolling a cigarette. The composer rose and embraced him with a burst of joy. "What do you mean?" asked the critic. "My dear friend," cried Verdi, "I have been making a popular opera. In it I resolved to please everybody except the purists, the great judges, the classicists, like you. Had I pleased you I should have pleased no one else. What you say assures me of success. In three months 'Il Trovatore' will be sung and roared and whistled and barrel organed all over Italy."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Negroes' Teeth.

The whiteness and beauty of the teeth of the African negroes are generally ascribed to the food which they eat and to favorable climatic conditions, but these ignorant natives take special care of the teeth and are familiar with many remedies for the treatment of dental diseases. — Munchener Medizinische Wochenschrift.

THE COMET'S TAIL.

A Plume of Fairy Lightness and Ever Changing Dimensions.

A comet is distinguished usually by a nucleus, by an envelope called the coma, which surrounds the nucleus, and, last, by its luminous tail streaming behind the nucleus for perhaps a hundred million miles and more as the comet swims toward the sun. Occupying a volume thousands of times greater than the sun, the question naturally arises, how can a body with so vast an appendage sweep through the solar system without deranging every planet? Fortunately for the preservation of the solar system, a comet, so far from being a compact mass, is often transparent. Stars have been distinctly seen without perceptible diminution of brightness not only through the tail, but even through the nucleus. In structure the tail is a gossamer of molecules so ghostly that in comparison the filmiest of bridal veils is coarsely dense and the thinnest haze that hovers on the horizon is an impenetrable blanket. Indeed, the earth's atmosphere on the clearest day is far denser. Hundreds of cubic miles of a comet's tail are probably outweighed by a jarful of air. A plume of such fairy lightness can hardly be supposed to remain permanent, and so it is not astonishing to find that during its swift journey around the sun a comet's outlines are incessantly changing. An interval of a few days or perhaps of a few hours may work wonders in its diaphanous texture. Its path is its only permanent characteristic, indeed the only characteristic by which it can be surely identified if it ever returns.

From all the known facts astronomers have concluded that the nucleus of a comet is merely a mass of meteors easily dispersed into small groups or distributed gradually along the orbit until eventually the comet is completely disintegrated and extinguished. Astronomical history offers considerable evidence in support of this hypothesis. Biela's comet, discovered in 1826 and carefully observed on each return, split into two parts and reappeared as a curious double comet in 1846. When it revisited the earth in 1852 the two parts had drifted away from each other and were separated about 1,000,000 miles. Since then the comet has disappeared. Every six and a half years the earth crosses the track of that lost comet. Meteoric showers then rain upon us. In these meteors we see all that is now left of Biela's comet. Similarly, the great comet of 1882 literally lost its head by breaking into four portions, each of which will some day form a separate comet. Another link in this chain of testimony is presented by the chemical composition of meteorites which have found their way to the earth, a composition which agrees exactly with that of a comet.—Waldemar Kaempffert in Cosmopolitan.

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES.

Result of 15 years experience in tire making. No danger from THORNS, CACTUS, PINS, NAILS, TACKS or GLASS. Serious punctures, like intentional knife cuts, can be vulcanized like any other tire.

Two Hundred Thousand pairs now in actual use. Over Seventy-five Thousand pairs sold last year.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road thus overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump and two Sampson metal puncture closers on full paid orders (these metal puncture closers to be used in case of intentional knife cuts or heavy gashes). Tires to be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination.

We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. Ask your Postmaster, Banker, Express or Freight Agent or the Editor of this paper about us. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a small trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

COASTER-BRAKES, built-up-wheels, saddles, pedals, parts and repairs, and everything in the bicycle line are sold by us at half the usual prices charged by dealers and repair men. Write for our big SUNDRY catalogue.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

Child Terribly Scalded.

Yesterday forenoon Gunder, the 16-months-old son of Thor Gunstenson, of Garnes township, was probably fatall scalded by falling into a dish pan full of hot water. As near as we can learn Mrs. Gunstenson was busy with her housework and had filled the pan with water and had pushed it partly under the stove. The little one, playing on the floor, fell backward into the water while she was looking in another direction. She snatched him out at once and dispatched a messenger to Plummer at once for Dr. Clark and to notify Mr. Gunstenson, who had come to town earlier with a load of grain. Dr. Clark went out at once and did everything possible for the little sufferer. The tender baby flesh was badly cooked and came off quite freely with the clothing. But slight hopes are entertained for the child's recovery.

Hans Holmen Married.

At Ulen on Sunday last Hans Holmen and Miss Eline Sleper were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. They are spending a few days visiting amoug their numerous friends in Clay county and are expected to arrive here very shortly to take up their permanent residence on the groom,s fine homestead in Mayfield township. Preparations are being made to have a big reception and dance at the Holmen residence when they arrive when Mr. Holmen and Elling Ellingson, also recently married, will make their brides acquainted with their neighbors. Mr. and Mrs. Holmen will be given a royal welcome on their homecoming and the PIONEER joins with all their other friends in best wishes for their future happiness and prosperity.

Peter Hillestad was a business visitor in town yesterday from Equality and called to pay his subscription to the PIONEEB again in advrnce.

Olaf has got the habit of paying his subscription in advance for his newspaper and yesterday was the fourth time that he paid iu advance for the PIONEER for a year. That's the kind of country subscribers we've got—the best in Minnesota.

The Misses Lillian and Olga Iverson arrived here on Wednesday from Grand Forks to spend a few days visiting friends. They intend to leave in a few days for Beaudette near where they have taken claims and will begin life as homesteaders. They will be accompanied by their father, Erick Iverson, who has been here for several weeks attending to business matters.

Mrs. Andrew Ydste, who resides a few miles west of here, was taken suddenly ill on Tuescay night and John Westerlund, her nearest neighbor was called upon to make a hurried trip to Red Lake Falls for medical aid. The doctor arrived as quickly as horse flesh could bring him and his prompt aid soon brought the lady out of danger. She is now reborted to be recoving nicely.

Charley Kjellen returned on Wednesdsy night from a visit to his old home at Hallock and was accompaniep by an estimable young lady of that place to whom he was quietly married during his absence. We regret that we do not know the former name of the bride or the time of the wedding but the PIONEER is glad to welcome this happy couple to this vicinity and hopes for their futnre all that is good.

The ladies of the Clearwater congnation will hold their annual auction sale for the benefit of the Wyandotte church on next Saturday even'ng. There will be a basket party in connection with the sale and refreshments will be served. There should be a big attendance at this sale as the church needs the mouey at present and a general invitation is extended to all who can attend to come and do what they can to help. This auction will be held at the Lefave place in section 34, Wyandotte, begining at 7'oclock. Everybody come.

Steenerson Wins For Settlers.

According to the Thief River Falls News a resident of that city on wednesday received a telegram from Washington stating that congressman Steenerson had been successful in securing a reversal of the decision of the Secretary of the Interior which required that an acturl residence of fourteen month was necessary before a commuted proof could be made. It will be remenbeed that some time ago the Secretary made this ruling and that congressman Steenerson secured a suspension of the ruling until he would arrive at Washington and take the matter up with the Secretary personally. The result of his personal effort is that the ruling has been reversed and that hereafter an actual residence of eifht months will be held sufficient.

The ruling affects a large number of homesteaders on the eleven towns who had made final proof on their claims, which proofs were suspended pending definite action by the Department.

Mayfield Bachelors.

What,s the matter with the bachelors of Mayfield township? Well, nothing much only that they are very prosperous and they,re rapidly getting fewer. The wave of prosperity hit them good end strong this year and the matrimonial bug has been busy among them with great results. Elling Ellingson, Hans Holmen and Charley Kjellen, three of the best of them, are bachelors no longer. John A. B. Anderson dont want to be a bachelor any longer then he can help. Leap year is almost here and several of the other single fellows are getting restless. There is still a number of choice bachelors left out there so hurry up girls, and make your choice early. They're going fast.

To the leap year maiden we wish to say that we can guarantee the Mayfield township brand of bachelor to be both presperous and steady. They reside on fine farms, are good farmers, and when a few more of them get married Mayfield township will be about the best place in northern Minnesota.

SEC. CORTELYOU IS HALED INTO COURT

MUST SHOW CAUSE IN ALLOTTING PANAMA BONDS TO CERTAIN BANKS.

ACTION MAY RESULT IN AN INJUNCTION

New Yorker, Evidently Denied Documents, Takes Matter Into Supreme Judiciary's Hands—Paper Valued at $21,450,000 Is Involved.

Washington, Dec. 19.—Justice Gould of the district supreme court Wednesday cited George B. Cortelyou, secretary of the treasury, to appear in court Friday, January 3, 1908, to show cause why he should not be enjoined from turning over or delivering the balance of the $21,450,000 of the Panama canal bonds to certain banks and persons to whom he has announced allotments.

New York Man in Case.

The citation issued by Justice Gould is based on a petition filed by George W. Austin of New York, who described himself as a tax payer and property owner in the United States, and who declares he made a proposal to purchase bonds of the advertised issue of the face value of $3,000,000. He avers he had agreed to pay at the rate of 103.375 and accrued interest per $100, and on notice of the acceptance of his subscription stands ready to deposit the amount with the assistant treasurer at New York.

Bid Is Ignored.

Mr. Austin informs the court that he has been advised through the public press that in direct violation of the statutes and in absolute disregard of the treasury department's circular No. 68, of the $25,000,000 of the bonds allotted only $1,000,000 were allotted to natural persons who were individual bidders for the same and who, in accordance with the statutes and said circular, were given an equal opportunity to subscribe therefor; the remaining $24,000,000 were allotted to divers national banks throughout the United States and only $3,550,000 of which were allotted to banks which bid a higher price than that bid by him.

Denies Political Yarns.

Secretary Cortelyou, in a statement given out here, pronounces unqualifiedly false the current rumors of undue political activity of his friends in forwarding a movement in his interest.

The secretary declares that neither he nor his friends have used their influence in behalf of any candidate for the presidency and that he has not been a candidate for anything but the confidence of the people. He adds that if he should hereafter decide to be a candidate for any office he will say so frankly.

Text of His Statement.

The statement follows:

"December 17, 1907.—I do not know that I am called upon to make a statement at this time, but in view of the various rumors in circulation as to the alleged political activity of friends of mine in my interest, I will say that I have not been a candidate for anything but the confidence of the people in the discharge of my duties as secretary of the treasury. I have not in person sought, nor have the friends whose names have been mentioned in this connection sought, to influence political movements in my interest; I have not nor have they used any influence, directly or indirectly, to secure political support for or against any candidate for the presidency, and accusations that such has been done are unqualifiedly false.

"In no office, in no one of three departments with which I have been connected, have I authorized or permitted officials or employes to attempt to influence any such movements, nor shall I do so."

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

County Option Slogan.

Crookston—The Minnesota Anti-saloon league started a big campaign in Northwestern Minnesota by getting in touch with the county organization of Polk county here and holding a rousing mass meeting, at which Supt. N. A. Palmer, Assistant Superintendent C. A. Youngdahl, Hon. T. S. Moen of Ada and several other speakers delivered addresses.

About forty delegates from all over Polk county attended a big meeting in the afternoon at which plans for the coming election were discussed and committees appointed to keep the work going along organized lines. The anti-saloon league believes that it will be able to elect in Northern Minnesota almost every legislator at the next election who will favor their league and work for county option.

Very little work was done in this section of the state at the last election by the anti-saloon league, and the work that is being started now may make considerable difference in the next set of legislators from Northern Minnesota.

Move to Disbar.

Minneapolis—The board of governors and the ethics committee of the state bar association placed the stamp of its unqualified condemnation upon the action of Francis B. Hart of Minneapolis in the attack made upon the supreme court he made in his letter to the chief justice and to the governor. Steps will be taken at once to secure, if possible, his disbarment and his expulsion from the state bar association. Mr. Hart in his letter asked that an investigation of the court be started and suggested impeachment.

A joint meeting of the board of governors and the ethics committee of the association was held at the office of How, Butler & Mitchell, at which the matter was discussed, after which separate meetings were held. Two resolutions were adopted at each of the meetings, which were subsequently approved by the other body at the joint session which followed.

Tries to Clean Wrong Barrel.

Two Harbors—By the accidental discharge of a shotgun Ben Woolen, seventeen years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Woolen, a brakeman on the Duluth & Iron Range railroad, received injuries which may prove fatal. The injured boy and two companions went out rabbit hunting Sunday about three miles north of town. Ben's gun was of the double-barreled kind and after discharging one barrel he started to wipe it out. In doing so he accidentally placed the ramrod into the barrel that contained a loaded shell and it exploded, driving a large number of shot into his abdomen. One of his companions came to town for assistance and four men with a stretcher were sent out from the Two Harbors hospital and brought the injured boy to town. At the hospital he was operated upon and the doctors cannot say as yet whether he will survive or not.

St. Paul Lid.

St. Paul—The enforcement of the law is a matter of duty which is not affected by public sentiment either for or against the law. This is the position taken by Attorney General E. T. Young with relation to the enforcement of the law requiring saloons to be closed at 11 p.m. and he so informed a committee of St. Paul citizens who called upon him. The committee consisted of B. L. Goodkind, L. S. Cushing, C. W. Gordon, Eli S. Warner, Albert W. Lindeke and Jacob Dittenhofer.

The members of the committee informed Mr. Young that the sentiment in St. Paul is against the 11 o'clock closing. They believe that closing the saloons at midnight, as required by the city ordinance, is favored by a large majority of the citizens and would meet all requirements of good morals and be better from a business standpoint.

Tax Commission Report.

St. Paul—The Minnesota tax commission handed its first annual report to Governor Johnson. Its most important feature is a significant analysis of the present tax system and the revenues of the state. As another report will be made before the legislature meets, there are no recommendations for new legislation at this time.

The report finds that for the current year property in Minnesota will pay an average tax of $8.37 on $1,000 of actual value, which it says cannot be considered excessive, but "under the existing conditions of the assessment and levy of taxes it is unequally distributed, not only upon individuals, but upon communities as well."

NEWS NOTES.

Preston—The brewery in this place is to be transformed into a packing house and the work of remodeling is already under way. The brewery has been in operation for nearly forty years and has had many owners.

Hamline—Student teachers have now been installed in the model school conducted by the University of Minnesota at 125 State street, twelve seniors being picked for the work. All the teachers are girls.

Stillwater—Fire in the village of Oak Park did damage of over $10,000. The general store of Alex C. Robertson was entirely destroyed. The fine dwelling of James Sinclair was burned.

Brainerd—The postoffice at Hubert, Minn., twelve miles north of Brainerd, was robbed of between $30 and $50 in stamps of different denominations.

THAT SWEET CHILD.

"You'll be too old to sit on people's knees soon, Dolly."

"Oh, no, I won't, auntie! I'm not half as old as sister and she sits on Mr. Wilson's knee. I'm never going to be too old for that sort of thing!"

BLACK, ITCHING SPOTS ON FACE.

Physician Called It Eczema in Worst Form—Patient Despaired of Cure—Cuticura Remedies Cured Her.

"About four years ago I was afflicted with black splotches all over my face and a few covering my body, which produced a severe itching irritation, and which caused me a great deal of suffering, to such an extent that I was forced to call in two of the leading physicians of ———. After a thorough examination of the dreaded complaint they announced it to be skin eczema in the worst form. Their treatment did me no good. Finally I became despondent and decided to discontinue their services. My husband purchased a single set of the Cuticura Remedies, which entirely stopped the breaking out. I continued the use of the Cuticura Remedies for six months, and after that ever splotch was entirely gone. I have not felt a symptom of the eczema since, which was three years ago. Mrs. Lizzie E. Sledge, 540 Jones Ave., Selma, Ala., Oct. 28, 1905."

Insult Added to Injury.

An organ-grinder had been playing before the house of an irascible old gentleman, who furiously and amidst wild gesticulations ordered him to move on. The Italian stolidly stood his ground and played on, and at last was arrested for causing a disturbance. At the court the magistrate asked him why he did not leave when he was requested. "Me no understan' mooch Inglese," was the reply. "Well, but you must have understood by his motions that he wanted you to go," said the magistrate. "I tink he come to dance," was the rejoinder.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

SWEET CHRISTMAS DREAMS

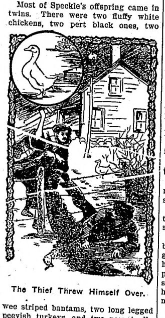
Simple Simon's Part in a Christmas Dinner

IF ANY of old Speckle's queerly assorted brood were stepchildren or only adopted she never betrayed it by even so much as an upward roll of her eye. Truth to tell, old Speckle knew as well as any one that her inclination "to set" had come at a slack egg season but the maternal instincts thrilled her, and with a touching trust in human providence she submissively turned every egg in her nest each day, and sat a week longer than any other hen would have thought compatible with her dignity.

Most of Speckle's offspring came in twins. There were two fluffy white chickens, two pert black ones, two wee striped bantams, two long legged peevish turkeys, and two perpetually hungry ducks. But when it came to the twin goslings there was only one of them. Of course, the different twins associated together and told each other their trials and joys, their fears and hopes; but the gosling was the yellow sheep of the family. He knew no troubles but his own, he wanted little, and when he found a happy hunting ground of bugs he had it all to himself. He had also a little habit of wabbling in while two chickens fought over a bug, quietly gobbling up the insect and calmly turning his back without even so much as a reminder that there no longer existed a cause for quarrelling. Others might have sharp bills to dig and fight, but he had a broad one to grasp and retain. In his independent, happy-go-lucky way he waddled through the world, making strange friends, and having feather-breadth escapes known only to himself and the Martin family.



The Thief Threw Himself Over.

May Day dawned warm and sunny. Worms had fairly wriggled themselves into the goslings mouth that morning, and he felt more than content as he squatted in the sun on the back kitchen step. Suddenly, in turning his head to the left, he spied a tempting red object peeping up from a great, round, whitish looking surface. The gosling made a dash, and splash! he went under the shining white surface. He had that red bit, however, and as he swallowed it he instinctively struck out with his legs. What a delightful sensation the gosling had then. He seemed born for paddling, and as he paddled he kept bobbing his head down into the white substance and fetching up the most appetizing things. Evidently the world had been made for nothing except gobbling and paddling.

By and by he began to feel tired. He determined to jump out on the steps again, but strange to say all his jumps turned to paddles. He couldn't seem to get over a hard, brown object next to the steps. He decided to try no more but just to sit still, so he doubled his short legs up under him and floated. After a while he felt himself sinking, but he paddled twice or thrice and got up again. Still it was pleasanter to drift, so he rested once more. Lower and lower he sank. Strange odors floated up around him. Drowsiness besieged him. Not much except his head was now above surface, but somehow, as he rested his bill on that cool substance the gosling didn't care. Just then Mary Ann came out with a pan of peelings and dashed them in.

"Peep! peep!" murmured the gosling, bobbing up and down.

"La!" ejaculated Mary Ann, and ran for the shovel.

When she had shoveled him out on the grass she finished her exclamation.

"La! aint that fool goose got no more sense that to go swimmin' in the slop bucket!"

"Peep!" replied the gosling, placidly turning over on the grass in the warm sun with a deliciously filled feeling.

Lazily the summer months drifted by. One day and another "that fool goose," as every one came to designate him, figured continually before the public eye. So entirely devoid of sense did his escapades seem that the hired man named him "Simple Simon," for short.

With the coming of the snappy December days people began to think of Christmas feasts, and the farmers to look over their poultry with an eye to the markets. One frosty day when Mrs. Martin's kitchen breathed spicy odors her husband slouched in.

"I've just been looking over the poultry," he drawled. "Turkeys are awful scarce this year and prices big. I 'low mebbe we'd better sell all ourn and eat Simon for our Christmas dinner. One goose ain't any good and he eats more than any hog on the place."

"'Pears like Simon was just made to die young, anyhow," agreed Mary. "La! the times I've reskewed him!"

Fully a month before Christmas city people began to send out to engage one or two of Farmer Martin's well known turkeys. A week before the day Mary Ann shut up all the salable turkeys and Simon in a couple of large carriage crates which served as coops. They must have the choicest food and be ready to deliver into the hands of the many stiff-backed coachmen who came for them daily. The gobblers spread their fine young tails and grew red with indignation; but Simon took it all as philosophically as was his wont, contentedly eating more than was his share of food and on warm days wallowing in the basin of drinking water.

Soon all but two of the turkeys were carried away. One of the two, a handsome young gobbler, Col. Robertson and his grandson would call for on Thursday. Proudly and stiffly the young turkey strutted up and down the now roomy cage, and gobbled his protest from morning till night at the top of his voice. Simon lay at his ease in the basin and blinked at his irate companion as if the air around him did not fairly reek with garlic. Whenever the turkey came too near in his swollen pride it was only necessary for Simon to open his mouth and extend his tongue.

At last the Colonel came for his turkey and bore him away, still protesting volubly. Only Simon and an undersized hen turkey remained.

"It ain't much of a turkey, that's a fact,' acknowledged Farmer Martin as he and Mary Ann passed the pen Friday evening.

"She ain't worth much. Wouldn't you ruther I'd kill her than Simon tomorrow?" tentatively queried Mary Ann, with her eyes on Simon, who ran to the bars to see if more food was forthcoming.

"Goose is good enough for me, and Simon ain't no money value. Mebbe that turkey will fatten up 'gainst spring and make a right respectable mother hen," replied Farmer Martin.

"She's not likely to unless she makes a better fight for her victuals," Mary Ann returned. "Pears like Simon gets most of 'em in spite of all I can do. He's sich a fool he don't know when he's got enough. Most seems a pity to kill such a silly critter."

That night Mary Ann had everything in readiness for the morrow, planning to rise early and prepare Simon before breakfast, for even Mary acknowledged that a goose is hard to dress.

About four o'clock in the morning she was aroused by an unearthly quacking and hissing. Hastily throwing a quilt around her shoulders and plunging into her shoes, she rushed to the chicken yard. A man fled toward the fence with a bloody turkey in one hand.

"Drop that, drop that!" yelled Mary Ann, hurling the cloths stick at him and bearing down upon him at full speed as he neared the barbed wire fence.

The thief threw himself over, but his trousers and a turkey wing caught on a barb. Gaunt Mary Ann, in her motley quilt, loomed up before him, armed with a chicken trough. With a desperate wrench he freed himself, but he lost his prize.

Mary Ann grabbed up the turkey. Its head had been wrung off. She ran frantically to the coop. It had been overturned.

"He's stole Simon, he's stole Simon!" wailed Mary Ann as Farmer Martin appeared, hitching up his trousers.

Suddenly a familiar sound smote her ear. Glancing up, she caught a glimpse of Simon quacking merrily and waddling rapidly through the rusty weeds in the direction of the corn pen.

"Well, I reckon we'd better have turkey for Christmas after all. Ain't no use of losin' two fowls," said Farmer Martin, after relieving his feelings.

"La!" muttered Mary Ann, as she watched Simon blissfully quacking and gobbling in the middle of the corn pen. "I do believe Simon ain't such a fool after all."—N. Y. Herald.

Congressman Steenerson has won another victory for the settlers on the eleven towns in the matter of the term of residence required before they can make their final proof. It is not such an easy matter to induce the Secretary of the Interior to reverse his rulings, but that is precisewhat Mr Steenerson has done. Somehow things hard to accomplish seem easy for our big congressman.

The tarriff seeme to be one of the most troublesome questions that congress has to contend with. Protection is a fine thing for an infant industry but is not at all necessary after the industry gets strong enough to try and boss the people who protected it. Take the lumder industry for instance. Show us the consumer who is not aching to see a sharp exe used on the lumber tariff. A revision of many items in the present tariff schedule will be insisted on by the people, and they dont want congrets to be very slow about it either.

Lively Cheese.

"The taste in cheese has grown more delicate on the continent," said a Paris chef. "A cream cheese raw is now our favorite, whereas in the past we demanded cooked cheeses of the greatest harshness and strength. Why"—

The chef laughed.

"Why," he said, "when I was at the Petit Riche many years ago a remarkable thing happened, a thing that indicates the sort of cheeses that in the past were eaten. A patron seated at a corner table in the Petit Riche called suddenly to the waiter:

"'Baptiste, take away this cheese!'

"Baptiste approached.

"'Pardon me, sir,' he said in his polite way, 'but can I fetch you something else?'

"The patron made a gesture of impatience.

"'Take this away first, hang it!' he exclaimed.

"'Yes, sir; very good, sir,' said Baptiste. 'We have some fine Gorgonzola or perhaps the Gruyere'—

"'Great Scott!' the other interrupted. 'If you don't take this stuff away at once I'll send for the police.'

"'I am vey sorry, sir,' said Baptiste. 'Is there anything wrong with it?'

"'Wrong!' shouted the guest. 'Why, it's eating all my bread!'"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The American Author.

The chief thing in the average American novel is the amazing vitality of the author. He writes always at the top of his voice, His strenuousness is unceasing. The reader can almost see the swollen veins on his forehead, the tight drawn mouth and flashing eye. It is do it or die. And he never knows where to stop. With his feverish anxiety to make points he does not seem to realize when he has achieved his purpose and frequently fizzles out ineffectively. He has ideas. He has vast quantities of material. He has a command of language, a fatal fluency that frequently leads to his downfall, for he lacks a sense of values. He lacks self restraint. He is full of tricks and artfulness, but he is not an artist.—London Saturday Review.

Well Preserved.

"I told Miss Knox today," said he, "that the only word that properly described you was 'peach.'"

"Indeed?" replied Miss Bute. "I suppose she said something 'real nice,' as usual?"

"Well, she said: 'I suppose that is the proper word. At any rate, she looks well preserved.'"—Philadelphia Press.

$8.50 PUNCTURE-PROOF TIRES ONLY $4.80 PER PAIR

Regular Price $8.50 per pair. To Introduce We Will Sell You a Sample Pair for Only $4.80
NAILS, TACKS OR GLASS WON'T LET OUT THE AIR
(CASH WITH ORDER $4.55)

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES.

Result of 15 years experience in tire making. No danger from THORNS, CACTUS, PINS, NAILS, TACKS or GLASS. Serious punctures, like intentional knife cuts, can be vulcanized like any other tire.

Two Hundred Thousand pairs now in actual use. Over Seventy-five Thousand pairs sold last year.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road thus overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump and two Sampson metal puncture closers on full paid orders (these metal puncture closers to be used in case of intentional knife cuts or heavy gashes). Tires to be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination.

We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. Ask your Postmaster, Banker, Express or Freight Agent or the Editor of this paper about us. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a small trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

COASTER-BRAKES, built-up-wheels, saddles, pedals, parts and repairs, and everything in the bicycle line are sold by us at half the usual prices charged by dealers and repair men. Write for our big SUNDRY catalogue.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

Bad Fire at Gresnbush.

Yesterday morning fire completely destroyed two saloons, one bank building, one hardwate store, one general store and a vacant building at Greenbush, in Roseau county. The total loss is estimated at oaer $50,000 partially covered by insurance.

The fire started in Kukowski's general store and soon destroyed the entire Kukowski's block, which was occupied by the store and Andrew Larsen's saloon. Then the fire crossed the street to the building of the State Bank of Greenbush. The bank building, Sloninski & Hazel's saloon and Thompson's hardware store were also wiped out by the blaze. Several parties occupying rooms in the different buildings lost practically all their personal property and on this the insurance was very light.

A Very Dirty Collar.

Sue Moon, a Chinaman, was brought before the Melbourne magistrates the other day charged with having worked after 2 o'clock on a Saturday afternoon, contrary to the provisions of the local factories act. He pleaded that he had washed only one collar after the statutory closing time.

"What! Only one collar from 2 to 8 o'clock?" exclaimed the chairman.

"Him welly dirty collar," rejoined Sue Moon.

This defense was deemed too thin, and Sue was fined $2.50. After paying he remarked, "Fackly act make Chinaman welly lazy fellow."

Offers Prize For Name.

Olaf Tande wants a suitable name for his farm and has taken the novel plan of inaugurating a prize contest in order to get a list of good names to select from. The prise will be ten pounds of choice butter from the Plummer creamery and the contest is confined to actual residents of the village of Plummer. Each and every resident of the village may send in names which they deem suitable and they may send in any number of names. They must send these to Hans Haaven, of Garnes, who has been selected by Mr. Tande as the custodian of the names suggested and who will keep them secret from Mr. Tande until the contest is closed. This plan will do away with any chance of Mr. Tande,s favoring any one person over another as the list of names will be submitted to him for his choice while the names of the contestants will be kept secret from him until he has made the selection which he thinks most appropriate as a name for his farm. During the past couple of years Mr. Tande has been making extensive improvements on his place and now has one of the best equipped farms in eastern Red Lake county. He has gone extensively into dairying with excellent results and intenbs to go farther into that branch of farming. He aims to have the best breeds of all kinds of stock, from the industrious hen upward, and is fixing his place to take the best of care of everything. It is a splended idea to have a suitable name for a fine farm. It gives the place an individuality of its own and tends to show that the owner takes pride in having things right. This being the case it follows that a suitable name actually adds to the value of the premises. Other farmers should follow Mr. Tande's example and find suitable names for their farms, even if they do not take his unique plan of securing the same.

In the meantime, if you are a resident of the village of Plummer, think up some good names for farms and send them to Hans Haaven, Garnes, Minn. You may succeed in landing the reward of ten pounbs of fancy butter, which represents an actual value of about $3.00. The PIONEER will give due notice before this contest closes.

Friendly Monkeys.

I have read somewhere a statement that the anthropoid apes prefer our company to that of their fellow monkeys of lower degree, and I saw it proved once in Calcutta, says a writer in Ornithological and Other Oddities. The late W. Rutledge, for many years the leading animal dealer there and a mine of natural history information, had a young one in his yard, and at my request opened its cage one day to let it choose its society, when, quite disregarding the other monkeys, it immediately came over to him and climbed into his lap.

A fair sized female we had at the Calcutta zoo also was a most affectionate creature. When I paid a visit to her she would always put her arm affectionately around my neck and while being caressed and played with would drop any food offered by other visitors.

But I think it was on my very first introduction to the orang that the hidden humanity of the creature most impressed me. This was many years ago, when Abraham Bartlett was at the London zoo. He gave me a private interview with a little orang which had just arrived. The first thing the little imp did was to climb on my knee, take off my hat and put it on his own head, after which it proceeded gravely to pinch one of the superintendent's eyelids. In short, it examined us with a scientific curiosity which in a lower animal was decidedly impressive. This little man of the woods could not have chosen a more striking way of claiming kinship so often denied.

The Cussedness of a Sail.

Sometimes a sail is only playful, and willful at the worst, and after a slight show of resistance will succumb to your arts, but at times they get malignant and cruel. They will fight you fiercely, hitting back viciously, spitefully battling for every inch, taking most treacherous advantage of any relapse of alertness or looseness of clutch. When a canvas has got that devil in it, look out for yourself. That is when it fights to kill. That is when it hurls men off yard and boom to their death. At times you can only conquer after a steady and well generaled fight. At other times a bit of trickery will succeed. I have cursed a sail and turned away pretendingly beaten, when, thrown for a moment off guard by my apparent carelessness, it has opened its defense. A tiger spring, a turn of rope, and the victory is won. But I tell you it makes a man of you, a fight to the finish with a sail. Every nerve tingling, every vein flushed with blood, you take the last turn, and with a "Hang you; you're fast now," go aft and report all snug.—T. F. Day in Outing Magazine.

OLD MEMPHIS BANK CLOSED BY COURT

OFFICERS OF SAVINGS INSTITUTION OBTAIN RECEIVER.

ITS DEPOSIT $1,500,000

President of Clearing House Says He Feels Sure All Depositors Will Be Paid in Full.

Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 25.—"This bank is closed by order of the chancery court. E. L. McHenry has been appointed receiver."

The above notice was posted on the doors of the Memphis Savings bank, one of the oldest institutions in the city, at opening time Tuesday. It was understood that the officers went before Chancellor Heiskell and applied for a receiver. No reason for the suspension was given out immediately.

Deposits of $1,500,000.

G. W. McRae, a well-known local capitalist, is president, and E. L. Menager, cashier. The bank carries deposits of over a million and a half dollars. Several weeks ago a statement was published that the bank had been heavily loaded with paper of a certain concern upon which it could not realize. This set many rumors afloat, and the bank inserted the following explanation:

Statement by Officers.

"A misapprehension seems to exist in regard to a supposed loss made by this bank. The facts are that an unpaid maturity was immediately made good to the bank by certain of its officers and directors, and the bank sustained no loss whatever. The claim was bought at its face value by said officers and directors and their property. Whatever is realized will belong to them."

President S. F. Read, of the Memphis Clearing House association, said Tuesday that the suspension of the Memphis Savings' bank would not affect any other institution in the city. Mr. Read said he felt certain that all depositors in the bank would be paid in full.

Condition Said to Be Good.

A statement of the condition of the suspended bank was made public on December 11, and is as follows: Resources, loans and discounts, $1,013,056; overdrafts secured, $28,697; stocks and bonds, $829,370; real estate, $17,218; cash and sight exchange, $236,982. Liabilities: Capital stock, $294,100; surplus and undivided profits, $72,654; bills payable, $250,000; cashiers' checks, $5,537; deposits, $1,531,949.

Later a statement was issued by the directors announcing that the institution was solvent and that creditors would not lose a cent. The statement adds that because of the financial stringency it was deemed wise to close the bank, ask for a receiver, and liquidate its affairs.

OKLAHOMA'S FIRST LYNCHING.

Negro Murderer Hanged by a Mob in Henriette.

Muskogee, Okla., Dec. 25.—Riddled with bullets, the body of James Garden, a negro, is dangling from a telegraph pole in Henriette, Okla., a coal mining town 30 miles southwest of here, as the result of the first lynching in the new state. Garden at noon Tuesday shot and killed Albert Bates, a white man, because Bates, who is a liveryman, refused to rent him a rig.

Garden was lodged in jail and Tuesday night a mob of 100 men battered down the doors of the jail and in spite of the efforts of the officers secured Garden and hung him to a near-by pole. They then riddled the body with bullets. All the negroes in Henriette are terrorized and more than 100 came from there to Muskogee.

PRAIRIE FIRES NEAR BOULDER.

Part of the Colorado Town Is in Great Danger.

Boulder, Col., Dec. 25.—Prairie fires are burning in several places in the outskirts of this city and the surrounding country and are spreading rapidly before a high wind. Already 12 buildings in Boulder have been burned. Many volunteers are fighting the flames but are hampered in their efforts by lack of water.

Two hundred men will be affected and President William Cotter, of the Pere Marquette, says that he wishes to make the transfer by January 1. All of the central offices of the company will be located in Detroit.

John Mitchell Still Weak.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 25.—The condition of John Mitchell, president of the United Mine Workers of America, is improving, but he is still weak and not able to leave his room. It is his wish to go to Excelsior Springs, Mo., as soon as he is able to travel, possibly the latter part of this week or the first of next.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

STATE BANKS.

Minneapolis—The strength and soundness of the Minnesota state banks as well as the confidence of the people in the banks is shown by a comparative statement just issued by Public Examiner Anton Schaefer. The statement shows the conditions of the banks last year as shown by their reports of Nov. 12, 1906, and their condition on Dec. 3, the date of the last call this year.

The statement shows that there was a falling off in the total of the resources and liabilities of about $3,000,000 as compared with last year, notwithstanding that during the time between the two reports the Security Bank of Minneapolis, with a total of resources and liabilities of over $14,000,000 had been converted into a national bank. So that instead of the apparent decrease of $3,000,000 there has been a net gain of about $11,000,000.

Between the dates of the two reports there was an increase of 52 state banks, and a comparison of the statements of those banks included in the 1906 statement with their conditions is commented on by Mr. Schaefer as follows:

"Taking only the 450 state banks included in both the call of Dec. 3, 1907, and that of Nov. 12, 1906, which makes a just and fair basis of comparison of true condition, there is a net increase, in round numbers, of $1,800,000 in cash on hand, $2,000,000 in loans and discounts, and $3,500,000 in time certificates of deposit, with no shrinkage whatever in any principal item of banking resources.

Game Records.

St. Paul—Based on the number of deer and moose known to have been killed during the open season, Carlos Avery, executive agent of the state game and fish commission, estimates that nearly 5,000 deer and perhaps 150 moose were killed in this state. The figures available are those of the number shipped into the several counties. They show that 2,084 deer and 82 moose were shipped by the hunters, and it is estimated that at least as many were killed by the residents of the counties in which the big game abound and were not shipped.

Hennepin county heads the list of the number shipped in with 399, St. Louis county is second with 355, and Ramsey comes next with 205 deer. St. Louis county is credited with 21 moose, Hennepin with 12, and Ramsey with 4; Stearns received 6 moose, and Lake, McLeod and Traverse each got four.

The commission issued during the season fifty-four non-resident game licenses and the records show that forty-five deer and four moose were shipped out of the state.

Burns to Death.

St. Cloud—At 2 o'clock in the morning at Melrose, north of this city, Katherine Krick, twenty years old, lost her life in a burning house. While attempting to escape from the building the girl became suffocated and fell into the flames. Her body was recovered twenty minutes later, but it was charred and unrecognizable. John Krick, the girl's father, was badly burned, but will recover.

The fire was discovered at 2 o'clock. The entire family, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Krick and three children, were sleeping on the second floor, when Mr. Krick was awakened by smoke. Upon going down stairs he found the dining room in flames. He hurriedly called the family and all escaped but the girl, who had gone back to her room to save some trinkets. When she reached the bottom of the stairs she was suffocated and fell. The flames surrounded her and the firemen could not locate her.

Apples Are Imaginary.

Mankato—John Rose, a stranger from Ohio, was arrested on the charge of defrauding housekeepers by pretending to sell apples that he did not possess. He canvassed from house to house, claiming to have a carload of apples at one of the depots, and exhibited beautiful large red ones as samples. The apples were to be sold at $2.50 a barrel, and he collected 50 cents down.

His scheme failed when one housewife, more cautious than the rest, telephoned to the depots and found that there were no apples there.

Free Lunch Legal.

St. Paul—In a decision rendered by Hugo O. Hanft, judge of the municipal court, he holds the anti-free lunch ordinance prohibits the giving away or selling below market price of any food in places where liquor is sold.

Sam H. Stamm was arrested for violating the ordinance and the decision finds him not guilty, as the ordinance under which he was arrested is invalid.

THE NEW-BORN YEAR.

YESTERNIGHT the year lay dying;
By his lowly couch we met,
Bringing ivy-leaves, and trying,
Some with smiles and some with sighing
To remember—or forget.

Now the nursling year is waking,
And we gaze into his eyes.
Heedless of his sire's forsaking,
In his cradle he is taking
Gifts from earth and sea and skies.

Dawn of gold and sunset gleaming,
April eve and Junetide morn
Things of truth and not of seeming,
These have glorified his dreaming,
He the heir, the newly born.

In his tiny grasp he treasures
Riches that may soon be ours—
Sunlight gold in brimming measures,
Meadow fragrances and pleasures,
Honeyed wine distilled of flowers.

Soon the child will frolic lightly
O'er his father's grass-green grave;
Day shall be his playmate brightly,
And his sleep be sweetened nightly
By the songs of wind and wave.

New Year Irresolutions

By HELEN ROWLAND

The Widow Discusses Them With the Bachelor.

"ISN'T it hard, said the widow, glancing ruefully at the holly-wreathed clock on the mantel-piece, to know where to begin reforming yourself?"

"Great heavens!" exclaimed the bachelor, "you are not going to do anything like that, are you?"

The widow pointed solemnly to the hands of the clock, which indicated 11:30, and then to the calendar, on which hung one fluttering leaf marked December 31.

"It is time," she sighed, "to begin mental house-cleaning; to sweep out our collection of last year's follies and dust off our petty sins and fling away our old vices and—"

"That's the trouble!" broke in the bachelor. "It's so hard to know just what to throw away and what to keep. Making New Year's resolutions is like doing the spring housecleaning or clearing out a drawer full of old letters and sentimental rubbish. You know that there are lots of things you ought to get rid of, and that are just in the way, and that you would be better off without, but the minute you make up your mind to part with anything, even a tiny, insignificant vice, it suddenly becomes so dear and attractive that you repent and begin to take a new interest in it. The only time I ever had to be taken home in a cab was the day after I promised to sign the pledge," and the bachelor sighed reminiscently.

"And the only time I ever overdrew my bank account," declared the widow, "was the day after I had resolved to economize. I suppose," she added pensively, "that the best way to begin would be to pick out the worst vice and discard that."

"And that will leave heaps of room for the others and for a lot of new little sins, beside, won't it?" agreed the bachelor cheerfully. "Well," he added philosophically, "I'll give up murdering."

"What!" the widow started.

"Don't you want me to?" asked the bachelor plaintively, rubbing his bald spot. "Or perhaps I might resolve not to commit highway robbery any more or to stop forging or—"

"All of which is so easy!" broke in the widow sarcastically.

"There'd be some glory and some reason in giving up a big vice;" sighed the bachelor, "if a fellow had one. But the trouble is that most of us men haven't any big criminal tendencies, merely a heap of little follies and weaknesses that there isn't any particular virtue in sacrificing or any particular harm in keeping."

"And which you always do keep, in spite of all your New Year's vows," remarked the widow ironically.

"Huh!" The bachelor laughed cynically. "It's our New Year's vows that help us to keep 'em. The very fact that a fellow has sworn to forego anything whether it's a habit or a girl, makes it more attractive. I've thrown away a whole box of cigars with the finest intentions in the world and then gotten up in the middle of the night to fish the pieces out of the waste basket. And that midnight smoke was the sweetest I ever had. It was sweeter than the apples I stole when I was a kid and the kisses I stole when—"

"If you came here to dilate on the joys of sin, Mr. Travers," began the widow coldly.

"And," proceeded the bachelor. "I've made up my mind to stop flirting with a girl, because I found out that she was beginning to—to—"

"I understand," interrupted the widow sympathetically.

"And, by Jove!" finished the bachelor, "I had to restrain myself to keep from going back and proposing to her!"

"How lucky you did!" commented the widow witheringly.

"But I wouldn't have," explained the bachelor ruefully, "if the gorl had restrained herself."

"Nevertheless," repeated the widow. "It was lucky—for the girl."

"Which girl?" asked the bachelor. "The girl I broke off with or the girl that came afterward?"

"I suppose," mused the widow ignoring the levity and leaning over to arrange a bunch of violets at her belt, "that is why it is so difficult for a man to keep a promise or a vow—even a marriage vow."

"Oh, I don't know." The bachelor leaned back and regarded the widow's coronet braid through the smoke of his cigar. "It isn't the marriage vows that are so difficult to keep. It's the fool vows a man makes before marriage and the fool promises he makes afterward that he stumbles over and falls down on. The marriage vows are so big and vague that you can get all around them without actually breaking them, but if they should interpolate concrete questions into the service such as, 'Do you, William, promise not to growl at the coffee—'

"Or, 'Do you, Mary, promise never to put a daub of powder on your nose again?'" broke in the widow.

"Nor to look twice at your pretty stenographer," continued the bachelor.

"Nor to lie about your age, or your foot or your waist measure."

"Nor to juggle with the truth whenever you stay out after half-past ten."

"Nor to listen to things that—that anybody—except your husband may say to you in the conservatory—oh, I see how it feels!" finished the widow with a sympathetic little shudder.

"And yet," reflected the bachelor, "a woman is always exacting vows and promises from the man she loves, always putting up bars—for him to jump over; when if she would only leave him alone he would be perfectly contented to stay within bounds and graze in his own pasture. A man hates being pinned down; but a woman doesn't want anything around that she can't pin down, from her belt and her theories to her hat and her husband."

"Well," protested the widow studying the toe of her slipper, "it is a satisfaction to know you've got your husband fastened on straight by his promises and held in place by his own vows and that he loves you enough to—"

"Usually," interrupted the bachelor, "a man loves you in inverse ratio to his protestations. The lover who promises all things without reserve is too often like the fellow who doesn't question the hotel bill nor ask the price of the wine, because he doesn't intend to pay it anyway. The fellow who is prodigal with his vows and promises and poetry is generally the one to whom such things mean nothing and, being of no value, can be flung about generously to every girl he meets. The firm with the biggest front office is likely to be the one with the smallest deposit in the safe. The man who swears off loudest on New Year's is usually the one they have to carry home the morning after. And the chap who promises a girl a life of roses is the one who will let her pick all the thorns off for herself."

"Perhaps," sighed the widow, chewing the stem of a violet thoughtfully, "the best way to cure a man of a taste for anything, after all, is to let him have too much of it instead of making him swear off. If you want him to hate the smell of a pipe insist on his smoking all the time. If you want him to sign the temperance pledge, serve him wine with every course. If you want him to hate a woman, invite her to meet him every time he calls, and tell him how 'suitable' she would be."

"And if you want him to love you," finished the bachelor, "don't ask him to swear it, but tell him that he really ought not to. The best way to manage a donkey—human or otherwise—is to turn his head in the wrong direction and he'll back in the right one."

"Then," said the widow decisively, we ought to begin the New Year by making some irresolutions."

"Some—what?"

"Vows that we won't stop doing the things we ought not to do," explained the widow.

"All right," agreed the bachelor thoughtfully, "I'll make an irresolution to go on making love to you as much as I like."

"You mean, as much as I like, Mr. Travers," corrected the widow severely.

"How much do you like?" asked the bachelor, leaning over to look into the widow's eyes.

The widow kicked the corner of the rug tentatively.

"I like—all but the proposing," she said slowly. "You really ought to stop that—"

"I'm going to stop it—to-night."

The widow looked up in alarm.

"Oh, you don't have to commence keeping your resolutions until tomorrow morning," she said quickly.

"And are you going to stop refusing me—to-night," continued the bachelor firmly.

The widow studied the corner of the rug with great concern.

"And," went on the bachelor, taking something from his pocket and toying with it thoughtfully, "you are going to put on this ring"—he leaned over, caught the widow's hand and slipped the glittering thing on her third finger. "Now," he began, "you are going to say that you will—"

The widow sprang up suddenly.

"Oh, don't, don't, don't!" she cried. "In a moment we'll me making promises!"

"We don't need to," said the bachelor, leaning back nonchalantly, "we can begin by making—arrangements. Would you prefer to live in town or at Tuxedo? And do you think Europe or Bermuda the best place for the—"

"Bermuda, by all means," broke in the widow, "and I wish you'd have that hideous portico taken off your town house, Billy, and—" But the rest of her words were smothered in the bachelor's coat lapel—and something else.

"Then you do mean to marry me, after all!" cried the bachelor triumphantly.

The widow gasped for breath and patted her hair anxiously.

"I—I meant to marry you all the time!" she cried, "but I never thought you were really in earnest and—"

"Methinks," quoted the bachelor happily, "'that neither of us did protest too much.' We haven't made any promises, you know."

"Not one," rejoined the widow promptly, "as to my flirting."

"Nor as to my clubs."

"Nor as to my relatives."

"Nor my cigars."

"And we won't make any vows," cried the widow, "except marriage vows."

"And New Year's irresolutions," added the bachelor.

"Listen!" cried the widow softly, with her fingers on her lips.

A peal of a thousand silver bells rang out on the midnight air.

"The chimes!" exclaimed the widow. "They're full of promises."

"I thought it sounded like a wedding bell," said the bachelor, disappointedly.

"Maybe," said the widow, 'it was only Love—ringing off."—Los Angeles Times.

New Year's Calls.

The custom of visiting and sending presents and cards on New Year's day is recorded almost as far back as history goes. The practice of using visiting cards can be traced back for thousands of years by the Chinese. Their New Year's visiting cards are curiosities. Each one sets forth not only the name, but all the titles of its owner and, as all Chinamen who have any social position at all have about a dozen, it makes the list quite appalling. These cards are made of silk or else of fine paper backed with silk and are so large that they have to be rolled up to be carried conveniently They are, indeed, so valuable that they are returned to their owners.

ONE CAUSE FOR SATISFACTION.

Drummer Found Something Good Even in Railroad Accident.

A state senator of New York says he was riding in the smoking car on a little one-track road in the northern part of the state two weeks ago, and in the seat in front of him sat a jewelry drummer. He was one of those wide-awake, never-let-anyone-get-the-better-of-him style of men. Presently the train stopped to take water and the conductor neglected to send back a flagman. A limited express, running at the rate of ten miles an hour, came along and bumped the rear end of the first train. The drummer was lifted from his seat and pitched, head first, against the seat ahead. His silk hat was jammed clear down over his ears. He picked himself up and settled back in his seat. No bones had been broken. Then he pulled off his hat, drew a long breath and, straightening up, said: "Hully gee! Well, they didn't get by us, anyway!"

THOUGHT CHILD WOULD DIE.

Whole Body Covered with Cuban Itch —Cuticura Remedies Cured at Cost of Seventy-Five Cents.

"My little boy, when only an infant of three months, caught the Cuban Itch. Sores broke out from his head to the bottom of his feet. He would itch and claw himself and cry all the time. He could not sleep day or night, and a light dress is all he could wear. I called one of our best doctors to treat him, but he seemed to get worse. He suffered so terribly that my husband said he believed he would have to die. I had almost given up hope when a lady friend told me to try the Cuticura Remedies. I used the Cuticura Soap and applied the Cuticura Ointment and he at once fell into a sleep, and he slept with ease for the first time since two months. After three applications the sores began to dry up, and in just two weeks from the day I commenced to use the Cuticura Remedies my baby was entirely well. The treatment only cost 75c, and I would have gladly paid $100 if I could not have got it cheaper. I feel safe in saying that the Cuticura Remedies saved his life. He is now a boy of five years. Mrs. Zana Miller, Union City, R. F. D. No. 1, Branch Co., Mich., May 17, 1906."

NOT WHAT HE MEANT.

"I am delighted to see you! It seems good to see old faces again."

"You mean thing."

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. ### A Double Meaning.

"Ah!' sighed the lovelorn youth, "I wish you would give me that ring on your finger as a reminder of my love for you—because it has no ending."

"No," replied the fair maid, "I shall keep on wearing it as a reminder of my love for you—it has no beginning."

GREAT SCHEME.

"Are you still troubled by your neighbor's chickens?" asked one man of another.

"Not a bit," was the answer. "They are kept shut up now."

"How did you manage it?"

"Why, every night I put a lot of eggs in the grass very carefully, and every morning, when my neighbor was looking, I went out and brought them in."

Not for That Kind of Fire.

The Edmonton firemen are complaining about people sending in alarms from the new boxes by trying to post letters in them. A young fellow was noticed the other day gazing lovingly at a letter as he stood on the street corner. After fondling it for a moment, he went up to a fire alarm box and tried to get it inside. A passer-by, who had been watching him, however, intervened: "I know your heart's on fire," he observed, "but I think you had better use the box at the next corner."

PLUMMER PIONEER.

CHAS. W. LATTA,
Publisher and Manager.

Subscription price, $1.50 per year
If paid in advance, $1.00.

Entered at the Post-office in Plummer, Minn. as Second Class Mail Matter.

The PIONEER wishes you a happy and prosperous New Year.

On Friday of last week Congressman Steenerson introduced his bill in congress for the drainage of the Red Lake reservation lands. The bill asks gor an appropriation of $1,100,000 for drainage purposes, and directs the Secretary of the Interior to provide for the repayment on the instalment plan by the settlers of the money expended for this work. It is a measure of great importance to this portion of the country and congressman Steenerson will do his best to have early and favorable action taken on it.

Tis said that experience is the best teacher. If our readers have remembered their experiences during the old year many of them will certainly have learned much that they can profit by in 1908. And speaking of experience we have had a nice bunch of experience ourselves during the past year and have learned a few things. We have been in a somewhat peculiar situation most of the time and we believe that we have pulled through without any sacrifice of our self-respect or the respect of the community, and we think the respect of the community in which we live is about the best asset that any man can have.

Preaching and Practice.

Lord Lawrence, one of the famous viceroys of India, was an able and very simple man. He used to do his work in his shirt sleeves and discouraged as much as possible all state and ceremony. He was inclined to treat the natives like children, although he always strenuously insisted upon their meriting and receiving justice and kindness. Lord Mayo went to India to succeed him, and on the last afternoon before Lord Lawrence was to leave for home he took the incoming viceroy for a drive. On the way he impressed his doctrine of kindness very emphatically and solemnly on his successor. Lord Mayo thanked him for his helpful advice, and they returned in due course to Government House. The syce, or footman, was slow and awkward in opening the door of the carriage, whereupon Lord Lawrence jumped out in a temper and gave his ear an unmistakable tug. Lord Mayo turned to the viceroy's aid with a smile.

"My first practical lesson in kindness to natives is undoubtedly an odd one," he whispered.

An Enemy's Courtesy.

When the crusaders under King Richard of England defeated the Saracens, the sultan, seeing his troops fly, asked what was the number of the Christians who were making all this slaughter. He was told that it was only King Richard and his men and that they were all on foot.

"Then," said the sultan, "God forbid that such a noble fellow as King Richard should march on foot," and sent him a noble charger.

The messenger took it and said:

"Sire, the sultan sends you this charger that you may not be on foot."

The king was as cunning as his enemy and ordered one of his squires to mount the horse in order to try him. The squire obeyed, but the animal proved fiery, and, the squire being unable to hold him in, he set off at full speed to the sultan's pavilion. The sultan expected he had got King Richard and was not a little mortified to discover his mistake.

Snakes With Toothache.

The snake tore about its cage in a frenzy. It lashed the glass viciously with its tail.

"That's Joe's way o' swearin'," said the keeper. "He's got toothache."

"Toothache?"

"Sure. Snakes suffer turrible from toothache. They're so reckless, ye see, with their fangs. They jab 'em into anything—shoe leather, wood, iron bars. They take no care of their fangs at all. In fact, there had oughter be snake dentist to give his mates lectures on fang hygiene. Monkeys suffer from consumption. Consumption, too, carries off lots of our deer and antelope. Camels in captivity are subject to the asthma, elephants to rheumatism, tigers to indigestion and eagles and vultures to melancholia."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

$8.50 PUNCTURE-PROOF TIRES ONLY $4.80 PER PAIR

Regular Price $8.50 per pair. To Introduce We Will Sell You a Sample Pair for Only $4.80 (CASH WITH ORDER $4.55)

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES.

Result of 15 years experience in tire making. No danger from THORNS, CACTUS, PINS, NAILS, TACKS or GLASS. Serious punctures, like intentional knife cuts, can be vulcanized like any other tire.

Two Hundred Thousand pairs now in actual use. Over Seventy-five Thousand pairs sold last year.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road thus overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump and two Sampson metal puncture closers on full paid orders (these metal puncture closers to be used in case of intentional knife cuts or heavy gashes). Tires to be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination.

We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. Ask your Postmaster, Banker, Express or Freight Agent or the Editor of this paper about us. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a small trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

COASTER-BRAKES, built-up-wheels, saddles, pedals, parts and repairs, and everything in the bicycle line are sold by us at half the usual prices charged by dealers and repair men. Write for our big SUNDRY catalogue.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

WE WON THE COUNTY PRINTING

The PIONEER Official County paper For 1908. Won Out With Lowest Bid and Best Service.

There was a beautiful fight before the county Board at Red Lake Falls on Wednesday afternoon when the bids for doing the county printing for the ensuing year were opened. There was a combined bid put in by the four west end papers, The Red Lake Falls Gazette, St. Hilaire Spectator, and the two Thief River Falls papers. Another bid was put in by the PLUMMER PIONEER alone. The combination bid of the four west end papers provided for the publication of the tax list, and all other legal publications required at legal rates less ten per cent, the St. Hilaire Spectator to be the official paper. This meant that they would get 13½ cents per description for the delinquent tax list' and 67½ cents per folio for the first publication and 31½ cents per folio for each subsequent publication of all other legal notices. The bid of the PIONEER was of a kind never seen in this county before. It provided for the publication of the tax list at 8 cents per description and of other notices at 40 cents per folio for the first and 20 cents per folio for each subsequent publication. It also provided for mailing to every tax payer in the county, free of charge, a copy of each legal publication made for the county.

The combination was represented by the heavyweights, H. E. Ives, of the Spectator, and J. H. Cross, of the Gazette, and these two worthies used all of their persuasive eloquence to convince the Board that their bid was just about the proper thing. The PIONEER editor pointed out to the Board that the bid of the combine afforded practically no sevice to the people in the east end of the county, while the PIONEER bid would render to all the taxpayers the best possible servise at the least expence. Both bids seemed to look good to the Board and they found it hard to arrive at any decision but finally a vote was taken and the PIONEER bid was accepted

During the past two years the county publications have been made in all the west end papers and the PIONEER also, and such a plan gave very good servrce to all parts of the county. This year the four, headed by Ives of the Spectator, undertook to drive the PIONEER out of the game, but instead they managed to get dropped out themselves. They relied upon the Ives eloquence and the awing power of their combination, but the county Board happened to be composed of men who were not to be cajoled or frightened. The board saw its duty to the taxpayers and did it without fear or favor. Of course the members have incurred the displeasure of Mr. Ives and the other members of the combine, but after all, their displeasure won't count for much with the public.

A Crisis and a Craze.

There are two forces which cause modern England to move—a crisis and a craze. It is far less necessary to do something that is great now in this country than it is to do something that will attract the attention of a great many. The circumstances might have had a curious effect on the celebrated of the past could they have delayed existing until now. For instance, Shakespeare today would probably have had to attempt to swim the channel to sustain the attention of playgoers, Cromwell might have found it advisable to take trips in a "navigable balloon" to keep himself before the general public, Garrick might have elected to descend from the skies in a parachute to advertise himself satisfactorily, and it might have been necessary for the beautiful Duchess of Devonshire, to maintain her social reputation, to figure occasionally in the divorce court. Motor accidents, thefts of jewelry and of other property, fires and civil and criminal actions are, of course, more important elements in the building up and maintaining of a "reputation" among us now than is mere excellence.—London Truth.

Explosion by Music.

One of the most dangerous of all explosives is a black powder called iodide of nitrogen. When it is dry the slightest touch will often cause it to explode with great violence. There appears to be a certain rate of vibration which this compound cannot resist. In experiments to determine the cause of its extreme explosiveness some damp iodide of nitrogen was rubbed on the strings of a bass viol. It is known that the strings of such an instrument will vibrate when those of a similar instrument having an equal tension are played upon. In this case, after the explosive had become thoroughly dry upon the strings, another bass viol was brought near and the strings sounded. At a certain note the iodide of nitrogen on the prepared instrument exploded. It was found that the explosion occurred only when a rate of vibration of sixty a second was communicated to the prepared strings. Vibration of the G string caused an explosion, while that of the E string had no effect.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Bobby's Reason.

Little Bobby was saying his prayers at his mother's knee, but so rapidly that she asked him why he did not speak more slowly.

"Because, you know," he replied, "it would keep all the other children waiting."—Lippincott's.

Didn't Find Out.

"So you really attended the lecture last night?"

"Yes."

"What did the lecturer talk about?"

"Well, I'm not sure, for he didn't say."—Lyceumite and Talent.

GREAT WESTERN ROAD IN RECEIVER'S HANDS

LONDON MEETING DECIDES TO MAINTAIN STATUS QUO FOR A TIME.

NEED PERIOD TO PREPARE A BOND

Move Is Temporary, During Weeks While Mortgage to Cover Indebtedness Is Being Arranged For—Action at St. Paul.

London, Jan. 9.—The expected meeting of the noteholders of the Chicago Great Western Railway Company with A. B. Stickney, president of the company, was held Wednesday afternoon. It was decided to appoint a receiver for the company to maintain the status quo during the time necessary to prepare a first mortgage bond covering all the indebtedness of the road and to obtain a vote of the stockholders on this measure. There were many noteholders at the meeting. Application for the creation of a temporary receivership was made to a circuit court in the United States without delay.

Notification Is Issued.

Subsequent to the meeting the following notification was issued by the London agency of the company:

"At a meeting held Wednesday of some of the holders of the Chicago Great Western railway notes which mature shortly, the president of the company announced that, in order to maintain the status quo, it has been decided by the London finance committee that application should be made to a United States court for the creation of a temporary receivership until such time as the company shall have obtained authorization from its stockholders for the issue of first mortgage bonds to an amount sufficient to finance its requirements."

Creditors Ask Receiver.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 9.—Frank Kellogg and other attorneys for the creditors of the Chicago Great Western railroad had a conference with Judge Sanborn of the United States circuit court on Wednesday and Mr. Kellogg appeared before Judge Sanborn in the afternoon with application for a receiver for the Chicago Great Western railroad.

Judge Sanborn appointed A. B. Stickney and C. A. J. Smith of St. Paul receivers for the Great Western railroad. Kellogg and Severance were appointed attorneys for the receivers.

Gives Reasons for Action.

The following statement regarding the reason for the receivership was given by Mr. Kellogg Wednesday afternoon:

"The receivership is not the result of the action of any single creditor or stockholder, but has been taken after careful consideration by all parties interested, many of the creditors and the board of directors. The immediate reason for the receivership was the failure to obtain an extension of the notes now due and coming due during 1908 which were given for money borrowed for the improvements and betterments of the property. The company has spent about $19,000,000 during the past ten years in lowering grades, constructing new bridges, culverts, acquiring additional terminals and equipment, double trracking, and in general improvements and betterments of the railway, and has outstanding notes for this purpose to the amount of about $10,000,000.

Unable to Finance Road.

"During last spring a plan for financing the road was agreed to by the board of directors and the finance committee, but owing to the stringency in the money market and other unforeseen causes, they have been unable to carry it out.

"The earnings of the company were very materially decreased during the autumn by a strike at the shops, which tied up the equipment. The strike was won by the company, but the damage had been done.

"The receivership will be temporary pending the time required to carry through the plan of financing the road. Everything possible has been done to avoid a receivership."

Charged with Forgery.

New York, Jan. 9.—Swindles that may run into hundreds of thousands of dollars have been discovered in the wholesale commission house of Charles Broadway Rouss and Bernard Zolty, a picture frame and mirror dealer, was arrested charged with forgery in the third degree. The amount involved is said to be $50,000 and he was held in $10,000 bail.

Option on Road.

Duluth—It is learned here that an official of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha road has an option for the purchase of the Duluth, Rainy Lake & Winnipeg road, which runs from Virginia, Minn., to a point near International Falls on Rainy river, and for one-half of all the timber owned by the Cook and O'Brien interest. The Cook and O'Brien people also own the railroad. It is understood that Cook and O'Brien will retain their two sawmills at Virginia, in addition to one-half of the timber, and that in the event of the road passing into other hands they are to have a fair rate for the transportation of their logs to their mills. The option for the purchase of the road and one-half of the timber expires March 1, 1908.

Section 30.

Duluth—"Section 30," perhaps the most noted and certainly about the most expensive piece of mining property in the country, has been abandoned again, and a seventh fortune has been sunk in a vain effort to extract the wealth which the mine has promised to mankind for the last twenty-five years. It is estimated that fully $800,000 has been spent in litigation over the property, and not much short of half a million more has been expended in its development. And yet with apparently the best of reasons to expect rich returns, the men who have backed the various enterprises have been forced to retire without having so much as found what ought to be dignified by the name of "mine."

Rich in Ore.

Faribault—Since the discovery of iron ore on the farms of E. J. Leary and George Marks, south of this city experts have been assaying and investigating to learn the extent of the deposits. Samples taken from the surface and tested show 32 to 65 per cent metal, and it is thought by the experts that there are even greater values below.

The ore was discovered on the Leary farm because of the frequency with which lightning struck in that neighborhood. Mr. Leary procured a magnetic needle and started prospecting, which ended in the finding of ore known as brown hematite. Shortly after he and his family located black magnetic ore.

Logs.

Minneapolis—The 1907 report of Fred E. Wheaton, surveyor general of logs for the second or Minneapolis district, was presented to the governor. It shows a total of 3,509,646 logs sealed on the upper Mississippi, measuring 280,180,620 board feet, and the mills sawed 364,494,090 feet of logs, producing 466,747,555 feet of lumber, 13,283,750 shingles, and 96,542,150 lath. There were 139,900,000 feet of logs carried over, of which 110,000,000 were in the river above Minneapolis.

The Minneapolis record shows 2,337,237 logs sealed and sawed, measuring 165,833,110 feet. The mill output was 214,192,932 feet of lumber, 2,500,000 shingles and 37,883,200 lath.

Health Inspection.

St. Paul—More than three thousand inspections were made in 1907 by W. D. McCall of the health department in keeping bakers, dairymen and water companies in line with the ordinances for the protection of public health. His work covered 1,031 inspections of bakeries, 1,207 of bakery wagons, 813 grocery stores and 83 restaurants. In addition he took 1,198 samples of milk and cream for analysis and 116 samples of water.

MISS ANNIE CATRON.

CATARRH MADE LIFE A BURDEN TO ME.

MISS ANNIE CATRON, 927 Main St., Cincinnati, Ohio, writes:

"As I have found Peruna a blessing for a severe case of catarrh of the head and throat which I suffered from for a number of years, I am only too pleased to give it my personal endorsement.

"Catarrh, such as I suffered from, made life a burden to me, my breath was offensive, stomach bad, and my head stopped up so that I was usually troubled with a headache, and although I tried many so-called remedies, nothing gave me permanent relief. I was rather discouraged with all medicines when Peruna was suggested to me.

"However, I did buy a bottle, and before that was finished there was a marked change in my condition. Much encouraged I kept on until I was completely cured in a month's time, and I find that my general health is also excellent."

People who prefer solid medicines should try Peruna tablets. Each tablet represents one average dose of Peruna.

Seeking Experience.

Up to the age of 16 Dick had retained the proper scorn of things feminine. Then he went to dancing school and fell smitten by the charms of several youthful Eves. Accordingly, Dick approached his father and requested theater tickets for two.

Father complied and merely asked as he turned over the seats, "Which girl is it?"

"I'm going to take Mabel," responded Dick.

"Then she's the one you like best?" father continued.

Dick turned a superior and pitying eye upon his parent. "Oh, no! I don't like her best. You don't understand the situation, father. It isn't the girl I care about. It's the experience I want."

TRUE AFFECTION.

Ethel—Jimmy, do you love me?

Jimmy—Great Scott, girl, do I love you! Ain't I kept my hands and face clean for more than a week all on account of you?

FOUND A WAY

To Be Clear of the Coffee Troubles.

"Husband and myself both had the coffee habit and finally his stomach and kidneys got in such a bad condition that he was compelled to give up a good position that he had held for years. He was too sick to work. His skin was yellow, and I hardly think there was an organ in his body that was not affected.

"I told him I felt sure his sickness was due to coffee and after some discussion he decided to give it up.

"It was a struggle because of the powerful habit. One day we heard about Postum and concluded to try it, and then it was easy to leave off coffee.

"His fearful headaches grew less frequent, his complexion began to clear, kidneys grew better until at last he was a new man altogether, as a result of leaving off coffee and taking up Postum. Then I began to drink it, too.

"Although I was never as bad off as my husband, I was always very nervous and never at any time very strong, only weighing 95 lbs. before I began to use Postum. Now I weigh 115 lbs. and can do as much work as anyone my size, I think.

"Many do not use Postum because they have not taken the trouble to make it right. I have successfully fooled a great many persons who have drunk it at my table. They would remark, 'You must buy a high grade of coffee.' One young man who clerked in a grocery store was very enthusiastic about my 'coffee.' When I told him what it was, he said, 'why I've sold Postum for four years but I had no idea it was like this. Think I'll drink Postum hereafter.'"

MARTHA'S MISSION

By ELLIS O'NEILLE

(Copyright.)

Martha pushed away from her a tray of the delicately painted and gilded eggs and laid down her brush with a languid sigh.

"Tired?" Egbert exclaimed. "May we paint? Fannie and I?"

"Yes, if you'll clean the brushes, and put them away when you get through. Here are some lovely colors on the palette, all ready mixed. Don't talk too loud, you and Dimples; mamma is not so well to-day."

She passed through a curtained doorway into the next room, and sat down by her mother's couch.

"Did I hear you say you were tired, dear?" asked Mrs. Shelton.

"Yes, tired of this monotonous, inactive life. I have been thinking all day what a waste it was to spend so much money on my music and painting. What good do they do me, since papa has buried us in this wilderness?"

"The more alone we are the more need of resources within ourselves," replied the mother.

Martha shrugged her shoulders. "Yes, I know," she said, "but it doesn't suit me. I have always thought there was a work for me in the world; but I will never find it here."

"A few years make great changes in a place like this," said her mother.

"Oh, mamma, your patience almost vexes me. You talk of a few years as if they were a few days. Must I sit in idleness and wait for the building of railroads and schools and changes? I, with all my energy and ambition?"

"You are not sitting in idleness. To comfort a sick mother, and make a bright home for your father and brother is a better work than you think, and your field of usefulness will widen day by day. It may not be the field you would have chosen; but do not forget that 'What thou best canst understand is just the thing lies nearest to thy hand.'"

"Oh, mamma!" The curtain parted and Egbert bounded in; "oh, mamma, Fannie has colored a basket of eggs to take to the children up at the poor house to-morrow; may I go with her? Please, mamma; I never have been to the poor house."

"It isn't a proper place for you, Bertie," said his sister. "Send the children some of those painted eggs, but keep away from there; you might catch some disease."

"No, Marsie, I heard Dr. Brown tell papa, only yesterday, that there was no sickness there except a few cases of—of—'Pullmanery,' I think he called it; I don't know what that is, but it can't be bad because papa said I could go if you and mamma were willing."

The curtain parted again, and a little girl with large, shy eyes, and cheeks that dimpled when she spoke, came timidly in. "It's nice and clean up there," she said, "and they're always so glad to see anybody."

"I think Egbert may go," said Mrs. Shelton. Marie took a long look at Fannie, and her will relaxed. Surely, if such a sweet, wholesome little creature visited the county poor house it could not be such a disgusting place as she had imagined.

"Do you think they would care for flowers, Fannie?" she asked; "I could send a few lilies and a basket of hyacinths, and also a wagon full of plum blossoms."

Encouraged by this sudden spark of interest, Mrs. Shelton said: "Suppose you go with the children, Martha? I do not think you would regret it." Martha turned on her mother a look of pained surprise.

"Oh, how can you ask it?" she said, and left the room in tears.

That shower broke up the clouds and let the sunshine into her heart again.

The Easter morning saw her seated in the miller's little wagon, between Egbert and Fannie, driving old Dexter to the poor house. A bent man on crutches opened the gate for them. The hall door stood open, but no one was visible inside. A clatter of tin pans was heard in a room at the other end of the hall, and, rising above this, a clear, bird-like voice singing: "Come, Thou Font of Every Blessing." "It's Cherry singing, and washing the dishes," said Fannie, and added, laughing: "She calls them dishes, but they're only tin plates, you know. Come right in, I know the way."

As they entered the bare, but clean room where the girl was washing the pans, she hushed her song and drew a long, eager breath through her nostrils. "Hy'cinths!" she exclaimed, "an' plum blossoms. Who's got 'em?" Fannie approached her on tip-toe, and held out a spray of plum blossoms. Cherry darted toward her, seized her, and rubbed a moist hand over the laughing little face. "I knowed it was you," she said; "who else'd be bringing posies to the pore house?"

"Who else?" repeated Fannie, "why Egbert Shelton, and his sister, Miss Martha. Here they are."

Cherry made her best bow. "I can't see you," she said, "but I'm obliged to you for comin'."

"We heard you singing," said Martha; "your voice is beautiful."

"That's what folks say," returned the blind girl with evident gratification. "I sing a heap 'cause they likes to hear me; I know most all the songs a-goin'."

A flushed woman with dough on her hands, came in. "The cook," whispered Fannie.

"Oh, the blessed Aister!" exclaimed the woman. "I'd clean forgot it till I see the flowers; would yez give me one or two to keep me moinded of it?"

"Thim's splindid," she continued when Martha had given her some snowy clusters; "I'll l'ave 'em have a mug of water on the kitchen shelf, and I'll put a bit of short'nen in the bread this minit, to cilebrate the day jist. The paupers'll be glad of that, I ken tell yez."

Cherry had finished washing the plates, and she conducted them to a flight of stairs and along a corridor. Curious faces looked at them from the little rooms on each side. Egbert and Fannie stopped at each to distribute flowers and Easter eggs.

In the hall near the consumptives' room they passed a group of sallow, wretched looking women, one of them holding in her arms a curly-haired child. "She's nigh about gone," said one; "she don't know the child."

"Doctor says she can't last long," said another. "Hear how she keeps calling Jennie."

A feeble voice was indeed repeating that name over and over—the voice of a wasted woman stretched on a low bed.

Martha had never known that the human frame could become so attenuated and life remain.

"Don't come in," she said, turning quickly to Egbert and Fannie. "There, go out in the yard and teach Cherry an Easter hymn."

The children obeyed and she entered the sick-room alone. Never had she so longed to comfort a fellow creature, so felt herself so powerless. It wrung her heart to hear that pleading, oft-repeated cry for "Jennie."

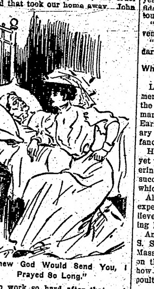
Moved by a sudden impulse, she kneeled by the bed, took the thin hand in hers, and whispered: "Yes, yes, what is it? What can I do?"

The soft touch more than the whisper seemed to soothe the sufferer.

"Oh, Jennie," she said, "have you come at last? I knew God would send you, I prayed so long."

Martha only replied by a gentle pressure of the hand, and after a little rest the woman went on:

"It was the water, dear; the cruel flood that took our home away. John had to work so hard after that, and you know he was never strong, and—"



"I Knew God Would Send You, I Prayed So Long."

She broke off with a gasp, and Martha whispered again: "Yes, yes, I think I know. Don't talk about it now."

"But the child, dear," the woman pleaded. "It was for the child's sake I prayed you would come. Keep the child, Jennie, and make it like yourself. I'll ask no more in the last day." She grew quiet after that.

Then the woman with the child in her arms came and stood in the door. The little one had cried itself to sleep.

Martha took the child in her arms, laid the curly head on her shoulder and sat down so near the mother's bed that she could touch the wasted hand. Sitting thus, she watched the hours away, and saw the look of pain change into one of perfect peace.

A sense of nearness to her risen Lord, such as she had never known, thrilled her soul.

She felt that she stood in "Jennie's" place to the orphaned child. Who Jennie was she might never know, but what she was had been revealed in the dying mother's words: "Make the child like yourself; I'll ask no more in the last day."

Great changes have come with the years since then. Martha is the mistress of a metropolitan home, the center of a brilliant circle of appreciative friends; but the unchanged purpose is always with her, prompting her to words and deeds of Christ-like love.

The curly-haired child is a graceful girl, on the brink of womanhood. Sometimes when Martha looks into her cloudless eyes, and listens to her joyous laughter, she thinks of the wailing poor-house child; and then she seems to hear the Saviour's words: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, ye have done it unto me."

DOCTOR SAID "USE CUTICURA"

In Bad Case of Eczema on Child—Disease Had Reached a Fearful State—His Order Resulted in Complete Cure.

"When I was small I was troubled with eczema for about three months. It was all over my face and covered nearly all of my head. It reached such a state that it was just a large scab all over, and the pain and itching were terrible. I doctored with an able physician for some time and was then advised by him to use the Cuticura Remedies which I did and I was entirely cured. I have not been bothered with it since. I used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment but do not know exactly how much was used to complete the cure. I can safely say that Cuticura did a lot for me, Miss Anabel Wilson, North Branch, Mich., Oct. 20. 1907."

HERE GOES ANOTHER ILLUSION.

"Fiddling Bob" Declares He Has Not Played for Many Years.

Another cherished illusion has been shattered. Senator Taylor of Tennessee, lovingly called throughout the union "Fiddling Bob," doesn't play the fiddle after all. He has entered a formal denial. Pretty soon somebody will be saying that Congressman Richmond Pearson Hobson of Merrimac fame never kissed a pretty young hero worshiper. Representative Hughes of New Jersey asked Senator Taylor about his musical accomplishments.

"Haven't played a fiddle for a dozen years," said the Tennesseean. "That fiddling story is all wrong. I haven't touched a bow for years."

"Maybe you play the violin, then?" ventured Hughes.

"Oh, I never even saw one of those darned things," retorted the senator.

Why Sloan's Liniment and Veterinary Remedies Are the Best to Use.

Let me tell you why Sloan's Liniment and Veterinary Remedies are the safest and most practical on the market to-day. In the first place, Dr. Earl S. Sloan is the son of a veterinary surgeon, and from his earliest infancy he was associated with horses.

He bought and sold horses while yet very young. He practiced as a veterinary for 20 years and has battled successfully with every disease to which that animal is subject.

All his remedies are the result of experiments made to save life or relieve suffering while he was practicing his profession.

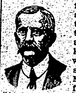
Another Remarkable Cure of Serious Kidney Trouble.



C. L. Wood, a prominent merchant of Fentress, Norfolk Co., Va., was suffering some months ago with frequent attacks of hard pain in the back, kidneys and bladder and the kidney secretions were irregularly scanty or profuse. Medical treatment failed to cure him. "At last," says Mr. Wood, "I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, and before one box was gone, I went through four days of intense pain, finally passing a stone, one-half by five-sixteenths of an inch in diameter. I haven't had a sign of kidney trouble since."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Woman's Hour of Distress.

"One of the most distressing experiences for us women," announced Bettina, with a toss of her pretty head, "is to be brought face to face with the same kind of gowns or hats as those we happen to be wearing. Really, I can't think of anything more exasperating. All togged out in my new finery I boarded a Broadway car the other day. Can you believe it? When I sat down I saw opposite me a woman whose dress was of the same material and made up in much the same way as mine, and her hat was modeled on mine or mine on hers—not that it made much difference. The horror in her eyes reflected in my own, I suppose, and the smiles of everybody else—well, I just knew how people looked. As soon as I recovered from my first feeling of weakness I started to leave the car, but, to make matters worse, my vis-a-vis, having the same intentions, got up at the same moment. Then smiles became laughter, and we both fled."—New York Press.

A Conservative Speech.

There were some doubts in the community as to Homer Floyd's fitness for a position on the school board, owing to certain lapses in his early education, but his first speech in his official capacity silenced the tongues of all critics. He listened to several recitations with a grave and interested air, and at the end of the last one he arose to address the school "by request."

"Some things are in my province as member of the school board and some are not," he said, with a genial smile. "It's within my province to say that I never heard scholars answer up more promptly than you children of district No. 3. As to whether your answers were or were not correct it is not my place to say. Your teacher knows, and in her hands I leave the matter."—Youth's Companion.

The True Bohemian.

The main characteristic of the bohemian is a perfectly consistent carelessness. Phil May was a true type of the bohemian; so was the Shifter; so was O'Shea; Wallis Mackay also, but not, perhaps, William, his brilliant brother. The bohemian never works unless he feels in the mood. Money is not his incentive. Fame he laughs at. —Mammon.

Gossip.

"It is a pity that there are so many people who tell falsehoods."

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne, "but think how much worse it would be if we had to accept all the gossip we hear as positively true."—Washington Star.

Arabian Hypocrisy.

Writes a traveler: "The noblest and the basest Arabs are agreed that to obtain as quickly as possible all the available cash they can lay their hands on is by no means degrading. But even here subtle dialectic comes into play. The Arab must always have right on his side, for in studied and complex hypocrisy he has nothing to learn from us. If an Arab would rob his guest—I am speaking from personal experience—he will first talk at length on the subject of honor, hospitality, and so forth. He will gradually work the matter round as to why you are traveling, throw out suggestions that spies, enemies and intruders cannot claim hospitality, suggest that he himself is poor, question himself as to whether he ought not to detain you as a prisoner, again state that he is in want, and thus shift from blackmail to cajolery and from gentle requests to threats, until he has extorted a sum of money which in his curious brain he might describe as the least he could accept with honor or the most he could extract without danger to himself."

Norway Superstitions.

So drenched is Norway with old legends and fairy tales and a pervasive intimacy with the supernatural that it is impossible to understand Norwegian character, especially as expressed in Norwegian art, without some comprehension of the spirit world, for the world of the sailors and fishers of the white northland, the world of the peasants and simple country folk, is inhabited by savage, wicked elves and spirits. Everything is controlled by its own demon, who must be propitiated if life is to go smoothly. Even the weather is controlled by various demons, and the canny Finns, with their pretensions of magical power, have reaped a rich harvest from the superstitious Norwegians, many of whom still buy fair weather from the Gan-Finn by the sackful. Whoever has known a Norwegian fisherman has heard of the Draug, that demon of the sea who rides in half a boat and who is a warning of swift and awful death. —Jonas Lie in Craftsman.

The Turning of the Worm.

Mollie—I wish you were more like Mr. Simpson. Coddle—My dear, if I were more like Mr. Simpson, I should have married a woman more like Mrs. Simpson.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Knicker—What is their social standing? Bocker—Do they call it a barn, stable or garage?—New York Sun.

$8.50 PUNCTURE-PROOF TIRES ONLY $4.80 PER PAIR

Regular Price $8.50 per pair. To Introduce We Will Sell You a Sample Pair for Only $4.80

(CASH WITH ORDER $4.55)

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES.

Result of 15 years experience in tire making. No danger from THORNS, CACTUS, PINS, NAILS, TACKS or GLASS. Serious punctures, like intentional knife cuts, can be vulcanized like any other tire.

Two Hundred Thousand pairs now in actual use. Over Seventy-five Thousand pairs sold last year.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road thus overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump and two Sampson metal puncture closers on full paid orders (these metal puncture closers to be used in case of intentional knife cuts or heavy gashes). Tires to be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination.

We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. Ask your Postmaster, Banker, Express or Freight Agent or the Editor of this paper about us. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a small trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

COASTER-BRAKES, built-up-wheels, saddles, pedals, parts and repairs, and everything in the bicycle line are sold by us at half the usual prices charged by dealers and repair men. Write for our big SUNDRY catalogue.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

Mr. and Mrs. Hans Holmen were very pleasantly surprized at their home in Mayfield township last Friday evening by a crowd of friends and neighbors who called on them in a body. They made the visitors welcome and a most enjoyable evening was spent.

Ole Gisselquist, of Shelley in Norman county, was here on Wednesday with a big load of goods which he was taking out to a new farm which he purchased recently north of Radny. He will move his family and other effects to his new home early in the spring.

County Commissioner Wm Demanu and family were here from their home near Red Lake Falls to spend a couple of days visiting with Mrs. Demann's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Wichterman. They returned home on Sunday afternoon and Mrs. Wichterman accompanied them for a short visit.

A number of the friends of Mrs. Fred Anderson got together Tuesday evening and went out to the Anderson home north of town and perpetrated a complete surprise on that worthy couple. There was about sixty people in the crowd and they had a most enjoyable time. Before leaving the visitors made Mr. and Mrs. Anderson a substantial present as a token of the esteem in which they are held.

Wedded and Parted.

John A. B. Anderson, the Mayfield township bachelor, is a bachelor no longer as he was successful in his efforts to find a bride through the medium of a Milwaukee newspaper. The bride Miss Jessy Perry, arrived from Milwaukee on Tuesday night. On Wednesday just before noon they were married by Judge Rothsten and that same evening she left for the east again after signing a stipulation for divorce.

The circumstance leading up to the wedding, and subsequent parting, have been aired in the newspapers. The exact cause of their separation so soon after the wedding have not been given out but we understand that both parties claim to have been very much disapointed in their partner. Anderson gave the woman $25 to pay her expences on the return trip. So ended the great romance of Mr. Anderson's life. He says he is thankful things are no worse and is still receiving the congratulations of his friends on the result.

INJUNCTION PROCEEDINGS.

Harry Ives Tries to Beat Us Out of County Printing.

On Wednesday afternoon Sheriff Nelson and Attorney C. E. Boughton were out from Red Lake Falls and served papers on us in injunction proceedings brought by H. E. Ives, of the St. Hilaire Spectator, to beat us, if possible, out of the county printing. The complaint claims that the action of the county board was not technically correct, and that the PIONEER is not a legal newspaper. The latter point is advanced on the supposition (sworn to as fact by Ives) that the PIONEER has not enough of the paper printed at home to comply with the law, and further that it has not enough "paying subscribers".

The substance of the matter is that Ives is sore, awful sore, because we beat him out fairly and squarely in open competition before the county board by offering to do the official printing at a figure that will save the taxpayers about $1,000 and in a way that will give the public much better service than they have ever had.

We miss our guess if the court does not turn these injunction proceedings down on every point and sustain the action of the board in giving us the county printing.

The PIONEER and the Spectator are about even as to legality. One half is printed in the cities in both cases. As to their lists of "paying subscribers" it is up to the court to decide what the term "paying subscriber" means. After that is settled we may have more to say regarding the Spectator's legality and the Ives system of grafting the public by means of a printing combine.

The hearing on this injunction is set for next Monday evening before Judge Watts at Crookston.

Stole Valuable Fur Coat.

On Tuesday night a man giving his name as H. Heinz arrived in town and registered at at Hotel Scotland as coming from Conway, N. D. He stated that he wanted to go out in the country next morning but need not be called in the morning. He went to his room in good season but when morning came he was no where to be fonnd. He had evidently got up during the night and qnietly made his way ont in time to catch the north bound Soo flier at 2:20 a. m. a valuable fur coat belonging to William Erb disappeared from the Hotel office at the same time and no trace has been found of the man or the coat since then.

The police at Thief River Falls were notiged as soon as the theft was noticed and they stated that the man answered the description of a man wanted for bank robbery. No further news of him has been heard here.

Officers Elected.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Emardville Creamery Association was held last Monday and there was a good attendance. Harmony seemed to prevail at the meeting and there seems to have been absolutely no outside interference. The officers elected for the ensuing year were:

A commitee was appointed to wait on the buttermaker, Wm. Lauritzon, and ascertain what wages he would want in case he was to be hired for the ensuing year. This committee made their report to the meeting after which a vote was taken to decide wether or not the stockholdere wanted Mr. Lauritzen re-hired. The result was that Mr. Lauritzon received 13 votes and 21 voted for a new buttermaker.

The Wettest Trade.

The lot of the Ceylon pearl diver is not an easy one. Stones are suspended on a running rope over an outrigger projected from the boat's side in such a convenient position as to allow the diver to place one foot within a loop affixed to the stone. The diver, having placed himself with one foot on the stone, with a net around his neck to hold oysters, draws in his breath, closes the nostrils with one hand and raises his body to give force to the descent. The manduck (or diver's attendant), in charge of the stone and nets, lets go, and the diver rapidly reaches the bottom, leaves the stone, which the manduck instantly hauls up and refixes, throws himself on the ground, creeping along, and fills his net with oysters. This done, he jerks the rope, which is pulled up by the manduck in charge, and the contents of the net are discharged into the boat. The diver meanwhile rises to the surface.—Ceylon Manual.

The Restless Piper.

A Wall street financier was talking about music. "I like all music," he said, "except such native and special sorts as the tomtom, the bagpipes or the Indian hufaa give off. Did you ever notice how a piper prances up and down as he pipes? He never sits, he never stands still, but up and down, round and round, to and fro, he struts continually. A little boy, listening to the weird skirl of the bagpipes of a street performer, once said to his father, 'Father, why does the piper keep on the move all the time he plays?' 'I can't say, my boy,' the father answered, 'unless it is to prevent anyone getting the range with a cobblestone.'"

Correct Interpretation Essential.

Many of the most beautiful pieces of poetry in literature would seem uninteresting and flat if read by a bad reciter. In the same way a good reciter will make attractive a poem whose beauties are not so apparent. A fine painter will light up each little beauty in his pictures until the smallest detail is attractive and strikes the eye. It is only the mediocrity whose work is characterized by sameness and lack of interest.—Strand Magazine.

Logical Supposition.

Little Lloyd — Papa, was George Washington married to England? Papa—Of course not, my son. Why do you ask such a silly question? Little Lloyd—This book says England is our mother country, and as George Washington was the father of his country I supposed they were married.—Chicago News.

The General Demand

of the Well-Informed of the World has always been for a simple, pleasant and efficient liquid laxative remedy of known value; a laxative which physicians could sanction for family use because its component parts are known to them to be wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, acceptable to the system and gentle, yet prompt, in action.

In supplying that demand with its excellent combination of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the California Fig Syrup Co. proceeds along ethical lines and relies on the merits of the laxative for its remarkable success.

That is one of many reasons why Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is given the preference by the Well-Informed. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

A Busy Locality.

Jack is the eight-year-old son of a Philadelphia suburban merchant, and not long ago made his first visit to New York with his father. The strenuosity of the big town got on the boy's nerves, and by bedtime he was about run down. He tumbled into bed quite regardless of certain duties, but his father was more observant.

"Don't forget to say your prayers, my boy," he said.

"O, what's the use, pop?" responded the boy. "God's too busy over here to bother with a little thing like that."

The father was shocked, but under the circumstances he thought it best not to urge his son.—Lippincott's Magazine.

GEORGE CORTELYOU AS COMPANY CHIEF?

SAID TO BE CANDIDATE FOR DIRECTING HEAD OF KNICKERBOCKER TRUST.

SECRETARY DENIES RESIGNATION TALK

Return of Treasury Official to Work After Absence Marked by Objection to Report—Suggestion of Wordy Tilt with President.

New York, Jan. 16.—It is understood that the officials who have in charge the reorganization of the Knickerbocker Trust company have had under consideration a number of names with a view to securing a new directing chief of this organization, and that Secretary Cortelyou's name is among these that have received consideration. It is believed that intimations more or less positive have been conveyed to Mr. Cortelyou that his name had been considered, but to what extent this has assumed a definite or formal character or whether the secretary has given it serious consideration is not known.

Cortelyou Denies Story.

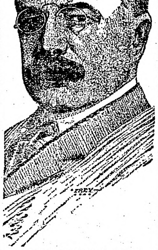
Washington, Jan. 16.—Published rumors that Secretary of the Treasury Cortelyou had resigned, following a stormy battle of words with President Roosevelt, was declared absolutely without foundation by Cortelyou himself, Wednesday.



Secretary George B. Cortelyou.

Secretary Cortelyou appeared at the department Wednesday for the first time since his recent illness, which began about four weeks ago. He still shows evidence of his severe attack of the grippe, but expresses hope that he can from now on attend to his duties without further trouble. He said that the published story that he had resigned or would resign was absolutely without any foundation. He had had no serious differences with the president, he declared, or with any member of the cabinet, and he expected to continue to serve as secretary of the treasury.

No Offer Made, He Says.

Following this denial Cortelyou pronounced the story that he had been offered the presidency of the Knickerbocker Trust company of New York as absolutely without foundation, and said also that the published report that he had conferred with Mr. J. P. Morgan in regard to it during his recent trip to New York was a "fake" in every particular. During his visit to New York, he said, he had not seen Mr. Morgan or any one else in his interests, nor had he been within a number of miles of Wall street.

Ask Arrest of Nine.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

The N. P. Pays Up.

St. Paul.—State Treasurer C. C. Dinehart received from the Northern Pacific Railway company a check for $11,880.63 in payment of the 5 per cent penalty for the failure of the company to have its taxes for 1904 fully paid up on March 1, 1905.

Several other roads were found to have been delinquent in the payment of their taxes for several years, and upon notification of the imposition of the penalty prescribed by law some of them have already paid up, while there are still several who have not, and suits will be started against these roads for the enforcement of the penalty.

The Northern Pacific did not put in an answer to the suit brought against it but agreed to pay the amount. The Great Northern answered, setting up an understanding with former treasurers that the taxes might be paid in installments, beginning two months before the taxes became due, and that the payment of the balance would not then be required on the date specified by law.

The State Wins.

St. Paul.—The state has again scored a victory in its fight for about 185, 00 acres of swamp land in the northern part of the state. Gov. Johnson received a letter from James Rudolph Garfield, secretary of the interior stating that he has decided not to reopen the decision of his predecessor in the matter. The former decision affirmed the title of the state in the lands, and all that now remains is to select the tracts coming under the grant.

This matter has been pending since 1903, when the state made a request upon the interior department for patents to the lands involved. The state's right to the land rests upon the swamp land grant of 1860, and included large tracts which a few years later were made a part of the Indian reservations of the Mississippi, Chippewas and the White Earth Indians. They lie in Itasca, Cass and Beltrami counties.

Freezing in Haystack.

Winona.—Had it not been that the hay in Fred Denzer's barn, near Minnesota City, had been all used, necessitating him and his son to make a trip to the haystacks in the meadow a mile and a half away, Michael Socal would have been frozen to death. When Denzer arrived at the stack he found that a hole had been dug into it and there, partly covered, was the unfortunate man almost dead. He is a Bohemian, and has been in this country a short time. He had been a charge on Wabasha county until recently. He had wandered thirty miles down the river, until overcome by hunger and cold, when he crawled into the haystack to die. He will be sent back to Wabasha.

Done in Anger.

Mankato.—Charles Miller, a farmer living near Louisville, Martin county, is in a local hospital recovering from severe burns on his head, hands and arms that he sustained in the burning of his barn His statement is that in a fit of anger or madness he set fire to the hay in the barn and then ran out through the fire, perhaps repenting his rashness. He was saved, but the structure and its contents were consumed.

He claims not to know what actuated him in starting the fire, but says that he "must have been crazy." As the barn and contents were the property of his wife, he has paid her $420 for the damage that he did.

Twine is Cheaper.

Stillwater.—The state board of control announces the following prices on twine manufactured in the state prison to be effective during the coming season: Standard, 500 feet to the pound, 7¾ cents a pound; sisal (white) 500 feet to the pound, 7¾ cents a pound; standard Manila, 550 feet to the pound, 8¾ cents a pound; Manila, 600 feet to the pound, 9¾ cents a pound; pure Manila, 650 feet to the pound, 11 cents a pound. All these prices which are f. o. b. Stillwater, Minnesota, are exactly one cent lower than the prices quoted for the same grade of twine manufactured at the prison last year.

NEWS NOTES.

Dundee.—Three hundred farmers attended the institute at this place.

Hamline.—There are 127 enrolled in the farmers' short course at the state school of agriculture.

Crookston.—The annual report of City Health Officer C. E. Dampier shows that there were an even 100 deaths here during the year of 1907, while there were 230 births. During the year 1906 there were 88 deaths and 158 births.

Minneapolis.—One of the foremost of the younger generation of actors, Joseph Santley, in his new play of the western plains, entitled "Billy the Kid," will be the attraction at the Bijou Opera House, the week of Jan. 19. The piece is said to be replete with strong climaxes and bright comedy scenes.

Minneapolis.—The staggering figures of 3,420,000 gallons of water used to extinguish a fire would excite the skepticism of many, yet this is actually the amount of water used during the Hartman fire.

Washington.—The application of James R. Jones and others to organize the National Bank of Adrian, Minn., with a capital of $25,000, was approved by the controller of the currency.

St. Paul.—The report of statistician Moersch shows that the recent financial stringency has scarcely affected the number of men employed in St. Paul industrial establishments.

AND SHE BELIEVED HIM.

After This Who Can Doubt the Power of Love?

George had been away on business for a whole long week, and during that time he had sent Clara ten letters, six letter-cards and 42 picture postcards.

Why, then, was there a touch of coldness in her greeting when he flew to her arms on his return?

"Dearest," he whispered, "what is the matter?"

"Oh, George," she said, "you didn't send a kiss in your ninth letter."

"My precious," he replied, "that night I had steak and onions for dinner, and you wouldn't have liked a kiss after onions, would you?"

And, such is the unfathomable power of love, she was satisfied, and nestled to him.

THE LIMITATIONS OF THE CLOTH

His Reverence (whose caddie has sneezed at the moment of putting)—You—you—you naughty caddie!

Where She Should Live.

"What under the sun," asked a father of his daughter who wanted her to make a match with a young man whose only qualification was the possession of a goodly fortune—"what earthly objection can you possibly find to Mr. Spriggins?"

"He has habits,' replied the daughter, "which I detest! When I marry I want a husband who does not smoke, chew, drink, swear, belong to clubs, play cards, stay out late or go motoring by himself."

The father looked at his daughter for a moment or two in silence and then said:

"My child, you are but a stranger here; heaven is your home."

Ups and Downs.

"I think it is really going to unfair extremes when Mabel gets me on the telephone just to give me a scolding."

"Why so?"

NATURE

AND A WOMAN'S WORK

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

Nature and a woman's work combined have produced the grandest remedy for woman's ills that the world has ever known.

In the good old-fashioned days of our grandmothers they relied upon the roots and herbs of the field to cure disease and mitigate suffering.

The Indians on our Western Plains to-day can produce roots and herbs for every ailment, and cure diseases that baffle the most skilled physicians who have spent years in the study of drugs.

From the roots and herbs of the field Lydia E. Pinkham more than thirty years ago gave to the women of the world a remedy for their peculiar ills, more potent and efficacious than any combination of drugs.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is now recognized as the standard remedy for woman's ills.

Mrs. Bertha Muff, of 515 N.C. St., Louisiana, Mo., writes:

"Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my troubles public.

"For twelve years I had been suffering with the worst forms of female ills. During that time I had eleven different physicians without help. No tongue can tell what I suffered, and at times I could hardly walk. About two years ago I wrote Mrs. Pinkham for advice. I followed it, and can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's advice restored health and strength. It is worth mountains of gold to suffering women."

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Muff, it will do for other suffering women.

Often The Kidneys Are Weakened by Over-Work.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

The kidneys filter and purify the blood—that is their work.

Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases, and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

BLAMED ON THE RAILROAD.

First Thought in Irishman's Mind After the Accident.

Railroad claim-agents have little faith in their fellow creatures. One said recently: "Every time I settle a claim with one of these hard-headed rural residents who wants the railroad to pay twice what he would charge the butcher if he gets a sheep killed, I think of this story, illustrative of the way some people want to hold the railroad responsible for every accident, of whatever kind, that happens. Two Irishmen were driving home from town one night when their buggy ran into a ditch, overturned, and they were both stunned. When a rescuer came along and revived them, the first thing one of them said was: 'Where's the train?' 'Why, there's no train around,' he was told. 'Then where's the railroad?' 'The nearest railroad is three miles away,' he learned. 'Well, well,' he commented. 'I knew it hit us pretty hard, but I didn't suppose it knocked us three miles from the track.'"

SYMPATHY.

He—Yaas! Several years ago I fell in love with a girl, but she rejected me—made a regular fool of me, in fact.

She—How sad! And you've never got over it.

It Was Real.

"What a beautiful piece of mistletoe you have on the chandelier, Miss Clara!"

"Yes, Mr. Simpkins, it is; but do you know, I'm afraid it's not genuine."

Just at this point she discovered that it was, and the conversation ended.

We ought not to look back unless it is to derive useful lessons from past errors and for the purpose of profiting by dear-bought experience. —George Washington.

RAILROAD MAN

Didn't Like Being Starved.

A man running on a railroad has to be in good condition all the time or he is liable to do harm to himself and others.

A clear head is necessary to run a locomotive or conduct a train. Even a railroad man's appetite and digestion are matters of importance, as the clear brain and steady hand result from the healthy appetite followed by the proper digestion of food.

"For the past five years," writes a railroader, "I have been constantly troubled with indigestion. Every doctor I consulted seemed to want to starve me to death. First I was dieted on warm water and toast until I was almost starved; then, when they would let me eat, the indigestion would be right back again.

"Only temporary relief came from remedies, and I tried about all of them I saw advertised. About three months ago a friend advised me to try Grape-Nuts food. The very first day I noticed that my appetite was satisfied, which had not been the case before, that I can remember.

"In a week, I believe, I had more energy than ever before in my life. I have gained seven pounds and have not had a touch of indigestion since I have been eating Grape-Nuts. When my wife saw how much good this food was doing me she thought she would try it awhile. We believe the discoverer of Grape-Nuts found the 'Perfect Food.'"

Overcoming Her Despondency

By Elizabeth Robbins

(Copyright.)

The shadow of the leaves of an apple tree branch quivered on the white muslin curtains of Miss Phoebe Percival's chamber window as they were stirred by the light morning breeze.

The sun just rising filled the room with a yellow glow. Ordinarily this was the signal for the rising of Phoebe, but this morning she lay and watched the shadows. She had awakened with a heavy feeling of despondency.

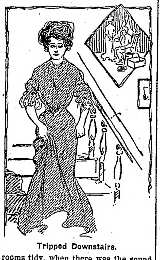
"I declare for it!" she exclaimed to herself, "I've a good mind not to get up at all. I ain't of any use in the world—an old maid, living here alone. Seems as if everybody else had somebody to do for—parents or husband or children or relations of some kind—at any rate, somebody they're necessary to and who'd miss 'em if they should die. But me!—I don't suppose any living being would shed a tear if I should die this minute. I shouldn't be missed any more'n one of the rocks over in the pasture—"

Phoebe stopped short in her monologue to listen. A faint "meaow" came from somewhere below.

"Coming, kittie," called Phoebe, and was out of bed before the words were out of her mouth.

It took her but a few minutes to dress, and then she tripped downstairs, for Phoebe was quick-motioned if she was 40.

She let the cat in, stooping to take him in her arms for a moment and pet and talk to him. "You've had to wait so long, Peterkin, I think I will give you an extra good breakfast," she said. The cat rubbed against her and showed his affection in all the ways possible to a cat, and when the saucer of food was set before him, purred loudly as he ate.



Tripped Downstairs.

Phoebe had hardly cleared away her breakfast and made her three small rooms tidy, when there was the sound of children's voices and a knock on the front door.

"Oh, Miss Percival, will you please give us some flowers for the teacher?" spoke up one of the children eagerly when she appeared.

"Bless your hearts, yes!" was the hearty response. There was a snip-snipping of Phoebe's scissors, and when the troop passed out of the yard with happy faces, each child had a fragrant little bouquet, and there was a chorus of "Thank you, Miss Percival."

"Precious few left," laughed Phoebe to herself. "But they'll blossom all the more for being picked, and what would be the use of having flowers if nobody wanted 'em?'

She was now ready for the day's work, which was to make a jacket and two pairs of knickerbockers for little Freddie Westall, from two old pairs of his papa's trousers, which his mamma had ripped and pressed.

"I think I'll make the seats and elbows double, seeing there's cloth enough," soliloquized Phoebe. "Freddie is so hard on his clothes and poor Mrs. Westall has so much to do, and then when they do come to holes the patches'll be right there all ready to hem down to."

The groceryman came as Phoebe finished cutting the jacket. He was a fresh, attractive-looking young man, and generally inclined to be sociable; but this morning he was very glum and said never a word as he wrote down Phoebe's order.

"Why, what have you done to your wrist?" she exclaimed suddenly.

"Cut it on Badger's old kerosene can, I guess. The dickens! I didn't know it was bleeding like that—on your clean floor, too!'

"Wait a minute and let me do it up for you. Never mind the floor."

"Oh, it's no matter. I can put my handkerchief about it."

But Phoebe insisted, and after washing the wounded wrist, wound it with soft white cloth. The young man looked down at her in silence till she began to fasten the end of the bandage, when he spoke abruptly:

"Say, Miss Percival! Suppose you'd been going with a girl steady for 'most two years, and all at once she left you in the lurch some Sunday night and went home from evening meeting with another fellow! Shouldn't you think yourself justified in never having anything more to say to her?"

"Why, I don't know," said Phoebe. "She may have done it just to tease, not meaning anything. No; I don't think I'd break an engagement for a little thing like that."

"Oh, but there wasn't any engagement—at least, nothing had ever been said—"

"Well," said Phoebe, as she took several unnecessary stitches, "if I had been going with a girl two years and never mentioned anything about being engaged, I should expect her to think my attentions didn't mean anything and she was free to go home with anybody she liked. Shouldn't you?"

The young man blushed. "I guess I've been something of a fool, Miss Percival," he said, with an embarrassed laugh. "I've been expecting folks to be mind-readers. Thank you for doing up my wrist."

Phoebe watched him as he went down the path. "I knew Nellie was feeling bad about something the last time she was here," she mused; "but I had other company and so she didn't say anything. It's queer what trifles will come between two people who really think the world of each other," and Phoebe sighed as she recalled the one romance of her own life.

The cutting out of Freddie Westall's clothes was done, and Phoebe was at her stitching machine, when Mrs. Gaines, her next neighbor, burst in at the door and sank into a chair. "Do you know how to put in a stove lining?" she asked, breathlessly. "John took mine out and then was called away and won't be home till noon; and just before he went he remembered to give me a letter he took out of the post office a week ago—and it's from my sister, and she's coming here to-day on the half-past ten train, and going off in the afternoon on her way home from the mountains, and her son and his wife are with her—and I've been canning tomatoes all the week and let everything else go—and I've been working every minute since I got the letter cleaning things up, and forgot all about the stove—"

"I'll go right back with you," Phoebe said promptly, and the two left the house together.

Phoebe was possessed of "gumption," and the stove lining was put in as quickly and as well as John could have done it.

"Now, Laura," she commanded, "you just run and change your dress and get ready for your company—'tis 'most 11 o'clock—and leave the dinner to me. I'll have it all on the table by 12, and run over afterward and wash up the dishes."

"Oh, it is too much—"

"No, it isn't!" Phoebe interrupted her. "What are neighbors for if not to be neighborly?"

So with a deep breath of relief Mrs. Gaines obeyed, and Phoebe set to work on the dinner.

Everything went off well, and at half-past one the dishes were washed and put away, and Phoebe was back at her machine.

Just before supper, Mrs. Gaines ran over for a minute to tell Phoebe how grateful she was. "My company had to go away at three o'clock," she said, "and if it hadn't been for you I should have had to stay in the kitchen most of the time and hardly seen my sister at all."

Phoebe hurried her sewing after supper, so that by half-past eight she was on her way down the road with Freddie Westall's completed garments over her arm.

Mrs. Westall gave a relieved sigh at sight of her. "I'm so glad they're finished," she exclaimed. "Some of the other children dared Freddie to go through a thicket of horse-briers and blackberry vines this afternoon down in the pasture, and his only pair of knickerbockers was torn to tatters. You couldn't stay and spend the evening, could you?" she asked wistfully as Phoebe rose to go. "I can't blame folks for not coming to see me, when I never get to see them; but I do get so lonesome—and my husband is away this evening, too."

"Why, I'll be glad to," asserted Phoebe, and the two sat and rocked and chatted till Mr. Westall came home at ten o'clock.

After Phoebe was home again and had locked up for the night, there came a quick knock at the door.

"Somebody must have been taken suddenly sick and sent for me," she thought as she drew the bolt and opened the door.

"Good evening, Miss Percival,' said a voice which she instantly recognized as that of the groceryman.

"I was going by home," the young man said, "and saw your light was burning, so I thought I'd stop and tell you that I acted on the hint you gave me this morning, and everything is all right. Nellie has said she'll marry me. We thought we'd like you to know about it first."

"Well, I am glad!" thought Phoebe, as she fastened the door again and went upstairs. "He's a likely fellow and she's a good girl. They'll never be sorry, either of 'em."

When Phoebe had put out her light she lay for awhile watching the leafy shadows on her curtains, cast this time by the newly-risen moon.

The despondency of the morning had given place to a quiet happiness that was soon merged in pleasant dreams.

In Very Many Cases It Is Weakened Kidneys.

Mrs. Frank Roseboom, 512 S. Washington St., Moscow, Idaho, says: "Inherited kidney trouble grew steadily worse with me until so nervous I could not sleep at night. I was dizzy and spots floated before my eyes. My back and hips ached and every cold settled on my kidneys and made me worse. I have used many different medicines and was discouraged when I began with Doan's Kidney Pills, but now the symptoms that alarmed me are gone."

TWO CURES OF ECZEMA

Baby Had Severe Attack—Grandfather Suffered Torments with It—Owe Recovery to Cuticura.

"In 1884 my grandson, a babe, had an attack of eczema, and after trying the doctors to the extent of heavy bills and an increase of the disease and suffering, I recommended Cuticura and in a few weeks the child was well. He is to-day a strong man and absolutely free from the disease. A few years ago I contracted eczema, and became an intense sufferer. A whole winter passed without once having on shoes, nearly from the knees to the toes being covered with virulent sores. I tried many doctors to no purpose. Then I procured the Cuticura Remedies and found immediate improvement and final cure. M. W. LaRue, 845 Seventh St., Louisville, Ky., Apr. 23 and May 14, '07."

Universal Language.

He spoke his love in German—she answered not a word. In French he tried to woo her—the maiden never heard. He tried his luck in English, in Irish—all in vain: in Greek, Turkish and Latin, and in the tongue of Spain. And then an inspiration came to the anguished youth. "The universal language," he cried, "I'll try, forsooth!" He kissed the demure maiden and pressed her to his breast; she understood that language, and—well, you know the rest.

David Belasco, the playwright and manager, was talking about matinee idols. "Strange," he said, "the fascination that they exert upon young girls. 'No,' growled the second bald head, 'but I've taken my best girl to the theater, and heard her rave all through the show about the leading man's heavenly hair.'"

Shortly Mr. Johnson was a multimillionaire.

From an Old Arithmetic.

These questions are from a London arithmetic of the year 1785:

A man, overtaking a maid driving a flock of geese, said to her: "How do you do, sweetheart? Where are you going with these thirty geese?" "No, sir," said she, "I have not thirty, but if I had as many more, half as many more and five geese besides I should have thirty."

A, B and C playing at hazard together, the money staked was 100 guineas; but, disagreeing, each seized as many as he could. A got a certain number, B as many as A and sixteen more and C the sixth part of both their sums. How many had each?

A gentleman going into a garden meets with some ladies and says to them, "Good morning to you ten fair maids." "Sir, you mistake," answered one of them. "We are not ten, but if we were twice as many more as we are we should be as many above ten as we are now under." How many were there?

The Hellenic Epicures.

Enormous feasts were spread at the Persian and other Asiatic courts, and the great Grecian conqueror of those regions was once or twice in his dazzling career more lavish than even the successor of Caesar. But it was not a regular habit with him, nor was reckless prodigality ever a vice of his nation. Of course there were exceptions, and that societies devoted to luxurious living existed in Athens we know from the works of Archestratus and Athenaeus, who wrote long poems to the glory of cookery. The Hellenic epicures were ingenious and often fantastic in their ideas, but were not, as a rule, guilty of gross extravagance They were fond of such conceits as having a whole pig served, one side roasted and the other boiled and stuffed with a great variety of delicacies, although the animal had never been cut or separated in any way. Their cooks were also skillful in preparing vegetables to taste like meat.

Welsh by Extraction.

In Lord Halsbury's young days, before he was solicitor general and before he even dreamed of becoming lord chancellor, he was the leader of the South Wales circuit. In this capacity he once fought very strenuously on behalf of a Welsh public authority and rather amused his listeners by the ardor with which he identified himself with the interests of the locality.

"Come, come," interposed the judge good naturedly, "you must not argue too much in that strain. You cannot make yourself out to be a Welshman, you know."

"Perhaps not," returned the future lord chancellor, "but I have made a good deal of money out of Welshmen in my time."

"Well, well," replied the judge, "we may call you a Welshman by extraction."—London Tit-Bits.

The Spanish Galleon.

Primarily the galleon was but a peaceful merchant ship, but by the irony of fate she became, almost from her inception, a center of the fiercest fighting. Square rigged and high of stem and stern, broad of bow and low of waist, with massive bulwarks and forecastle, and poop three and four decks high, she possessed a picturesque appearance, but little of sensible naval architecture. The stem was clumsy, broad and blunt and smashed heavily through the waves to the great detriment of speed. This and the towering stern presented such a surface to the wind that the difficulties of steering were quite formidable, and six or eight men at the wheel were not unusual. The method in this apparent madness of marine construction was the landlubber's instinct, still strong in men of the sea of those days, to reduce all naval maenuvers to the stand up and knock down tactics of the land fight on a common platform.—John C. Fitzpatrick in Scribner's.

Bluffed the Parson.

The former Lord Elphinstone's parish minister was a very scatter brained theologian and in his sermons often knew not the end from the beginning. One Sunday his lordship, in his customary sleeping, gave vent to an unmistakable snore. This was too much for the minister, who stopped and cried, "Waken, my Lord Elphinstone!"

A grunt followed, and then his lordship answered, "I'm no sleepin', minister."

"But ye are sleepin'. I wager ye dinna ken what I said last," exclaimed the pastor.

"Ou, aye," returned the peer. "Ye said, 'Waken, my Lord Elphinstone.'"

"Aye, aye!" said the minister. "But I wager ye dinna ken what I said last afore that."

"Tuts," replied the nobleman promptly. "I'll wager ye dinna ken yersel'."—Dundee Advertiser.

Instead of Cutting Corks.

After withdrawing a cork from a bottle the former rapidly expands, and when one wishes to replace it one frequently finds that it has become too large for the purpose. The usual remedy in such cases is to pare pieces off the side. This, however, is seldom satisfactory, for the cork, as a rule, is far from airtight, and in some cases will not even keep the liquid in. A better way is to place it on the floor and roll it backward and forward with one's foot, putting a certain amount of pressure on it. After a few minutes of this persuasive treatment it will have become fairly soft and can be inserted in the bottle without difficulty.

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES.

Result of 15 years experience in tire making. No danger from THORNS, CACTUS, PINS, NAILS, TACKS or GLASS. Serious punctures, like intentional knife cuts, can be vulcanized like any other tire.

Two Hundred Thousand pairs now in actual use. Over Seventy-five Thousand pairs sold last year.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road thus overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump and two Sampson metal puncture closers on full paid orders (these metal puncture closers to be used in case of intentional knife cuts or heavy gashes). Tires to be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination.

We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. Ask your Postmaster, Banker, Express or Freight Agent or the Editor of this paper about us. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a small trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

COASTER-BRAKES, built-up-wheels, saddles, pedals, parts and repairs, and everything in the bicycle line are sold by us at half the usual prices charged by dealers and repair men. Write for our big SUNDRY catalogue.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

That Printing Injunction.

The injunction proceedings brought in the name of H. E. Ives to prevent the PIONEER from doing the county printing, was up before Judge Watts at Crookston on Tuesday evening.

Attorney C. E. Boughton, for the plaintiff, presented what he claimed to be a copy of the proceedings in letting the county printing. This alleged copy failed to show that a resolution had been passed designating an official paper, but Mr Boughton wanted the court to accept it as being correct. Vaule & Murphy, on behalf of the PIONEER, promptly entered a protest and branded the alleged copy as a fake and stated that the resolution had been duly passed. As neither the county attorney or the auditor were present the hearing was adjourned until next Monday evening. The official record shows that the resolution was passed and a certified copy will be produced next Monday evening.

Leap Year Basket Party.

A Leap Year Basket Party will be given at the old cheese factory building in Garnes on next Saturday evening. The proceeds of the party will go the fund started by the PIONEER a year ago for the purpose of building a good road across the swamp between Plummer and Garnes. There will be a good time, there being plenty of room to accomodate a large crowd and lots of room for teams. A general invitation is extended to all to attend and enjoy themselves.

The fund to which this money will be given was started a year ago by the PIONEER for the purpose of building a good graded road across the swamp east of Plummer. A considerable sum of money was raised at that time and was turned over to a commitee consisting of John A. Dolen of Plummer, Olaf Tande, of Garnes, and Lewis Sall of Equality. The deep snow last winter prevented much of the work from being done but this spring there will be a lot of work put in on this road. The commitee has turned this fund over to Mr. Tande, who has given a bond running to the village of Plummer for the proper expenditure of the money for the use named. This is a matter in which everybody in the territory east of Plummer and in the village is greatly interested and it is hoped that there will be a liberal patronage at the party. Everybody come and help the good work along. It means a lot to the developement of the country east of Plummer.

Every lady is requested to bring a basket and every gentleman is urged to bring a well filled pocket book.

Everything In Proportion.

For many weeks the irritable merchant had been riveted to his bed by typhoid fever. Now he was convalescing. He clamored for something to eat, declaring that he was starving.

"Tomorrow you may have something to eat," promised the doctor. The merchant realized that there would be a restraint to his appetite, yet he saw in vision a modest steaming meal placed at his bedside.

"Here is your dinner," said the nurse next day as she gave the glowering patient a spoonful of tapioca pudding. "and the doctor emphasizes that everything else you do must be in the same proportion."

Two hours later the nurse heard a frantic call from the bedchamber.

"Nurse," breathed the man heavily. "I want to do some reading. Bring me a postage stamp."—Harper's Weekly.

THE THAW TRIAL.

District Attorney Jerome's long and severe cross-examination of Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw at the trial of her husband came to an end and the attorneys for the defense placed in evidence a letter written by the defendant in the fall of 1903 which completely corroborated the claim that the girl who was to become his wife did tell him the story of her relations with Stanford White much as she has related it upon the stand at this and the former trial.

Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw told her story for the second time. The repetition lacked the vitality of the first recital, but the great crowd in the courtroom, which Justice Dowling had refused to exclude, listened intently. District Attorney Jerome then subjected the witness to a pitiless cross-examination.

Both Evelyn Thaw, the wife, and Mrs. William Thaw, the mother of the defendant, were on the witness stand, and just as the former was about to relate anew the story of her life, as she told it to Thaw in Paris in 1903, District Attorney Jerome arose and suggested that in the interest of public morals all persons save those immediately interested in the case should be excluded from the courtroom during the recital of what he termed "a horrible tale." The defense agreed and Justice Dowling adjourned court for two days, when, he said, he would decide the matter.

Harry Thaw's mother arrived in New York to testify in his defense. More evidence as to his irrational actions was presented.

ITCHING HUMOR ON BOY

His Hands Were a Solid Mass, and Disease Spread All Over Body —Cured in 4 Days By Cuticura.

"One day we noticed that our little boy was all broken out with itching sores. We first noticed it on his little hands. His hands were not as bad then, and we didn't think anything serious would result. But the next day we heard of the Cuticura Remedies being so good for itching sores. By this time the disease had spread all over his body, and his hands were nothing but a solid mass of this itching disease. I purchased a box of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment, and that night I took the Cuticura Soap and lukewarm water and washed him well. Then I dried him and took the Cuticura Ointment and anointed him with it. I did this every evening and in four nights he was entirely cured. Mrs. Frank Donahue, 208 Fremont St., Kokomo, Ind., Sept. 16, 1907."

Novel Trio.

"Do you like ensemble music?" the city girl asked young Nathan Hobbs of Willowby, who was trying to entertain her at the church "social." Nathan looked bewildered.

"Oh, nonsense! Why, father likes you. Didn't I hear him say that you were good enough to eat?"

"H'm! That's just the reason why he might try to pepper me."

BANISHED

Coffee Finally Had to Go.

The way some persons cling to coffee even after they know it is doing them harm, is a puzzler. But it is an easy matter to give it up for good, when Postum Food Coffee is properly made and used instead.

A girl writes: "Mother had been suffering with nervous headaches for seven weary years, but kept drinking coffee.

"One day I asked her why she did not give up coffee as a cousin of mine had done who had taken to Postum. But Mother was such a slave to coffee she thought it would be terrible to give it up.

"Finally, one day, she made the change to Postum, and quickly her headaches disappeared. One morning while she was drinking Postum so freely and with such relish I asked for a taste.

"That started me on Postum and I now drink it more freely than I did coffee, which never comes into our house now.

"A girl friend of mine, one day, saw me drinking Postum and asked if it was coffee. I told her it was Postum and gave her some to take home, but forgot to tell her how to make it.

"The next day she said she did not see how I could drink Postum. I found she had made it like ordinary coffee. So I told her how to make it right and gave her a cupful I made, after boiling it fifteen minutes. She said she never drank any coffee that tasted as good, and now coffee is banished from both our homes." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Michigan.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

Averts a Panic.

Duluth.—James J. Laudergan, stage manager at the Lyceum theater, did the right thing at the right time and avoided a possible panic at a critical time in the progress of the show, "The Rollicking Girl." An audience, with the terrible disaster at Boyertown, Pa., fresh in mind, saw a serpent of flame shoot up above the stage but before a panic could be started the fire was extinguished in a rather remarkable manner by Mr. Laudergan.

There is a swinging scene in the play in which girls occupy swings wrapped in imitation moss, illuminated by electric lights. One of the light bulbs burst and instantly the moss was in flames.

In the moment of suspense, big James Laudergan walked calmly upon the stage, and as if it were what he was accustomed to do every day seized the burning rope, climbed it hand over hand until he reached the fire and extinguished it with his bare hands.

He descended and walked off the stage as calmly as he had entered it, although his hands had suffered in extinguishing the fire.

This Deer Needs a Lid.

McKinley.—The people of McKinley believe this town has the most wonderful deer in existence. The animal is the property of Joseph Ahlin, village alderman, and could easily be made an issue in the nature-faking discussion. This animal is one of two deserted doe fawns that were picked up in the woods near here early in the spring.

In its earliest infancy the animal displayed a pugnacious disposition, and later through the connivance of local persons acquired a taste for lager beer. Now the deer visits certain saloons daily, has knocked down and badly injured a boy that teased it, has whipped a terrier dog belonging to the mayor, Dr. J. C. Farmer, has made trips of a week into the woods and then returned safely to town, and in addition has won the hearts of the people, who vow vengeance on the hunter who shoots her.

Narrow Escape.

St. Paul.—Five little children had a narrow escape from burning to death when the home of Elmer Dazelle, So. St. Paul, was completely destroyed by fire, the result of a gasoline explosion. The house was burned to the ground and only a few pieces of furniture were saved.

The little children were playing in an adjoining room when the stove exploded, it is thought, from a leak. Mrs. Dazelle, who was getting supper, made a rush for her little ones, and by the time she had taken two of them outside of the house the flames had spread into the room where the others were. Grabbing them the best she could the frantic mother dragged the small children out of the burning house just as the flames took possession of the room. The family was taken care of by the neighbors.

Income From Mines.

St. Paul.—State Treasurer C. C. Dinehart received about $12,000 in checks for royalties on ore taken from mines owned by the state and other sources made the total about $37,000. The Consumers' Oil company of Cleveland contributed $8,560.87 in royalties and the Albert Iron company $3,831.64. These amounts cover the royalties on ore taken out during the last quarter of 1907.

The grain inspection department turned in $16,655.35, and the hay inspection department $309.75.

A check for $7,475 was received from the federal government for aid for the soldiers' home.

Those Dams.

Washington.—So much interest has been awakened in the various propositions advanced for modifying the project relating to the dams in the Mississippi river between St. Paul and Minneapolis and the utilization, if possible, of the surplus water for power purposes that efforts have been made by Representative Stevens and Nye to obtain from the engineer officers of the war department expressions as to the existing status of the improvement, and what would be necessary in the way of legislation to accomplish the objects desired.

The manager of an old London watch-making firm says that he saw them more than 14 years ago. Queen Victoria had three or four. The simplest ones—a plain gold ring, with the watch inserted—cost about $100, but with diamonds or other stones, $5,000 to $10,000 may be paid.

REV. GEORGE A.E. TROUTMAN.

I would be obliged to gasp for breath.

"I finally concluded that it was some catarrhal affection which probably excited the spasm. It interfered with my vocation as a preacher, attacking me occasionally in the pulpit.

"I had heard so much about Peruna as a catarrh remedy that I determined to try it. After taking two bottles, my trouble has disappeared. I feel sure that Peruna has greatly benefitted me."

Rev. P. E. Swanstrom, Swedish Baptist Pastor, Box 228, Grantsburg, Wis., writes that from the use of Peruna he is perfectly well, entirely cured of chronic diarrhea and catarrh.

WHEELS OF FORTUNE

By JOHN CARRINGTON

(Copyright.)

The sound of my tires crunching the gravel of the drive as I approached the Michelson home brought a figure into the porch. I recognized Maule, a man I dislike, and whom I am everlastingly meeting when I least expect it.

"Hallo!" he cried, as I drew up. "What have you got there?"

"I believe it is usually known as an automobile," I said as dryly as I knew how. "Ever seen one?"

For answer he walked round the car, lifted the cover of the engine and gave it a critical glance, inspected the lubricating rack, and generally investigated my new machine in what I regarded as an offensive manner.

It was on the tip of my tongue to tell him what I thought of his impertinence, when Michelson came out.

"By Jove, Challoner, that's a fine car!" he exclaimed as he shook hands. "What do you call it?"

I gave him the maker's name, and went on with a good deal of pride to explain the beauties and merits of my new purchase. I suppose I became a bit technical over sight feeds, helically-cut teeth of gear wheels, multiple disc clutches and so on, for he stopped me.

"All Greek to me, old chap; but it will interest Maule. He's brought his car down as well."

"Can't say that it does," drawled Maule. "I went into all that when I bought my car at Olympia—the first one they exhibited."

"Ah, yes; made for show, I suppose," I countered.

Confound Maule! His superciliousness gets on my nerves. Besides, I had thought to create a sensation with the latest novelty in motor construction, and here was my bete noir forestalling me!

By the time we reached the coachhouse, where I ranged my machine alongside of Maule's, I was in the worst of humors. The two cars were like a couple of dark green peas in a pod—identical down to the very lamps! I think Michelson saw my chagrin, for he hurried me away to the house, where, in the society of Mrs. Michelson and her daughter Wis, who is an especial favorite of mine, I temporarily forgot Maule and the irritation he was the cause of.

Wis looked prettier than ever, a result partly due, I fancied, to the presence of a bright young naval lieutenant named Bevan, who was of the house party. While we were at tea, Tommy, Michelson's son and heir, came in.

"How are you, Uncle Bob?" he asked. (I am only Tommy's uncle by courtesy.) He offered me a hand black with grease and dirt. "I've just been looking at your auto. It's exactly like Mr. Maule's."

"That's the only similarity between us, Tommy," I observed, eluding his grimy paw. "And it's easily altered," I added, making a mental note to effect a change in the appearance of my car at the earliest possible moment.

Tommy, like most 12-year-olds, is given to mechanical pursuits. He loves pulling such things as lawnmowers and clocks to pieces, and indiscriminately refitting them with the spare parts that he finds left over. So I thought it best to caution him against experiments with my motor.

"Oh, that's all right," he promised. "I won't touch the machinery."

At dinner time it was obvious to me that Wis and young Bevan had a strong partiality for one another, and that Mrs. Michelson did not approve of it. Indeed, when alone with her I expressed a favorable opinion of the sailor, she became confidential on the subject.

"Of course, you see how things are," she began. "That's why I asked you down. I want your advice. Mr. Bevan is very nice, well connected, and all that, but it will be years before he has anything to live on besides his pay; and I shouldn't be doing my duty as a mother if I were to countenance such a reckless match."

"What does Michelson say?" I asked.

"Oh, Horace is simply—well, you know what men are! He likes Mr. Bevan, and won't do anything."

Mrs. Michelson was evidently distressed. I began to wish I hadn't come. First it was Maule, now I was to be dragged into a domestic disagreement that would leave me in bad color with one side or the other if I showed favor to either. I temporized.

"How about arbitration? It's the fashion, you know," I insinuated.

"Don't talk nonsense, Robert," was all the encouragement that suggestion got, and I had to soothe Mrs. Michelson with vague promises to help. I said I wanted time to think things over.

I don't think my manner impressed her much. I confess I didn't feel any confidence in my judicial powers. I was too fond of Wis to be impartial. I should make a rotten judge.

And when, next morning, the young couple caught me alone in the library, and, pouring out their woes, asked for sympathy, I'm ashamed to say they got it.

"You're a couple of young idiots," I thought it policy to protest, but they saw through my pretended severity and laughed at it.

A sort of armed neutrality obtained among all the parties concerned during the next three days. Mrs. Michelson kept silence, and Michelson, as usual, did nothing.

During the period of amnesty we did a good deal of motoring. Wis and Bevan generally patronized my machine. The sailor showed tremendous interest in it, and I gave him a few driving lessons.

Those three days of peace, however, came to a sudden end, thanks to Maule. Everybody, with the expection of Michelson and myself, had gone to bed.

"Bevan has got his sailing orders," said Michelson abruptly, breaking a drowsy silence. "I suppose you know all about it, though?"

"Not all. What's the matter now?" I asked.

"I've had to put my foot down. Not that I wanted to, mind you. I like Bevan. But what with Grace everlastingly nagging, and then Maule—"

"Blame Maule!" I interjected.

"I do. I've done nothing else all the evening. What the deuce did he want to interfere for? Things would have straightened themselves out if he hadn't put his finger in the pie. As it is, I've been driven to telling Bevan that he'll have to wait for Wis until he's got promotion. It's cut the poor girl up fearfully."

I said certain things about Maule that ought to have interfered with his sleep.

"And Bevan's off?" I asked finally.

"First thing in the morning, I'm sorry to say," lamented Michelson as he went up to bed.

We were a dismal lot at breakfast next morning—that is, those of us who were present. Bevan's place was, of course, empty, and nobody showed surprise at the absence of Wis.

We had barely begun the meal when a scared-looking maid came in asking if she could speak to her mistress. Mrs. Michelson, infected by the girl's nervous manner, paled as she went out of the room. There ensued a whispered conversation in the hall, and then I heard a hurried ascent of the stairs.

A couple of minutes later, Mrs. Michelson tottered in with a letter in one hand and the other held over the region of her heart.

Michelson jumped up. "What's the matter?" he asked.

"Wis!" cried his wife faintly. "She's gone! This letter—!" She held it out.

Michelson snatched and read it. "Bolted with Bevan!" he whispered.

"Bolted?" echoed Maule. "But how—when—where?"

"Motor car, I'll bet!" exclaimed Tommy with his mouth full.

There ensued one of those short, silent pauses that mark the progress of a crisis. Then Maule and I simultaneously jumped to our feet and raced for the coachhouse. One car stood in it, and the distinguishing number showed it to be—Maule's!

"As I thought," he observed cynically.

"Oh, go to blazes!" I shouted.

He went off with a shrug of the shoulders that was, in itself, an indictment, leaving me a prey to more painful emotions than I can express. It was bad enough to be suspected of conniving at the elopement when I was innocent, but to have lost my precious automobile into the bargain was insupportable. In imagination I saw it—a wreck! I knew, intuitively, how Bevan was at that very moment driving it. I could see him! I conjured up a repair bill that ran into hundreds. This was my reward for sympathizing with a lovesick girl and a dishonest sailor.

"Never again!" I cried, jealously regarding Maule's spick and span car. I could have smashed it.

A step behind me made me turn. It was Tommy.

"Well?" I glared.

Tommy pointed to the car, and doubled himself up in silent laughter. This was too much!

"How dare you?" I cried, seizing him by the ear.

"It's—it's not old Malue's," he gurgled. "It's yours! And h—he doesn't know!"

"How—what do you mean?" I stammered.

"I unscrewed the number-plates—last night—and changed em."

"Lord!" I gasped. "Do you mean it?"

"Honest injun," declared Tommy.

To make certain that he was not getting at me I looked at the machine numbers. That settled it. I had not danced for years, but the fandango that I broke into on the spot would have turned Genee green with envy.

Maule's face, with wonder depicted all over it, came round the edge of the door.

It took us quite five minutes to explain things to him, and even then he did not believe us until, like me, he had seen the manufacturer's number on the chassis. After that we had to bring him round with brandy.

Michelson got a wire late in the afternoon announcing the marriage of the runaways at Dover by special license. At the end of half an hour alone with his wife he dispatched a long message full of forgiveness and blessings.

I had a wire as well. "Thanks awfully for car. Left part at Canterbury, rest at Warden. Hope you don't mind. Love—Wis," it ran. I passed it over to Maule while I wired back: "Don't mention it. Good luck."

I never heard anybody groan like Maule.

The American Author.

The chief thing in the average American novel is the amazing vitality of the author. He writes always at the top of his voice. His strenuousness is unceasing. The reader can almost see the swollen veins on his forehead, the tight drawn mouth and flashing eye. It is do it or die. And he never knows where to stop. With his feverish anxiety to make points he does not seem to realize when he has achieved his purpose and frequently fizzles out ineffectively. He has ideas. He has vast quantities of material. He has a command of language, a fatal fluency that frequently leads to his downfall, for he lacks a sense of values. He lacks self restraint. He is full of tricks and artfulness, but he is not an artist.—London Saturday Review.

Well Preserved.

"I told Miss Knox today," said he, "that the only word that properly described you was 'peach.'"

"Indeed?" replied Miss Bute. "I suppose she said something 'real nice,' as usual?"

"Well, she said: 'I suppose that is the proper word. At any rate, she looks well preserved.'"—Philadelphia Press.

Lively Cheese.

"The taste in cheese has grown more delicate on the continent," said a Paris chef. "A cream cheese raw is now our favorite, whereas in the past we demanded cooked cheeses of the greatest harshness and strength. Why"—

The chef laughed.

"Why," he said, "when I was at the Petit Riche many years ago a remarkable thing happened, a thing that indicates the sort of cheeses that in the past were eaten. A patron seated at a corner table in the Petit Riche called suddenly to the waiter:

"'Baptiste, take away this cheese!'

"Baptiste approached.

"'Pardon me, sir,' he said in his polite way, 'but can I fetch you something else?'

"The patron made a gesture of impatience.

"'Take this away first, hang it!' he exclaimed.

"'Yes, sir; very good, sir,' said Baptiste. 'We have some fine Gorgonzola or perhaps the Gruyere'—

"'Great Scott!' the other interrupted. 'If you don't take this stuff away at once I'll send for the police.'

"'I am vey sorry, sir,' said Baptiste. 'Is there anything wrong with it?'

"'Wrong!' shouted the guest. 'Why, it's eating all my bread!'"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Cured by a Typewriter.

Constant companionship with a typewriting machine has a soothing and elevating influence on a man. No hard drinker, for instance, can use a typewriter. His nerves must be in good order or he will strike the wrong letters and mangle up his copy. There is a case of this kind which led to the reformation of a man. He was a typewriter and stenographer for a law firm. He was a good all around man, but he would go on the spree occasionally. This the head of the firm did not like, so he thought he would teach him a lesson. The stenographer was a methodical man, and he went on the "skate" at stated times in the year. When he returned on one occasion his employer had the machine all fixed for him. He had had the letters changed so that when you struck "h," for instance, it would print "x," and so on. The stenographer came back feeling rather shaky, anyhow, and when he wrote off his first letter the result was appalling. He began to tremble. The boss kindly sent him to the Adirondacks to brace up. The cure was complete. He never touched liquor again as long as he lived.—Brooklyn Citizen.

Litigation is a process by which at best we win a cat and lose a cow.—Chinese Proverb.

Possum.

Preferably possum should be cooked over a wood fire in a log cabin and seasoned with the odorous blue smoke of hickory and ash as the lid of the oven is lifted now and again to give a glimpse of the promised viand to those who wait with whetted appetite for the coming feast. With the possum and taters there should be served either the ordinary Kentucky corn pone—if such an adjective may be not improperly applied to anything so rare—or the Olympian cracklin' bread of the hog killing season. In justice to the possum it must be said that neither corn pone nor crackling bread is necessary, but it serves well not only to mop up the gravy, but also to prevent the possum and the yams from melting in the mouth too rapidly for the flavor to be enjoyed in the fullest. The finest possums on earth are found in the woodlands of the Pennyrile district of Kentucky, and they reach perfection about the time the perfumed pawpaw becomes so ripe that it falls from the parent stem and reposes in all of its golden beauty in the orange tinted leaves that the earth has first claimed as tribute from the trees for her enrichment. — Louisville Courier-Journal.

American Temperament and Art.

The majority of the men and women who gave American life its form and direction were not the children of an artistic race, though they were the heirs of a great literature. They descended from a people who have never pursued art as an end and whose first instinctive expression in meeting great experiences has never been artistic, but who have never divorced action from vision nor failed in the long run to match power in action with some kind of beauty in speech. From its English ancestry the country has inherited an ingrained and ineffaceable idealism of nature, which enormous tasks and hitherto incredible prosperity have at times smothered and blighted, but never destroyed. From other races have come richer temperament, quicker sensibilities, craving for joy and love of beauty for its own sake, which have already immensely enriched American art and are subsoiling American life.—Hamilton Mable in Atlantic.

His Diagnosis.

A London curate the other day received an astonishing answer to an inquiry after a parishioner's health. "Well, sir," said the parishioner, "sometimes I feels anyhow, sometimes I feels nohow and there be times when I feels as [illegible]."

$8.50 PUNCTURE-PROOF TIRES ONLY $4.80 PER PAIR

Regular Price $8.50 per pair. To Introduce We Will Sell You a Sample Pair for Only $4.80

(CASH WITH ORDER $4.55)

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES.

Result of 15 years experience in tire making. No danger from THORNS, CACTUS, PINS, NAILS, TACKS or GLASS. Serious punctures, like intentional knife cuts, can be vulcanized like any other tire.

Two Hundred Thousand pairs now in actual use. Over Seventy-five Thousand pairs sold last year.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road thus overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump and two Sampson metal puncture closers on full paid orders (these metal puncture closers to be used in case of intentional knife cuts or heavy gashes). Tires to be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination.

We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. Ask your Postmaster, Banker, Express or Freight Agent or the Editor of this paper about us. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a small trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

COASTER-BRAKES, built-up-wheels, saddles, pedals, parts and repairs, and everything in the bicycle line are sold by us at half the usual prices charged by dealers and repair men. Write for our big SUNDRY catalogue.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

THE INJUNCTION IS DENIED

Judge Watts Refuses to Issue Restraining Order and The PIONEER Will Do County Printing.

On Thursday Judge Watts handed down his decision denying the application for an injunction to restrain the Plummer Pioneer from doing the official county printing in Red Lake county.

These injunction proceedings were brought in the name of H. E. Ives, publisher of the St. Hilaire Spectator whose bid for doing the county printing was turned down by the county board when the bid of C. W. Latta, publisher of the Pioneer, was accepted. The hearing on the motion for a temporary injunction came up before the court at Crookston on Tuesday evening, Jan. 21st, but was adjourned until last Monday evening to allow the defendants to put in evidence as to the action of the county board in letting the printing. The plaintiff's attorney set up the claim that the board had not passed the necessary resolution designating the official paper. The defendant claimed that the board had passed this resolution and a certified copy of the proceedings produced at the adjourned hearing on Monday evening proved that the defendant had alleged the facts as they happened. A certified copy of the Pioneer's contract was also produced which showed that the contract had been properly executed and filed before the injunction proceedings had been commenced. The ruling of the court on all these points were favorable to the Pioneer and the only matter left to be determined was whether or not the Pioneer was a legal newspaper. The subscription list of this paper was brougdt into court and C. W. Latta, the publisher, was examined and cross-examined regarding every subscriber which could be questioned. This occupied all day Tuesday and on the same evening the arguments were finished. The court took the matter under consideration and on Thursday handed down a decision sustaining the Pioneer.

In starting these proceedings Mr. Ives evidently didn't stop to consider what the result might be to himself in case the Pioneer should lose out. We managed the Spectator for Mr. Ives for about three years and during all that time the Spectator did not have within several of the total number of subscribers which the Pioneer had during the past two or three years and has at preasant. But during most of this time the Spectator was the official paper of Red Lake county. Since then the saw mill and lots of people have moved away from St. Hilaire and it is a question if the Spectator's subscription list has not moved away some with the rest. Still the Spectator has been the official county paper until this year.

Last July Mr. Ives undertook to give us some good advice and we take pleasure in quoting his own words for his benefit. Among other things he said "If Editor Latta will take advice from one who has seen all kinds of trouble, he will bunch his differences, call off his damage suit, settle up all his troubles and start all over again in a less pugnacious manner." We suggest that Mr. Ives listen to his own advice. It may be of benefit to him.

The Thaw trial was adjourned because witnesses from Europe were delayed by the Atlantic coast storm.

Justice Dowling decided to limit each side in the Thaw trial to three expert witnesses and two of the defense's trio were heard as to the facts of the mental and physical examinations they made of Harry Thaw in the Tombs prison.

What Becomes of the Coke?

A teacher was explaining to her class the various ways in which gas is obtained.

"Much of the gas we use is extracted from coal," she said, "and after the gas has been taken out, the coal becomes coke. In some parts of this country gas is obtained by boring deep holes in the ground and such gas is called natural gas."

"Does the natural gas come from the fires down in the bad place?" inquired a boy eagerly. "If it does, what does Satan do with all the coke he has left?"

CORTELYOU REPORTS FACTS ON FINANCES

REPLIES TO SENATE RESOLUTION REGARDING AWARD OF PANAMA BONDS.

TELLS OF OWN ACTS AS THE SECRETARY

Document Given to Senators in Printed Form and Laid on Desks—Members of Upper House Object to That Plan of Procedure.

Washington, Jan. 30.—The reply of Secretary Cortelyou to the senate resolution calling for information concerning the operations of the treasury department in connection with the recent financial crisis was laid before the senate Wednesday by the vice-president. The document was not read, but a printed copy of it was on the desk of each senator and nearly all of them at once gave it his attention. Senator Culberson inquired of the vice-president whether the pamphlet contained all of the secretary's communication. The vice-president said he had not examined the report and did not know whether the pamphlet contained all of the message. "I do not recall an instance," said Senator Culberson, "in which a head of a department of the government has answered a senate resolution in printed form."

Review Financial Crisis.

Before analyzing the crisis and setting forth his official actions in regard to it, Secretary Cortelyou gives a summary of the occurrences in the financial world from the time he assumed charge as secretary of the treasury until the time the special report was was compiled. He states that business conditions were becoming unsettled when he became financial member of the cabinet in March, 1907. Various stringencies occurred prior to August, but were relieved promptly. A plan of weekly deposits of government funds in various banks was begun August 28. By October 14 these deposits had reached $28,000,000.

In October occurred the stirring events in New York which culminated in the closing of the Knickerbocker Trust Company and the decision of the banks to issue clearing-house certificates. The treasury transferred to national banks within a few days the sum of $35,000,000, and transmitted to New York within three days about $36,000,000 in small bills.

Much Clearing-House Paper.

In New York city alone, the report shows, clearing-house certificates were issued in excess of $100,000,000. By the middle of November the treasury had met the demand for relief to the extent that the working balance was reduced to approximately $5,000,000. It being apparent that no further deposits could be made safely, banks were permitted to substitute bonds suitable for savings bank investments for government bonds which were held as security against public deposits. Government bonds thus were released as security for additional bank note circulation.

After the issue of Panama bonds and one-year treasury certificates the bank note circulation began to increase until it stood at $690,130,895 December 31, as against $607,118,742 October 15. January 18, 1908, the issue had reached $695,927,806.

New Securities Create Change.

"Announcement of the issuance of new securities by the treasury," says Mr. Cortelyou, "marked in some degree the turning point of the panic. No further steps were considered necessary except to continue the deposit of public moneys for a time where they were available, and early in December it became possible to replenish the cash in the treasury through the withdrawal of about $6,000,000 from national banks in New York city. This was followed January 22 by another call for $10,000,000 from New York banks. This will be followed soon by a call on outside banks based upon local conditions rather than upon a fixed percentage of their holdings of public money."

Currency Disappears.

The amount of currency which disappeared from circulation from the time of the suspension of the Knickerbocker Trust Company until confidence was practically restored in December is stated to be approximately $296,000,000. This amounted substantially to one-tenth of the entire estimated money in circulation in the United States.

The secretary of the treasury touches upon the gravity of the situation abroad as well as in this country and gives figures concerning exports of merchandise to show the energy with which the economic resources of the country were devoted to the relief of the situation, the excess of exports over imports rising from $1,464,404 in August, 1907, to $114,890,665 in December, 1907.

Flames Fatal to Two.

Hartshorne, Okla., Jan. 30.—Howard Ratliff and his young son were burned to death in the destruction by fire of their home here. Ratliff saved four children and lost his own life when he returned for the fifth which he was unable to locate.

Kentucky Reverend Dead.

Hopkinsville, Ky., Jan. 20.—Rev. John W. Venebal, for many years pastor of Grace Episcopal church here, and for the past 40 years sovereign grand chaplain of the Odd Fellows in the United States, died Wednesday.

The Cause of Many Sudden Deaths.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, causing catarrh of the bladder, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell.

Bladder troubles almost always result from a derangement of the kidneys and a cure is obtained quickest by a proper treatment of the kidneys. If you are feeling badly you can make no mistake by taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful new discovery and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

"'Tain't my fault, my dear. They'd all gone, and I didn't have any one to talk to!"

Sad Memories.

The commuter handed the brakeman a five-cent cigar.

"Say, George," he said, "why does the engine always let off such a heart-rending howl just as we pass Long Oak?"

George shook his head sadly.

"Ah," said he, "it was here that the engineer, poor fellow, first met his wife."

Had Done His Best.

Uncle Hosea did not feel able to contribute more than 75 cents to the missionary cause, and was not particularly enthusiastic about giving even that.

"You ought to give as the Lord has prospered you," said Deacon Ironside.

"I don't think the Lord'll ever accuse me of bein' ungrateful," answered Uncle Hosea. "Six of my boys is preachers."

Neatly Put.

Homer Folks, the secretary of the State Charity Aid society of New York, referred in a recent address to the awkwardness that charity workers feel in making public appeals for funds.

"And few charity workers," Mr. Folks added, "can carry off that awkwardness with the neatness of the colored preacher who reminded his congregation that:

"'Brudren, Ah kain't preach hyah an' board in heb'n.'"

What Hubby Missed.

"I was telephoning the other night," said the girl, "and a voice crossed mine, a whispering voice. I couldn't help wondering what the game was.

"'What are you whispering for?' I asked.

"'Hush,' she said, still in the whisper. 'I'm trying to talk under my breath. I don't want my husband to hear. Please get off the wire. Won't you?'

"I got off the wire, but I couldn't sleep very well that night for wondering what it was she didn't want her husband to hear."

CUBS' FOOD

They Thrive on Grape-Nuts.

Healthy babies don't cry and the well-nourished baby that is fed on Grape-Nuts is never a crying baby. Many babies who cannot take any other food relish the perfect food, Grape-Nuts, and get well.

"My little baby was given up by three doctors who said that the condensed milk on which I fed her had ruined the child's stomach. One of the doctors told me that the only thing to do would be to try Grape-Nuts, so I got some and prepared it as follows: I soaked 1½ tablespoonfuls in one pint of cold water for half an hour, then I strained off the liquid and mixed 12 teaspoonfuls of this strained Grape-Nuts juice with six teaspoonfuls of rich milk, put in a pinch of salt and a little sugar, warmed it and gave it to baby every two hours.

"In this simple, easy way I saved baby's life and have built her up to a strong healthy child, rosy and laughing. The food must certainly be perfect to have such a wonderful effect as this. I can truthfully say I think it is the best food in the world to raise delicate babies on, and is also a delicious healthful food for grown-ups as we have discovered in our family."

Grape-Nuts is equally valuable to the strong, healthy man or woman. It stands for the true theory of health. "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

Says Tax Law Defeated.

Duluth—That the tax amendment was not ratified and adopted by a majority of the electors voting at the general election in Minnesota last November and the good roads amendment was ratified and adopted by a majority of such electors is the substance of a decision filed in the district court of St. Louis county by Judge Homer B. Dibell of the Eleventh judicial district.

The decision is filed in the contest case instituted by Samuel G. McGonaghy, an elector of Duluth, and F. A. Watkins, an elector of Carlton county, contesting the decision of the state canvassing board that the tax amendment was adopted and the roads and bridge amendment rejected by the electors at the election held last November.

The two contest cases were instituted at the instance of the real estate exchange of Duluth, which organization raised funds and employed counsel to press the contest. The contestants were represented by H. H. Phelps of this city, assisted at the trial by C. O. Baldwin. The state canvassing board was represented by Assistant Attorney George Simpson. An attempt was made to have the last legislature take steps to provide for the expense of a recount, but it failed.

Supposed Woman a Man.

St. Peter—"Doc" Welsh, living near Springfield, received the surprise of his life the other night. A short distance from the outskirts of the town he was held up by a woman, and when he had grappled with his assailant he found that the supposed feminine road agent was a man disguised by woman's clothing.

Welsh had sold some stock to a Springfield dealer, and as he was returning home a "woman" jumped into his wagon, pointed a revolver at his head and demanded his money. The farmer replied that he had none, but was assured that he would be killed if he did not produce.

Ducking the muzzle of the revolver, Welsh closed with the highwayman and it was then that he made the discovery that he was dealing with a man. For a moment the two struggled in the box of the wagon and then they fell to the ground, the team taking fright and running away. Welsh released himself from the clutches of his assailant and took to his heels, and his antagonist disappeared in the opposite direction.

Minnesota Leads.

St. Paul—"Three Kingdoms of a Great State" is the title of a neat pamphlet published by George Welsh, state commissioner of immigration, containing a vast amount of information about the resources of Minnesota. The three kingdoms referred to are the animal, the vegetable and the mineral kingdoms, and in each of these three Minnesota is shown to be in the lead.

The pamphlet first treats of the state in general with reference to its location, area and topography, railroads and other general information. It then takes up the resources of the state under the three heads and shows what Minnesota can and does produce in these lines.

AN ADVERTISING TRICK FOR WESTERN FARMERS.

Real Estate "Agents" Go After Men with Land for Sale and Reap Rich Harvest.

A smooth scheme for separating farmers from their money has been worked with much success in South Dakota. An oily grafter calls on a farmer and makes a bid for his land. The figures are absurdly low at first, but by degrees are raised as high as $60 an acre, and the farmer consents. Then the visitor explains that he is only an agent, but that he can sell the land at the price named if the owner will agree to pay for advertising at the rate of fifty cents an acre. The "agent" promises orally that the advertising money will not be payable until the land is sold, but this stipulation is not contained in a contract that the farmer signs.

In a few days he receives a copy of an ad and not over-courteous demand for money. It is said that twenty-two agriculturists were caught with this bait in Brown County and that one of them gave up $320. Others declare hotly that they will not pay but they will make a fight in the courts.

Commissioner Smith vs. The Standard Oil Co.

From the Railway World, January 3, 1908.

Mr. Herbert Knox Smith, whose zeal in the cause of economic reform has been in no wise abated by the panic which he and his kind did so much to bring on, is out with an answer to President Moffett, of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana. The publication of this answer, it is officially given out, was delayed several weeks, "for business reasons," because it was not deemed advisable to further excite the public mind, which was profoundly disturbed by the crisis. Now that the storm clouds have rolled by, however, the Commissioner rushes again into the fray.

Our readers remember that the chief points in the defence of the Standard Oil Company, as presented by President Moffett, were (1) that the date of six cents on oil from Whiting to East St. Louis has been issued to the Standard Oil Company as the lawful rate by employes of the Alton, (2) that the 18-cent rate on file with the Interstate Commerce Commission was a class and not a commodity rate, never being intended to apply to oil, (3) that oil was shipped in large quantities between Whiting and East St. Louis over the Chicago & Eastern Illinois at 6¼ cents per hundred pounds, which has been filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission as the lawful rate, and (4) that the 18-cent rate on oil was entirely out of proportion to lawful rates on other commodities between these points of a similar character, and of greater value, such, for example, as linseed oil, the lawful rate on which was eight cents. President Moffett also stated that thousands of tons of freight had been sent by other shippers between these points under substantially the same conditions as governed the shipments of the Standard Oil Company.

This defence of the Standard Oil Company was widely quoted and has undoubtedly exerted a powerful influence upon the public mind. Naturally the Administration, which has staked the success of its campaign against the "trusts" upon the result of its attack upon this company, endeavors to offset this influence, and hence the new deliverance of Commissioner Smith.

We need hardly to point out that his rebuttal argument is extremely weak, although as strong, no doubt, as the circumstances would warrant. He answers the points made by President Moffett substantially as follows: (1) The Standard Oil Company has had a traffic department, and should have known that the six-cent rate had not been filed, (2) no answer, (3) the Chicago & Eastern Illinois rate was a secret rate because it read, not from Whiting, but from Dolton, which is described as "a village of about 1,500 population just outside of Chicago. Its only claim to note is that it has been for many years the point of origin for this and similar secret rates." The Commissioner admits in describing this rate that there was a note attached stating that the rate could also be used from Whiting.

The press has quite generally hailed this statement of the Commissioner of Corporations as a conclusive refutation of what is evidently recognized as the strongest rebuttal argument advanced by the Standard.

In fact, it is as weak and inconclusive as the remainder of his argument. The lines of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois do not run into Chicago. They terminate at Dolton, from which point entrance is made over the Belt Line. Whiting, where the oil freight originates, is not on the lines of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois, which receives its Whiting freight from the Belt Line at Dolton. The former practice, now discontinued, in filing tariffs was to make them read from a point on the line of the filing road, and it was also general to state on the same sheet, that the tariff would apply to other points, e. g., Whiting. The Chicago & Eastern Illinois followed this practice in filing its rate from Dolton, and making a note on the sheet that is applied to Whiting. This was in 1895 when this method of filing tariffs was in common use.

Now let us see in what way the intending shipper of oil could be misled and deceived by the fact that the Chicago & Eastern Illinois had not filed a rate reading from Whiting. Commissioner Smith contends that "concealment is the only motive for such a circuitous arrangement," i. e., that this method of filing the rate was intended to mislead intending competitors of the Standard Oil Company. Suppose such a prospective oil refiner had applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission for the rate from Chicago to East St. Louis over the Chicago & Eastern Illinois, he would have been informed that the only rate filed with the commission by this company was 6¼ cents from Dolton, and he would have been further informed, if indeed he did not know this already, that this rate applied throughout Chicago territory. So that whether he wished to locate his plant at Whiting, or anywhere else about Chicago, under an arrangement of long standing, and which applies to all the industrial towns in the neighborhood of Chicago, he could have his freight delivered over the Belt Line to the Chicago & Eastern Illinois at Dolton and transported to East St. Louis at a rate of 6¼ cents. Where then is the concealment which the Commissioner of Corporations makes so much of? Any rate—from Dolton on the Eastern Illinois or Chappell on the Alton, or Harvey on the Illinois Central, or Blue Island on the Rock Island, applies throughout Chicago territory to shipments from any other point in the district. So far from the Eastern Illinois filing its rate from Dolton in order to deceive the shipper, it is the Commissioner of Corporations who either betrays his gross ignorance of transportation customs in Chicago territory or relies on the public ignorance of these customs to deceive the public too apt to accept unquestioningly every statement made by a Government official as necessarily true, although, as in the present instance, a careful examination shows these statements to be false.

The final point made by President Moffett that other commodities of a character similar to oil were carried at much lower rates than 18 cents, the Commissioner of Corporations discusses only with the remark that "the 'reasonableness' of this rate is not in question. The question is whether this rate constituted a discrimination as against other shippers of oil," and he also makes much of the failure of President Moffett to produce before the grand jury evidence of the alleged illegal acts of which the Standard Oil official said that other large shippers in the territory had been guilty. Considering the fact that these shippers included the packers and elevator men of Chicago the action of the grand jury in calling upon President Moffett to furnish evidence of their wrong-doing may be interpreted as a demand for an elaboration of the obvious; but the fact that a rate-book containing these freight fates for other shippers was offered in evidence during the trial and ruled out by Judge Landis, was kept out of sight. President Moffett would not, of course, accept the invitation of the grand jury although he might have been pardoned if he had referred them to various official investigations by the Interstate Commerce Commission and other departments of the Government.

We come back, therefore, to the conclusion of the whole matter, which is that the Standard Oil Company of Indiana was fined an amount equal to seven or eight times the value of its entire property, because its traffic department did not verify the statement of the Alton rate clerk, that the six-cent commodity rate on oil had been properly filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission. There is no evidence, and none was introduced at the trial, that any shipper of oil from Chicago territory had been interfered with by the 18-cent rate nor that the failure of the Alton to file its six-cent rate had resulted in any discrimination against any independent shipper,—we must take this on the word of the Commissioner of Corporations and of Judge Landis. Neither is it denied even by Mr. Smith that the "independent" shipper of oil, whom he pictures as being driven out of business by this discrimination of the Alton, could have shipped all the oil he desired to ship from Whiting via Dolton over the lines of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois to East St. Louis. In short, President Moffett's defence is still good, and we predict will be so declared by the higher court.

The Standard Oil Company has been charged with all manner of crimes and misdemeanors. Beginning with the famous Rice of Marietta, passing down to that apostle of popular liberties, Henry Demarest Lloyd, with his Wealth Against the Commonwealth, descending by easy stages to Miss Tarbell's offensive personalities, we finally reach the nether depths of unfair and baseless misrepresentation in the report of the Commissioner of Corporations. The Standard has been charged with every form of commercial piracy and with most of the crimes on the corporation calendar. After long years of strenuous attack, under the leadership of the President of the United States, the corporation is at last dragged to the bar of justice to answer for its misdoings. The whole strength of the Government is directed against it, and at last, we are told, the Standard Oil Company is to pay the penalty of its crimes, and it is finally convicted of having failed to verify the statement of a rate clerk and is forthwith fined a prodigious sum, measured by the car. Under the old criminal law, the theft of property worth more than a shilling was punishable by death. Under the interpretation of the Interstate Commerce law by Theodore Roosevelt and Judge Kenesaw Landis, a technical error of a traffic official is made the excuse for the confiscation of a vast amount of property.

The Rise of Jimmie Johnson.

XII.—IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE.

THE PEERAGE.

Curious Points About the Nobility of Great Britain.

It will doubtless be news to the majority of people that it is within the power of the British parliament to deprive a peer of his peerage. This would only be done, however, on grounds of public policy, and such a proceeding is naturally of a very exceptional character. As a matter of fact, there is only one instance to be found on record of a deprivation of this kind. In the reign of Edward IV. George Neville, duke of Bedford, was stripped of his title and dignity on the grounds of poverty, and he died a commoner in 1483. The existing dukedom of Bedford was not created until more than a couple of centuries later.

The many people who of late years have brought forward claims to titles generally regarded as extinct and the lands which go with them may take courage from the fact that peerages die hard. In the Hastings case, for instance, the peerage was claimed and the title thereto established in 1841 after remaining unclaimed 430 years, while in 1839 the Camoys title was successfully claimed after the peerage had been in abeyance for 420 years.

There are at the present day five degrees of peerage—namely, duke, marquis, earl, viscount and baron—although for nearly 300 years from the time of the Conqueror to the reign of Edward III. there were only two, earl and baron. The latter degree is the most ancient, dating from the conquest, while it is a singular fact that no new degree of peerage has been introduced since the reign of Henry VI., who created the title of viscount in 1440.

Regarding the marriage of peers, there are one or two points which may be interesting. When a peer marries a commoner, the latter becomes a peeress and fully entitled to the privileges of peerage other than the right to sit in parliament. Furthermore, she remains noble, notwithstanding the death of her husband. If, however, during her widowhood she marries a commoner then she ceases to be a peeress. On the other hand, a peeress in her own right who is married to a commoner still remains a peeress, but does not impart her nobility to her husband. A well known example of this law, of course, was furnished by the marriage of Baroness Burdett-Coutts to William Ashmead Bartlett, who simply adopted the name of Mr. Burdett-Coutts.

Much has been written at one time or another concerning the rights, duties and privileges of peerage. Here are one or two points, however, which are not common knowledge. An English peer has the right to a summons in parliament, but he is not permitted to sit in the house until he is twenty-one years of age. Neither can a peer do so who is an undischarged bankrupt.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Tangled Bank Accounts.

"It is remarkable," said an old bank employee, "how few people keep their bank accounts absolutely correct. At ordinary times this failing is not conspicuous, because books are usually balanced when there is still a credit to the depositor's account. When the balanced book is received with the vouchers the usual discrepancy is found after much labor in an omitted entry, either deposit or check or in the form of an error in addition or subtraction. The thing is usually settled at home without our help. But when a lot of women go to a bank, each one with a check already made out representing her balance, then look out. Fortunately I have had no experience in that way, but I know that not one woman in ten—and I am charitable with the figure—keeps her book correctly, and many women keep no record at all. We have one depositor who used to receive an overdraft notice regularly every month. Now, by an arrangement with her, we give her notice when the balance nears the $100 mark. Men laugh at the women for their failure to keep their bank accounts right, but except when a bookkeeper does the work for them the men are nearly as bad."—New York Tribune.

Flour Tests.

Since more bread is eaten in the course of a lifetime than any other one article of food, it behooves us to have it of the best possible quality. Even in this era of strict pure food laws flour will be adulterated, so it is up to us to be able to test its purity for ourselves. The chief ingredients that are mixed in flour are whiting and alum, both of which can be discovered by simple tests. To discover alum in flour it is only necessary to remember that it coagulates with milk. Soak a piece of bread in water until it is entirely dissolved, then put it on to boil with an equal quantity of milk. If there is any alum lurking around great clots will be formed. Even simpler is the test for whiting. Moisten the thumb and first finger with a little olive oil and rub between them a good sized pinch of flour. If it turns brown, but does not get sticky, its purity is pretty certain. Whiting's presence will be shown by a sticky, pasty feeling and no discoloration.

Never Before.

First Lecturer—I've a great story to tell you—one you never heard me tell before. Second Lecturer—Is it a really good story? First Lecturer—It certainly is—one of the best. Second Lecturer—Then I'm sure you never told it before.—Lyceumite and Talent.

One Way to Be Happy.

The only way to be happy is to take every loaf of bread at its face value and every pound of butter for sixteen ounces, for the sure road to discontent is to inquire more closely into such occult matters.—St. Paul Dispatch.

$8.50 PUNCTURE-PROOF TIRES ONLY $4.80 PER PAIR

Regular Price $8.50 per pair. To Introduce We Will Sell You a Sample Pair for Only $4.80

(CASH WITH ORDER $4.55)

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES.

Result of 15 years experience in tire making. No danger from THORNS, CACTUS, PINS, NAILS, TACKS or GLASS. Serious punctures, like intentional knife cuts, can be vulcanized like any other tire.

Two Hundred Thousand pairs now in actual use. Over Seventy-five Thousand pairs sold last year.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road thus overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump and two Sampson metal puncture closers on full paid orders (these metal puncture closers to be used in case of intentional knife cuts or heavy gashes). Tires to be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination.

We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. Ask your Postmaster, Banker, Express or Freight Agent or the Editor of this paper about us. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a small trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

COASTER-BRAKES, built-up-wheels, saddles, pedals, parts and repairs, and everything in the bicycle line are sold by us at half the usual prices charged by dealers and repair men. Write for our big SUNDRY catalogue.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

The young man has recently returned from Dakota where he has been working as painter and paper hanger, and is suppesed to be of unsound mind. ## Party Was a Success.

The Leap Year Basket party at Garnes last Saturday evening was about the most successful affair of its kind that ever happened in this part of the country, the gross receits being $75.10. This money goes in the road fund started by the PIONEER a year ago and will be a big help in the construction of a good grade across the swamp east of Plummer.

Ofaf Tande, of Garnes, has charge of this fund and has given a bond to secure its expenditure for the purpose for which it was raised. He states that early this spring he will advertise for bids for the grading of about 70 rods of road and any person who may intend to bid on this work should begin their preparations for same pretty soon. He also promises that the full list of names of all those who have contributed to this fund will be published later. The subscription list is still open and anyone who wishes may send in their contributions to Mr. Tande and they will be thankfully accepted. The PIONEER will keep the public posted on this matter with the assistance of Mr. Tande

Mandamus Attempted.

On Thursday evening the attorney in charge of the efforts of H. E. Ives & Co. to beat the PIONEER out of the county printing appeared before Judg Watts at Crookston with a request for a writ of mandamus to compel the county auditor to designate some other newspaper as the official paper. The request was based on an immaterial technicality concerning the filing of the bond. The court peomptly refused the writ and the wily lawyer returned home to think up some new and plausible plan for separating his clients from their coin. Here's hoping that he gets a good-sized wad if they cant quit sulking over the results of their poor judgement.

Another Operation.

The many friends of Frank Jeffers, in this vicinity will regret to learn that he is not progressing as well as could be desired in his recovery from his accidental injuries at Blackduck.

It will be remembered that part of one foot was left when the first operations were performed. However, this refused to heal and it was found necessary last week to remove the bones of the heel and fold the flesh of the foot over to form a pad. It is feared that this will not heal properly either, and if it does not, it will be necessary to remove his foot at the ankle as the other one was taken off.

To Aim Straight Is Human.

Anthropologists have remarked that taking aim is a human characteristic that even the anthropoid apes cannot be said to share. Apes and monkeys frequently throw nuts and sticks, sometimes with unpleasant consequences to others, but they show little or no ability to take accurate aim. The baboon is said to excel somewhat in this respect, but still it would never pass for a marksman. Accuracy of eye and the judgment of direction and distance that are involved in real aiming have been developed only by man and are among the tokens of his intellectual superiority.—St. Louis Republic.

A PIECE OF STRING.

It Plays a Prominent Part In the Life of Japan.

Writing from Japan, an American says: "You must come here to appreciate some of the quaint customs and usages which contact with other peoples has not yet driven out. To read about them gives you only a poor idea. For instance, did you ever know what an important thing a piece of string is here? The children, workmen, tillers, servants, all carry pieces of string for use in case of emergency. With us the emergency would arise only when a parcel had to be done up, but the Jap uses his piece of string as a first aid to the injured, to repair a rent in his clothing, to fix a broken down jinrikisha, to mend tools, to take measurement, and, in fact, the string is his universal tool chest. The queerest use to which it is put, according to my way of thinking, is when a police officer arrests a man, ties a bit of string about the arrested man's wrist and then leads him by the loose end of the thin hempen fetter to the lockup. You ask, 'Why doesn't the Jap crook break the string and find a gateway?' He could, but he would not. That's where his respect for the law comes in, and the bit of string holds the man as securely as though he were manacled by our own humane chilled steel, nickel plated and snap locked method."—New York Tribune.

DIRTY WATCHES.

The Reason Is Often to Be Found In the Watch Pocket.

"Why do watches get dirty?" said the jeweler. "You'll find the answer in your watch pocket. Turn it out."

The patron turned out his watch pocket, sheepishly bringing forth a pinch of mud colored dust, some lint and a small ball of black fluff.

"There's the reason," said the jeweler. "Watches get dirty because the pockets they are carried in are never clean. A watch pocket, my dear sir, should be cleaned out regularly once a week. Observe that rule and your watch's works will not get clogged up again.

"Another and a seasonable rule is never to lay your watch down on stone or marble. The cold deranges the delicate works.

"Never lay your watch down, in fact, anywhere. Hang it up on a hook vertically in the same position it occupies when in your pocket. Watches are made to lie, or, rather, stand, in that position only.

"Wind your watch in the morning, never at night."—New York Press.

Cigarettes as Wedding Fee.

As one of Manila's leading young men was donning his evening suit preparatory to keeping a social engagement he ran his hand into his pocket and was surprised to find an envelope there. On opening it he discovered 25 pesos in bills. "Now, where in thunder did I take on all this money?" he said. "It isn't mine, for I never carry my bills around in an envelope." Then he sat down to think where he had worn the suit and how he had come by the 25 pesos. "The last place I wore it," he mused finally, "was when I was best man at a wedding a month ago. But I gave Dr. Rossiter his money. I remember distinctly giving him something, and it must have been his fee. If I didn't give him the money, what in the world did I give him?" He called up Dr. Rossiter by phone. "Do you mind telling me," he asked, "what I gave you for a fee at Blank's wedding?" The answer came back very distinctly and cuttingly: "Young man, you gave me a box of vile smelling cigarettes."—Philippine Gossip.

Arbiter and Arbitrary.

If an arbitrator is chosen to end a dispute, says the London Chronicle, there is no reason to dread that his decision would be arbitrary, though the two words are very near relatives. An arbiter, the Latin word which used to be more common as English than it is now, meant by derivation simply "one who went to" something to examine it, and so at first a spectator or witness. Then in Roman law it assumed the technical sense of an umpire. But a "judicum," the legal decision in a case with regard to a definite sum of money, for instance, was distinguished from an arbitrium, a legal decision as to an uncertain sum which had to be determined; hence arbitrary acquired the sense of uncertain, capricious.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Laugh and Grow Fat; No.

There is nothing in the maxim "laugh and grow fat" or else the joke-smiths fail to grow mirthful over their own merrymaking.

Great humorists seldom are fat. F. P. Dunne is the heaviest, weighing about 160 pounds. The weight of others living is: Mark Twain, 150 pounds; George Ade, 147; Jerome K. Jerome, 143, and W. W. Jacobs, 132. O. Henry is really a great humorist, but he is in the 180-pound class.—Home Magazine.

A Remedy for Neuralgia or Pain in the Nerves.

For neuralgia and sciatica Sloan's Liniment has no equal. It has a powerfully sedative effect on the nerves—penetrates without rubbing and gives immediate relief from pain—quickens the circulation of the blood and gives a pleasant sensation of comfort and warmth.

"For three years I suffered with neuralgia in the head and jaws," writes J. P. Hubbard, of Marietta, S. C., "and had almost decided to have three of my teeth pulled, when a friend recommended me to buy a 25 cent bottle of Sloan's Liniment. I did so and experienced immediate relief, and I kept on using it until the neuralgia was entirely cured. I will never be without a bottle of Sloan's Liniment in my house again. I use it also for insect bites and sore throat, and I can cheerfully recommend it to any one who suffers from any of the ills I have mentioned."

She Was In No Hurry.

Rev. Dr. Wallace, new pastor of the East End Baptist church, brought a new one to Cleveland with him.

According to the story, a Boston girl got on the street car one day carrying one of those muffs the size of an ordinary hassock. She had only one hand in the muff. A young man sitting next to her took advantage of the opportunity to slip his hand into the unoccupied end of the muff.

The Boston girl turned upon him severely. "I could have you arrested for such a familiarity," said she. "But," she added, "I'm from Boston and I purpose to keep calm. Now, I'll just give you ten minutes to let go of my hand."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A doctor said:—

"Before marriage my wife observed in summer and country homes, coming in touch with families of varied means, culture, tastes and discriminating tendencies, that the families using Postum seemed to average better than those using coffee.

"When we were married two years ago, Postum was among our first order of groceries. We also put in some coffee and tea for guests, but after both had stood around the pantry about a year untouched, they were thrown away, and Postum used only.

"Up to the age of 28 I had been accustomed to drink coffee as a routine habit and suffered constantly from indigestion and all its relative disorders. Since using Postum all the old complaints have completely left me and I sometimes wonder if I ever had them."

YARMOUTH KNOT IS ANNULLED BY COURT

COUNTESS, ONCE MISS THAW OF PITTSBURG, WINS PLEA FOR DIVORCE.

NOBLEMAN PUTS UP NO DEFENSE

English Court Grants Decree, Unopposed by Earl's Attorney, Who Seek Only to Remove Stigma from Reputation.

London, Feb. 6.—Sir Birrell Barnes, president of the divorce court Wednesday granted the countess of Yarmouth, who was Miss Alice Thaw, of Pittsburg, a decree nullifying her marriage to the earl of Yarmouth. The case was heard in private. At the time fixed for the commencement of the proceedings every one not actually engaged on the case was excluded from the court room. The case was practically undefended, and the hearing lasted for only half an hour. The countess, attired in a fashionable black gown, was present, but the earl of Yarmouth was not in court.

Case Not Contested.

Only four witnesses were examined. They were the countess of Yarmouth herself, her maid, a doctor appointed by the court, and an American lawyer who proved the marriage. The countess gave evidence in support of her allegation that the marriage had never been consummated and the maid testified that the earl and the countess had not been living as man and wife. According to the evidence of the doctor, the earl of Yarmouth was capable of consummating the marriage, but counsel for the plaintiff contended that this did not affect the allegation that the marriage had not been consummated and he pointed out to the judge that it was within the discretion of the court to annul the marriage if it was proved that it had not been consummated.

Earl Defends Only Reputation.

The earl of Yarmouth did not defend the case, his lawyer satisfying himself with pointing out that the evidence of the doctor removed any stigma placed upon the earl by the evidence of the plaintiff and that there was no ground upon which the countess could have sued for divorce. The judge pronounced his decree, annulling the marriage without comment. In the ordinary course of events it will be made absolute in six months. No mention was made of a marriage settlement, and it was learned from an authoritative source that, contrary to certain published statements, the question of revising the settlement has not been discussed by the principals or their solicitors and that it is not likely to be discussed. The brevity of the proceedings came as a surprise to everybody except those engaged on the case.

Thaw Trial in Suit.

The fact that at a council of the family of the earl of Yarmouth it was decided not to contest the action of the countess made this possible. This change from the previous determination to contest the case is said to have been influenced by the evidence given recently in New York at the trial of Harry Kendall Thaw, brother of the countess, for the murder of Stanford White, with regard to insanity in the Thaw family, as well as the verdict of the jury that Harry Thaw was insane when he committed this crime. The papers in the case are being kept secret, and all information regarding the nature of the charges has been carefully withheld. The statement was made, however, that the character of the medical evidence to be given made a public hearing inadvisable. It has been well known for two years past that the domestic affairs of the Yarmouths were unhappy. The earl's companions and his manner of living, it was said, were such that he could not give his wife the place in society which she had a right to expect.

Supplied "Hubby" with Cash.

She supplied large sums of money to defray her husband's extravagances and her friends say that she has conducted herself with dignity throughout the troubles resulting from this unhappy union and the difficulties of her brother, Harry Kendall Thaw. The fact that the countess had decided definitely to seek an annullment of her marriage was made known here January 3, when she applied to the divorce court for a decree. The Bertford family, the head of which is the marquis of Hertford, whose heir the earl of Yartmouth is, is one of the oldest and proudest of the British nobility. The marchioness of Hertford stood by her daughter-in-law throughout her troubles and exerted herself to reconcile the couple, but in vain. The family of the earl is much distressed at the notoriety brought upon it as a result of the action of the countess.

MESSAGE IS WARM

President Flays Corporations That Defy Laws.

DENIES HE CAUSED PANIC

Attacks of Great Concerns on His Administration Are Vigorously Repelled—Employers' Liability and Abuses of Injunction Discussed.

Washington.—In a message dealing principally with the control of great corporations, transmitted to congress on Friday, the president flays what he terms the "law defying trusts" in no uncertain terms.

In the opening paragraphs of the message he urges the immediate reenactment of the employers' liability law, and for such legislation as will remedy the abuses of the injunction. He then turns his attention to stock jobbing and other forms of high finance, and says:

"I do not know whether it is possible, but if possible, it is certainly desirable, that in connection with measures to restrain stock watering and overcapitalization there should be measures taken to prevent at least the grosser forms of gambling in securities and commodities, such as making large sales of what men do not possess and 'cornering' the market. . . . It would seem that the federal government could at least act by forbidding the use of the mails, telegraph and telephone wires for mere gambling in stocks and futures, just as it does in lottery transactions."

Mr. Ripley and Rebating.

Next President Roosevelt turns his attention to rebating, submitting the reply of the chief of the bureau of corporations to statements made by the Standard Oil Company and by President Ripley of the Santa Fe railway. There is also a letter from District Attorney Heney of San Francisco inclosing one from the Santa Fe's general freight traffic manager to the road's auditor, which Mr. Heney and the president say shows the utter falsity of the plea of ignorance made by high officials of the Santa Fe and the Standard Oil Company.

The president adds:

"The attacks by these great corporations on the administration's actions have been given wide circulation throughout the country, in the newspapers and otherwise, by those writers and speakers, who, consciously or unconsciously, act as the representatives of predatory wealth—of the wealth accumulated on a giant scale by all forms of iniquity, ranging from the oppression of wageworkers to unfair and unwholesome methods of crushing out competition, and to defrauding the public by stock jobbing and the manipulation of securities. Certain wealthy men of this stamp, whose conduct should be abhorrent to every man of ordinarily decent conscience, and who commit the hideous wrong of teaching our young men that phenomenal business success must ordinarily be based on dishonesty, have during the last few months made it apparent that they have banded together to work for a reaction. Their endeavor is to overthrow and discredit all who honestly administer the law, to prevent any additional legislation which would check and restrain them, and to secure if possible a freedom from all restraint which will permit every unscrupulous wrongdoer to do what he wishes unchecked provided he has enough money."

Campaign of Lawbreakers.

Denying that the administration is engaged in any assault on property the president continues:

"There are ample material rewards for those who serve with fidelity the mammon of unrighteousness; but they are dearly paid for by the people who permit their representatives, whether in public life, in the press, or in the colleges where their young men are taught to preach and to practice that there is one law for the rich and another for the poor. The amount of money the representatives of certain great moneyed interests are willing to spend can be gauged by their recent publication broadcast throughout the papers of this country, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, of huge advertisements attacking with envenomed bitterness the administration's policy of warring against successful dishonesty, and by their circulation of pamphlets and books prepared with the same object; while they likewise push the circulation of the writings and speeches of men who, whether because they are misled or because, seeing the light, they yet are willing to sin against the light, serve these their masters of great wealth to the cost of the plain people.

"The books and pamphlets, the controlled newspapers, the speeches by public or private men to which I refer, are usually and especially in the interest of the Standard Oil Trust and of certain notorious railroad combinations, but they also defend other individuals and corporations of great wealth that have been guilty of wrongdoing. It is only rarely that the men responsible for the wrongdoing themselves speak or write. Normally they hire others to do their bidding or find others who will do it without hire. From the railroad rate law to the pure food law, every measure for honesty in business that has been passed during the last six years has been opposed by these men on its passage and in its administration with every resource that bitter and unscrupulous craft could suggest and the command of almost unlimited money secure. But for the last year the attack has been made with most bitterness upon the actual administration of the law, especially through the department of justice, but also through the Interstate Commerce Commission and the bureau of corporations."

"Business" That Is Hurt.

The president at considerable length defends his administration against the charge that its policy was responsible for the business depression, and says that the business that is hurt by the movement for honesty is the kind of business which, in the long run, it pays the country to have hurt.

In concluding his message President Roosevelt says:

"I do not for a moment believe that the actions of this administration have brought on business distress; so far as this is due to local and not worldwide causes, and to the actions of any particular individuals, it is due to the speculative folly and flagrant dishonesty of a few men of great wealth, who seek to shield themselves from the effects of their own wrongdoing by ascribing its results to the actions of those who have sought to put a stop to the wrongdoing. But if it were true that to cut out rottenness from the body politic meant a momentary check to an unhealthy seeming prosperity, I should not for one moment hesitate to put the knife to the corruption. On behalf of all our people, on behalf no less of the honest man of means than the honest man who earns each day's livelihood by that day's sweat of his brow, it is necessary to insist upon honesty in business and politics alike, in all walks of life, in big things and little things; upon just and fair dealings as between man and man."

Roused the Sage of Chelsea.

William Allingham, in his memoirs, quotes Thomas Carlyle to this effect: "One thing Browning told me the other day was a saying of Huxley's: 'In the beginning was hydrogen.' Any man who spoke thus in my presence I would request to be silent.

HAD TO GET STRENGTH FIRST.

Hard Worked Woman Not Ready to Face Hired Girl Problem.

A Massachusetts man, whose business frequently takes him over the line into Vermont, says that one evening he was a guest at a farm house in that state when he observed that the wife of the owner—a poor, wan little woman—was doing every bit of the work around the house.

As he himself put it, she did an amount of work that would have put an ordinary Massachusetts horse to shame and he really felt like a villain sitting there watching her.

Feeling considerable compassion for the woman, who looked as if ready to drop from overwork, the visitor asked:

"Why don't you get help here? Surely you are not going to try to pull through the long winter without a hired girl."

A sickly smile came to the pallid face of the woman. "Waal, I dunno," she said. "I don't feel as if I could just yit; but p'raps ef I should get to feelin' a little better and stronger I might."—Illustrated Magazine.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

To Fight the Lid.

St. Paul.—An organization representing business interests which are injured by the enforcement of the 11 o'clock lid has come into the field with the avowed intention of resisting the efforts of the anti-saloon element in its campaign for radical restriction and at the same time for the purpose of purging the saloon business of many evils which exist to-day. The name of the new body, which was organized at Elks' hall, is the Traveling Men's Liberty League of Minnesota and is composed of traveling men representing business interests allied to the wholesale and retail liquor trade.

Although wholesale and retail liquor interests are not directly identified with the league, it was stated by a retail dealer that the body is an amalgamation of all interests. The body does not actually include in its membership wholesale and retail liquor dealers, but their support, it is said, will be given in the campaign to be made by the league.

Teachers to Organize.

Moorhead.—The Commercial Club of Moorhead is co-operating in the efforts which are being made by a number of educators in this section of the state of Minnesota for the organization of an association similar to the Northwestern Minnesota Educational association, which usually meets in Crookston. The start for this move was brought about at an informal gathering of school men from Clay county and adjoining counties during the meeting of the state educational association at St. Paul in December. Mr. Richards of the Commercial club will appoint a committee to take the initial steps in the arrangements for a big meeting of school teachers in Moorhead March 13 and 14. The proposed association probably will comprise an area covering Clay, Becker and adjoining counties.

Homestead Plan.

Crookston.—The Crookston Twenty-five Thousand Commercial club is planning on an aggressive compaign for an increase in the population of the Red River valley during the coming summer, and A. D. Stephens and other members of the club have formed a unique plan to induce actual settlers to come to this vicinity.

Valley land has become so valuable in the last few years because of the great demand for it that a great deal of it was snapped up and now is being held by speculators. Senator Stephens' plan is to get a number of owners of land to dispose of it on a sort of homestead plan. That is, they will sell it to an actual settler, who will agree to live on the land for a certain number of years, at $10 per acre lower than the actual market value.

Severe Punishment.

Owatonna—The most sweeping punishment ever administered at Pillsbury academy was meted out to seven high officers of the military battalion of the school when they were reduced to the ranks and two of them were dismissed from the school. The punishment came as a result of a series of student escapades in which officers were accused of taking part. When the day on which the officers were to receive their commissions from the commandant of the corps, the corps was drawn up for review the order reducing the men to the ranks was read.

Load Town on Cars.

Sparta.—Work on the new site for the village of Sparta has been renewed by the steel corporation, and it is believed that the actual work of moving the village will be started in the near future. Sparta is a town of 15,000 population and the business section is underlaid with iron ore. The business buildings are to be hauled to their new locations on flat cars, this being accomplished by using two engines and two cars on the double track.

Minneapolis.—A stirring melodrama of the golden West is A. H. Woods' "The Gambler of the West," which will be seen at the Bijou Opera House, the week of February 9th. The story of the play carries strong heart interest, and it is replete with hilarious comedy and thrilling incidents.

St. Paul.—Forty state boiler inspectors in Minnesota are in danger of losing their jobs. A letter was sent them by Julius A. Schmahl, secretary of state, warning them that unless their annual reports were turned in immediately, Governor Johnson would proceed to remove them for "non-feasanance in office."

Biwabik.—Mrs. Frank Globoker, living next to a house that burned, has become violently insane as a result of the excitement connected with the blaze. She is to be taken before the probate court at Duluth for examination.

"From the age of three months until fifteen years old, my son Owen's life was made intolerable by eczema in its worst form. ### AGREEING WITH THE ASSESSOR.

His Reason for Building Unneeded Addition to House.

Representative Birdsall of Iowa objects to the high rentals charged in Washington during the congressional season. He says he feels like an Irish farmer he knew out in his district. The farmer had bought a place out of savings as a farm-hand and renter. The tax assessor came around one day and put a valuation on Pat's new property which Pat thought excessive. His protest, however, was unavailing.

One day a neighbor visited Pat and found him building an addition to his house, and obviously the house was plenty big enough without it.

"Isn't that a piece of extravagance?" he asked Pat.

"Think agin it moight be," said Pat, "but I'm after havin' the ould place warth phat the assisser says it is."

KIT CARSON.

Feat of Which the Hardy Frontiersman Had No Recollection.

One of the most noted of the hardy western frontiersmen was Kit Carson, to whom, with Daniel Boone, belongs the credit of having always dealt fairly with the various Indian tribes, as they themselves acknowledged. The withdrawal of Carson by the government was the cause of a great war. Captain Henry Inman in his book, "The Old Santa Fe Trail," relates an amusing incident of the gallant pioneer.

My own conception of Kit Carson as a child was that he was ten feet high, that it would have required the strength of two men to lift his rifle, that he usually drank a river dry and picked the carcass of a whole buffalo clean as easily as a lady does the wing of a quail. Years after, when I made the acquaintance of the foremost frontiersman, I found him a delicate, reticent, undersized, wiry man, the very opposite type of what my childish brain had created.

One day while Kit was at the fort I came across a periodical that had a full page illustration of a scene in a forest. In the foreground stood a gigantic figure dressed in the traditional buckskin.

On one arm rested an immense rifle. His other arm was around the waist of the conventional female of such sensational journals, while in front half a dozen Indians lay prone, evidently slain by the hero in the impossible attire in defense of the preposterous female. The legend stated how all this had been effected by Kit Carson.

I handed it to Kit. He wiped his spectacles, studied the picture intently for a few seconds and then said:

"Gentlemen, that thar may be true, but I hain't got no recollection of it."

A JOURNALISTIC HOAX.

Trick the Harvard Lampoon Played on the Crimson.

Speaking of the Crimson, Harvard's daily newspaper, reminds every Harvard man of the Lampoon's master stroke—or joke—played on that dignified and unsuspecting sheet on Memorial day, 1901. The Crimson had announced that it would not appear on that holiday, but inconspicuously, so few were surprised to find their Crimson at their door that morning as usual. Their surprise began, however, when they scanned its contents. This always serious sheet seemed to have become most frivolous and irresponsible during the night, for in its columns all sorts of weird and fantastic statements appeared.

The news, though clothed in the usual heavy, dignified Crimson style, was wildly revolutionary in character. Among the items that appeared were: "A Plot to Blow Up Memorial Hall," "Strong Men to Get the Varsity H." "Wellesley Crew to Be Guests of the University" and most important of all a notice, "Lampoon Celebration at 7 Tonight." Then the joke came out. The Lampoon had published the famous "fake Crimson," the joke was known throughout the country, and that night Lampy's sanctum was the scene of bacchanalian revelry. When the following year the Crimson editors sat up all night with injunctions against a repetition of the fake the joke was again on them, for Lampy differs from history in that he never repeats himself.—K. B. Townsend in Bohemian.

Training.

"Why, Nettie," said her mother, "what in the world are you pounding your doll with your father's slipper for?"

"Because she refuses to obey me, mamma," replied the little miss. "I'm not going to have the neighbors saying that I spared the slipper and spoiled my child."—Exchange.

He Dodged.

"So Borroughs owes you money? Well, I think he'll pay you back some day, but you can't make him hurry."

"Don't you believe it. The mere sight of me walking along the street has made him hurry several times lately."—Philadelphia Press.

HOW ARABS FIGHT.

Their Aim Is to Wound an Enemy, Not to Kill Him.

"A striking point in the Arab's character," writes a traveler of what he saw in Mesopotamia, "is his intense dislike of bloodshed and savagery. The tribes of the Jazirah are continually at war, and, as I have had plenty of evidence to the contrary, I think it would be absurd to accuse them of cowardice, but no one who has seen them or talked to them can fail to be struck with their extraordinary lack of vindictiveness and their wonderfully merciful way of fighting. An Arab never fights to kill. His objects are to capture, to incapacitate or to frighten into submission. He will, it is true, do a great amount of material damage—burn villages and ruin crops—but he will never take life unnecessarily or refuse quarter and never, as far as I know, beat or ill use a prisoner. On the other hand, a desert Arab will rob and tyrannize over his weaker neighbors in a peculiarly ruthless way and always do his best to make agriculture impossible.

"Their method of fighting is almost entirely confined to the use of the lance, which is carried javelinwise, the lance itself being a light bamboo some eighteen or twenty feet in length, with a long knifelike head. A band of horsemen from 200 to 300 in number comes swooping down on the herds of the enemy, some driving off succor while others carry away the booty. The defense of the herds against these attacks is similar, a swift pursuit and an endeavor to draw off the marauders being the usual method. Generally the advantage lies with the attacking force, as the defenders usually look to recouping themselves by a similar attack rather than to recapturing the lost herds immediately. The reason is that the marauding party if hard pressed might hustle the captured animals unduly and made them almost worthless.

"The rules of war in the Jazirah are as strictly and decently observed among Arabs as by the white and red knights in 'Alice In Wonderland.' To kill an enemy in battle is discreditable and savage. To wound slightly is what is aimed at, and to wound a man slightly with a bamboo lance twenty feet long is no small feat of skill. To surrender is not discreditable. Flight is as justifiable as attack. To carry on warfare at night would be scandalous and shameful or, if we choose to take a cynical view, productive of inconvenient reprisals. Camps, as far as I could ascertain, are practically out of bounds for a similar reason. Warfare in the Jazirah is an elaborate form of sport.

"I have yet to hear a Bedouin speak ill of his enemy, even though he may have had the worst of it himself. Indeed, as far as I could see, there was as little personal animus between hereditary foes as exists between two elevens of cricketers. Of course, at times regrettable things are done, but the occasions are very rare indeed. The only really discreditable aspect of the intertribal warfare is the ruthless way in which the Bedouins of the shepherd tribes plunder the poor agricultural dependents of their antagonists, who, having neither arms nor horses, are incapable of defiance."—Chicago News.

A Rare Complaint.

"Isn't it strange," asks the first man, "that so many men, after years of ruthless commercial practices, piracies one might almost say, after they have climbed to the very pinnacle of success, should have softening of the brain?"

"It would be stranger yet, infinitely stranger," replied the man with the corrugated brow, "if any of them ever had softening of the heart."—Puck.

Sex and Beauty.

Why are men better looking than women? It is a problem which must perplex and pique modern women, for taking them in the aggregate men nowadays leave women behind in point of personal beauty.—London Gentlewoman.

Forsake not an old friend, for the new is not comparable unto him.—Solomon.

Regular Price $8.50 per pair. To Introduce We Will Sell You a Sample Pair for Only $4.80

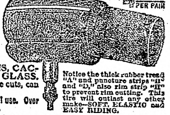
(CASH WITH ORDER $4.55)



NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES.

Result of 15 years experience in tire making. No danger from THORNS, CACTUS, PINS, NAILS, TACKS or GLASS. Serious punctures, like intentional knife cuts, can be vulcanized like any other tire.

Two Hundred Thousand pairs now in actual use. Over Seventy-five Thousand pairs sold last year.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road thus overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump and two Sampson metal puncture closers on full paid orders (these metal puncture closers to be used in case of intentional knife cuts or heavy gashes). Tires to be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination.

We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. Ask your Postmaster, Banker, Express or Freight Agent or the Editor of this paper about us. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a small trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

COASTER-BRAKES, built-up-wheels, saddles, pedals, parts and repairs, and everything in the bicycle line are sold by us at half the usual prices charged by dealers and repair men. Write for our big SUNDRY catalogue.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

Gone To Colorado.

On Thursday evening C. F, Stenhammar and family, for many years well known and highly respected residents of Emardville township, left over the Soo line for Denver, Col., where Mr. Stenhammar hopes to obtain relief from chronic bronchitis from which he has been suffering for some time. On Wednesday the members of the Ladies Society of the Swedish Misson and nearly all of Mr. Stenhammar's neighbors called on him to say farewell and made him a a handsome present as a token of their esteme and friendship. On Thursday Mr. Stenhammer called at the PIONEER office and asked us to convey to his neighbors and friends his sincere appreciation and thanks for their genuine friendship, and his regret that he is forced to leave such a community of good neighbors and good citizens. With the rest we regret that Mr. Stenhammar has to seek a change of climate and sincerely hope that he will find a full measure of the relief he seeks. The PIONEER will be a regular visitor at his new home.

The "grip and the the cold" seems to go hand in hand, making regular calls in this locality. We have been waiting for old Dan Carroll to show up with his poplar "Herb Tablets".

This seems to be a rather a dull leap year as we have nothing on record as yet to show that the ladies are up and a "doin" as we would otherwise be inclined to think. We really don't blame Editor Hunt for feeling discouraged. Wait till the panic is over.

While winding up with the last bit of news we happened to look out through the window and saw a young lady walking past. She evidently was in a hurry, but of course that is nothing more than natural; it's leap year.

Tangled Bank Accounts.

"It is remarkable," said an old bank employee, "how few people keep their bank accounts absolutely correct. At ordinary times this failing is not conspicuous, because books are usually balanced when there is still a credit to the depositor's account. When the balanced book is received with the vouchers the usual discrepancy is found after much labor in an omitted entry, either deposit or check or in the form of an error in addition or subtraction. The thing is usually settled at home without our help. But when a lot of women go to a bank, each one with a check already made out representing her balance, then look out. Fortunately I have had no experience in that way, but I know that not one woman in ten—and I am charitable with the figure—keeps her book correctly, and many women keep no record at all. We have one depositor who used to receive an overdraft notice regularly every month. Now, by an arrangement with her, we give her notice when the balance nears the $100 mark. Men laugh at the women for their failure to keep their bank accounts right, but except when a bookkeeper does the work for them the men are nearly as bad."—New York Tribune.

Flour Tests.

Since more bread is eaten in the course of a lifetime than any other one article of food, it behooves us to have it of the best possible quality. Even in this era of strict pure food laws flour will be adulterated, so it is up to us to be able to test its purity for ourselves. The chief ingredients that are mixed in flour are whiting and alum, both of which can be discovered by simple tests. To discover alum in flour it is only necessary to remember that it coagulates with milk. Soak a piece of bread in water until it is entirely dissolved, then put it on to boil with an equal quantity of milk. If there is any alum lurking around great clots will be formed. Even simpler is the test for whiting. Moisten the thumb and first finger with a little olive oil and rub between them a good sized pinch of flour. If it turns brown, but does not get sticky, its purity is pretty certain. Whiting's presence will be shown by a sticky, pasty feeling and no discoloration.

Delicious Supper Dish.

For Swiss eggs, a delicious supper dish, spread the bottom of a baking dish with two ounces of butter. Cover this with thin slices of American cheese. Place four eggs over the cheese, taking care that the yolks are not broken. Season with pepper and salt, pour around the eggs two table spoonfuls of rich cream and cover the top with grated cheese. Bake it for ten minutes, garnish with parsley and serve with fingers of dried toast.—New York Tribune.

Superlative Beauty.

A Swedish newspaper recently invited its readers to state in a few words what they considered the most beautiful thing in the world. The first prize was carried off by an anonymous answer, "The eyes of my mother." More imaginative was the reader who won the next prize by suggesting, "The dream of that which we know to be impossible."

The most amusing answer was that which read, "The most beautiful thing in the world is to see a man carrying his mother-in-law across a dangerous river without making any attempt to drop her in."

Proved Useless.

"When you was little, was you spanked like I am to make you good, papa?"

"I was, my son, and spanked hard too."

"Ven you can't fool me no more, 'cause if it didn't make you good it won't make me good."—San Francisco Call.

An Escape.

Maid—No, mum; Mrs. Dodge is out.
Visitor—How fortunate! When I saw her peeping through the curtain as I came up the path I was so afraid she would be in.—London Opinion.

Every one ought to measure himself by his own proper font and standard.—Horace.

BRIEF MINNESOTA NEWS.

The State Wins.

Duluth—Holding that the law specifying definitely the privileges granted in a permit to cut timber from state land must be strictly adhered to by the courts, the supreme court yesterday held for the state in its suit against the Rat Portage Lumber company, reversing the St. Louis county district court. The court holds that the argument that inconvenience might result from a strict enforcement of the terms of the law cannot be heard in defense when the law is couched in definite and certain terms.

This suit was brought by the state to recover the value of 934,010 feet, board measure, of logs removed by the company from state land, for the cutting and removing of which a permit had been granted to the company by the state under the timber act. This permit had expired, however, after the logs had been cut and some of them removed, those involved in this suit remaining on the land until after the expiration of the permit. The company claimed that its failure to remove the logs within the life of the permit was due to the inclement weather and the difficulty of securing experienced woodsmen for the work.

$50,000 Gone.

Minneapolis—A tin box, the contents of which are valued at $50,000, and personal property of Daniel C. Hopkins, vice president of the Hopkins Land company, has disappeared from his office in the Metropolitan Life Insurance building, Minneapolis.

The Mill City police are trying to solve the mystery and seem to be baffled. They say the case is one of the most difficult that the department ever has attempted.

Mr. Hopkins believes the bonds and securities were stolen from his desk. The papers were locked in a safe deposit box, which was left on Mr. Hopkins' desk for a moment while he stepped into a rear room. Since that the papers have not been seen by their owner. Mr. Hopkins says he has absolutely no recollection as to whether the box still was on the desk when he returned.

Wins Prizes Easily.

Pine Island—Minnesota butter and cheese makers are becoming so accustomed to winning prizes that they no longer have to make an effort to win them. George Hoefler has just found this out.

A short time ago he sent samples of brick and limburger cheese which he had made at the Pine Island factory to a friend, who is an inspector in the New York dairy and food department. A little later he read in a dairy paper that he had won two prizes in the cheese contest in which the best cheesemakers of New York state participated. A letter to the New York inspector brought the information that he had entered the two samples sent him and he inclosed a check for the prizes won.

A Small Check.

Sparta—O. H. Haehnke, justice of the peace, has just received from the Oliver Iron Mining company, the operating company of the steel corporation, a check for 7 cents. While the Oliver was using scrip for real money Mr. Haehnke handled a garnishee case against an employe. The script was in even dollars and the obligation was all paid but the 7 cents. Now the company remits the balance. So far as known on the range this is the smallest check ever given out by the great steel corporation.

Slept With a Bear.

Two Harbors—While the wind, whistling weirdly, wound it way in woodland wilds, and the drifting snow drove deeper in the dells, Earnest A. Lange, of Mendota, Minn., snored the anthem of peace in the fullest confidence of personal safety without the least notion that his head was resting on the furry stomach of a big black bear, and that the warmth which flowed through his body in spite of the bitter cold weather came from a sleeping bruin whose lair he was sharing. It was not until the cold, gray dawn of the morning after that he learned the truth about his situation.

The Worst Load.

The worst load a man can carry is that of habits begotten of evil passions—thot growing pile of sensuous deeds, which, in their accumulation, sobere finally into a mass, devil possessed, which sits between his shoulders, overwhelming all else in kind, and driving him ruthlessly, fatefully on the road downward.—Christian World.

Girl's Independence.

Not so long ago the girl was of a shy, modest and wholly dependent type, shrinking from observation, learning diligently and thoroughly the art of mother-help, acquiring the science of homebuilding. In this age, however, she is for the most part independent, and boasts of her independence, which is carried to extreme.—American Israelite.

Most Brutal Regret.

We note the accident which happened to Maj. Young last Tuesday. He was trying to glom a handful of peanuts from Jenkins' peanut roaster when he accidentally caught his little finger in the machinery and the tip of the finger is there yet. The injury is painful, though not necessarily fatal, which is to be regretted.—Riverton (Cal.) Republican.

Is Barred from Telephone.

A New York man is allowed a telephone in his office only on condition that he never uses it himself. The reason for this is that the man is naturally so profane that his ordinary conversation shocks the most hardened, and when he goes to the 'phone the operators faint, one after another. On one occasion he put a whole exchange out of business.

Antiquity of Beer.

The ancients had beer, but whether it was made from hops does not appear. It is known that the Egyptians made beer from barley, and Pliny writes of a beer that was made in Gaul and other parts of Europe from corn and water. Lager beer, or German beer, is probably of comparatively modern date.—N. Y. American.

Hydrophobia Plus.

A little girl came running to tell about a mad dog she had seen. "We saw a mad dog!" she gasped, but the words seemed too tame to do justice to the situation. "Oh, he was mad! mad!" she added, frowning and pumping her fists. "He was furious!"—Harper's Weekly.

Poet Somewhat Vain.

At a recent auction in Paris an unpublished letter was offered, written by the poet Heine, who said therein (the letter is dated April 21, 1834): "I am to-day the best German author. Among the blind the one-eyed man is king. But since I have two eyes, no doubt can remain."

For the Linen Chest.

Lavender balls for the linen chest are made by mixing dried lavender flowers with a solution of gum tragacanth and lavender water. Ten drops of lavender oil should be added for every quarter of a pound of flowers. Roll the balls in powdered orris.

Enigmatical Calamity.

Men have often abandoned what was visible for the sake of what was uncertain, have not got what they expected and have lost what they had—being unfortunate by an enigmatical sort of calamity.—Demetrius Phalereus.

Bricks of Sand and Lime.

Bricks made of sand and lime and hardened in the air are used largely in communities where there is no clay from which clay brick can be made, but where an abundance of sand can be found.

BLOW IS AIMED AT THE ALDRICH BILL

SENATOR RAYNER SAYS THAT MEASURE WILL PASS UPPER BRANCH, HOWEVER.

CALLS ATTENTION TO RESERVE PLAN

Declares That Savages with Primitive Trading Methods Have a Better System—Asserts Banks' Cash Is in Stock Market.

Washington, Feb. 13. — Senator Rayner spoke in the senate on the Aldrich currency bill. He said he realized that the bill will pass, and declared that its opponents have the consolation of knowing that "it is simply and solely an emergency measure." After outlining what he considered to be faults with the currency system of this government, he said: "The truth about the situation is that the money in this country is not equitably and fairly distributed and that it is concentrated at points that dominate the banking interests of the land and that the people who need the money, and the agricultural sections of the country, and the country banks, and the country towns and mercantile and farming interests and honest business enterprises, are all unable to procure it when the necessity arises for its use, and are all sacrificed to gratify and appease the demands that are concentrated around the financial centers of the country. We will never have any permanent relief until we strike at the root of the evil and reform our entire banking system from its foundations for the interest of the American people against the special interests." While opposing the Aldrich bill, Mr. Rayner went on record also against a credit currency.

Scores the Reserves.

The great trouble with the pending bill is with the reserves, he said, and he declared that the law regulating them is "simply an undisguised and stupendous deception and fraud." He said that the reserve scheme as now operated works dishonestly and disastrously upon the rights of the American people and that the deposits of money in the country banks with the juggling that finally carries it to the reserve cities contributes to make the worst system in the civilized world. "Why, sir," said he, "the native savages upon the banks of the Senegambia river with elephants' teeth and the bark of the mulberry tree as a circulating medium, have a better system of finance than this."

Senator Isidor Rayner.

Says Market Has Cash.

If the country and city banks have on hand only six per cent. and 1½ per cent., respectively, of reserve deposits, Senator Rayner wanted to know who does have the money. Answering his own question he said he supposed the stock market has it to a large extent. Continuing, he said: "So, gentlemen of the south and west, when you want to move your crops, do not apply to the banks, because they have no money, but apply to the New York stock exchange for permission to do so. Is it not frightful that this iniquity should continue, condemned by every intelligent financier and honest man in the land? You will understand that in the seasons when money is easy the reserves go to New York as quickly as they can for interest, and then when the hour of contraction comes the New York banks are unable to send the reserves home again because the money is all loaned out."

Says Some Points Are Bad.

Mr. Rayner asserted that the absence of a provision correcting the evils pointed out in the reserve system amounts to a disfiguration of the Aldrich bill, and that the measure in its present form will "work more effectively in the interests of large dividends to the stockholders of national banks than it does in the interests of the American people. I appeal to this body," he said, "not to pass a bill which peremptorily declines to make any change whatever in this system of reserves, and permits this blundering and flagrant injustice to permanently disgrace the statutes of the United States.

Indian Bill Is Passed.

The Indian appropriation bill, after days of consideration on the floor, was passed Wednesday by the house of representatives practically in the form recommended by the committee. The bill carries a total appropriation of approximately $8,000,000.

VON VELTHEIM, ACCUSED OF MANY FRAUDS, SENTENCED.

Naturalized American Gets 20 Years—Convicted of Attempt to Blackmail Financier.

London, Feb. 13.—Carl Ludwig von Veltheim, a German-born naturalized American, who posed as a baron and was known also as Frank Kurtz and Carl Sneiderich Mauritz, was sentenced at the Old Bailey Wednesday to 20 years penal servitude, having been convicted of attempting to blackmail Solly B. Joel, a wealthy London and South African financier and mine-owner, out of $80,000.

Before sentence was passed on Von Veltheim, the police told a remarkable story of his career of crime and fraud. According to this recital Von Veltheim has committed bigamy with not less than seven women. This list includes a woman he married in 1904 at Yankton, S. D., and a young American woman, whose name is not mentioned, whom he met in 1905 on board a steamer between New York and Europe. He was married to this woman in Paris by a mock priest, who, it has been learned, was a friend of Von Veltheim. The prisoner is alleged to have obtained large sums of money from most of the women he deceived. The police allegations against the man include charges of theft and blackmail and the assertion that he is a deserter from the German navy.

Von Veltheim, who was arrested four months ago in Paris and extradited to England, has had an adventurous career. He has served in the German navy and army, was once in the Bulgarian army and has had many adventures in Australia, America and Japan. He went to Cape Town in 1897, and the following year shot and killed Wolff Joel, a brother of Solly Joel, at that place. He was arrested and tried, pleaded self-defense and was acquitted. Some years afterward a body recovered from the Thames was identified as Von Veltheim's by his wife, but later the adventurer was discovered serving on the Bechuanaland police.

Thomas O'Toole is dead.

RECEIVERS FOR BIG FIRM.

Cincinnati Implement Company's Business to Wind Up.

Cincinnati, Feb. 13.—P. P. Mast & Co., agricultural implement manufacturers of Springfield, was Wednesday thrown into the hands of receivers by action begun in the United States circuit court. Howard D. Maize and Samuel F. McGrew were named as receivers and required bond for $100,000. The receivers were directed to continue the business of the company, but to wind it up as speedily as possible. The assets are given as approximately $1,000,000 and the indebtedness of $400,000 is declared to be increasing through the inability of the company to meet maturing obligations.

Norwalk, O., Feb. 13.—On petition of A. M. Beattie, a large creditor and one of the largest stockholders, G. Ray Craig and A. S. Prentiss Wednesday were appointed receivers for the Laning Company, printers, of which Congressman J. F. Laning is president.

First Ceremony Since 1434.

Rome, Feb. 13.—The celebration by the pope at the Vatican of the fifteenth centennial of St. John Chrysostom was particularly noteworthy because no pope nor any members of the Sacred college have participated in this ceremony since the year 1434. The rite of the Greek church was employed throughout.

Falling Wall Kills.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 13.—Pipeman Louis A. Staub of fire engine company No. 14 was killed and Pipeman William Waterloo and Harry Shannon were seriously injured by being caught under a falling wall when the United Railway car barns on Michigan avenue near Military avenue were burned.

Woman Suffragists Jailed.

NEW YORK-PARIS AUTO RACE IS ON

CROWDS CHEER AS MACHINES DASH THROUGH GOTHAM THOROUGHFARES.

BROADWAY BLOCKED BY MANY WATCHERS

Six Cars Leave on Long Run—Queer Looking Devices Represent Italy, France, Germany and American Manufacturers.

New York, Feb. 13.—The six automobiles contesting in the New York-to-Paris race started from Times square, Forty-second street and Broadway, Wednesday cheered by a throng of several thousand people. Accompanied by more than 200 motors of all descriptions the racing machines made their way up Broadway and Riverside drive to the city limits, where they turned north on the road to Albany. From that city the route to San Francisco, which is the objective point of the first stage of the trip, lies across New York state to Buffalo, thence through Cleveland and Toledo to Chicago, to Omaha, Cheyenne, Ogden, Reno, Goldfield, San Luis Obispo and San Francisco. Mayor McClellan was to have given the word to start, but was delayed, and Colgate Hoyt of the Automobile Club of America took his place.

Traffic Is Stopped.

All traffic in the neighborhood of Times square was stopped a half hour before the start. Automobiles clogged the intersecting streets and lined the route for many blocks up Broadway. No such aggregation of machines has been seen in or about New York since the last Vanderbilt cup race was run. A band in the official grandstand played the anthems of the nations as the cars lined up for the start. A pistol shot sent the contestants away amid the cheering of the people and the hoarse hooting of hundreds of automobile horns. The contesting cars are the queerest looking machines ever devised for motoring purposes. With their heavy equipment of stores and camp utensils several of them were a modern representation of the old prairie schooner. One resembled a hook and ladder truck with long running boards on either side, equipped with axes, shovels, ropes and a dozen other articles. The clothing of the drivers varied from black bearskins to a pure white fur outfit and headdress worn by a French team.

One American Car in Race.

Three French cars, one German, one Italian and one American started in the race. Three men constituted the crews of the foreign machines, but there were only two in the American car. The three French cars are steered by G. Bourcier St. Chaffray, M. Godard and M. Pons; the German car by Lieut. Koeppen of the Prussian army; the Italian car by Antonio Scarfoglio, and the American car by Montague Roberts. Each machine carried the flag of its own nation and that of the United States. They were plentifully decorated with signs and placards so there could be no mistaking their identity wherever seen. The buildings surrounding Times square were decorated with flags and bunting and the start was quite spectacular. Estimates vary as to the length of time the race will require. From six to nine months, it is believed, will be consumed. All the drivers are confident of reaching their destination through the frozen fields of Alaska and Siberia. Steamers will transport the machines from San Francisco to Valdez, Alaska, and from Nome to East Cape, Siberia, across Bering strait.

DISLIKE POWDER; 1,000 STRIKE.

Miners at Duquoin, Ill., Walk Out Because of Dissatisfaction.

Duquoin, Ill., Feb. 13.—About 1,000 coal miners went on strike here Wednesday. Their grievance is dissatisfaction with the alleged inferior grade of blasting powder being sold them for use in the mine. The action came after a stormy meeting between the miners and operators. The trouble originated over the price of powder which the operators have been selling to the miners. No agreement could be reached at the meeting, attended by State President Walker of the miners' union, State Board Member Lawrence of Herrin, District Vice-President Dillon of Murphysboro, several officers of the operators' association, and the strike was the result.

Ex-Money Lender Bankrupt.

East St. Louis, Ill., Feb. 13.—Creditors of John Mulholland, the former money lender and promoter who has been declared a bankrupt, began the examination of the bankrupt in federal court here previous to the selection of a trustee. His liabilities, according to the schedule filed with Referee Grant, are $1,175,000 and assets nominally of the same amount.

Fatally Wounds Mother.

St. Louis, Feb. 13.—David Kolich, aged 27, who has just returned home after an extended service in the United States navy, Wednesday shot and probably fatally wounded his aged mother, Mrs. Olive Kolich. Kolich surrendered to the police. He claims the shooting was accidental, which statement his mother confirmed.

OFFICIAL PAPER of RED LAKE COUNTY

If paid in advance, $1.00.

Entered at the Post-office in Plummer, Minn. as Second Class Mail Matter.

The Republican State Central Committee will meet Feb. 27th at 2 p. m, at the Merchants hotel in St. Paul. The call for the meeting was sent out Wednesday by Thos. H. Salmon, of Minneapolis, secretary of the committee. This means that the delegate convention cannot be held until April, and the convention to nominate state officers will probably be put over until June.

On our other pages this week we publish the delinquent tax list, the financial statement and the official proceedings of the January meeting of the county board. When it is considered that the copy for the tax list and financial statement was turned over to the printer only last Saturday evening our readers will understand that it meant some hustling to get the work done within this time. As the official paper of Red Lake county the PIONEER is giving the public the best service they have ever had in the line of county printing. If you are a taxpayer in the county and do not receive a copy of these official publications, it is because the tax list does not sdow your address. A postal card sent to the PIONEER will bring you a copy by return mail if your name is on the tax list.

In the Spectator of last week H. E. Ives, of printing injunction fame, alleges that he has documentary evidence that our memory was bad while we were working in the Spectator office a few yaars ago, and insinuates that under our management the Spectator's subscription list was growing smaller. We will venture the statement that if Mr. Ives has such "documentary evidence" he is himself the author thereof. We will also state that during our management of the Spectator it's subscription list made a very material gain. We challenge Mr. Ives to publish the number of copies of the Spectator printed and issued in the second week of June, 1901, and in the second week of June, 1904. These dates represent the week before we began working at the Spectator office and the last week we worked there. If Mr. Ives will publieh the true figures he will prove our assertion is right. We have a memory good enough to make a fat man climb a tree if he insists upon our trying it.

THE HUMAN SACRIFICE

Part of the Rites of the West Indian Cult of Obeah.

WORSHIP OF THE SNAKE GOD.

That Is the Root Idea of the Peculiar Religion of the Negro Natives. Dread of the Obeahman and the Superstition of the Snake Stick.

Readers of the late Sir Walter Besant's novel "The World Went Very Well Then" may remember the sinister old medicine man, Mr. Brinjes, and the snake stick, by means of which he compelled every negro he met to do his bidding. If Mr. Brinjes were alive today and living in the West Indies he would be a very great obeah man—the prophet, priest and king of our colored brethren.

During five years spent in Jamaica, Haiti and other West Indian islands I found that Obeah and Vaudoux—both derivations of the west African fetichism brought over generations ago in the slave ships—are the real beliefs of the great majority of the blacks, veneered by Christianity or even grafted on to that faith. In a Jamaican village the dirty, one eyed, diseased obeah man has usually more power than the parson. I saw this proved once in a very striking manner. It was on a Sunday morning, and the people were trooping out of chapel with their colored minister. The local obeah man was passing by and mocked them. The parson nervously attempted to rebuke him, but he threw his snake stick on the ground and cried defiantly:

"You no go fe b'lleve Obeah, yah! Den pick up me stick. I say him turn into snake if you touch him."

The stick was left lying on the ground. Not even the colored minister dared to touch it. He had been educated in a theological college, but he had not quite outgrown the superstitions that were inculcated in his youth.

The root idea of Obeahism and Vaudoux is the worship and propitiation of the snake god Obi, a west African word typifying the spirit of evil. Vaudoux is the more extreme form of Obeah practiced in Haiti, Santo Domingo and the French West Indies. Its rites are always accompanied by the sacrifice of fowls and goats and in only too many cases by the offering up of the "goat without horns"—the human sacrifice, usually a young girl or boy. Several cases were officially proved when I was in Haiti. How many more never came to light can only be guessed. The lonely groves and mountain caves where the devotees of Vaudoux enjoy the orgies of a Walpurgis night seldom give up their secrets.

There are two sects of Vaudoux, the white and the red. The former, which only believes in the sacrifice of white fowls and goats, is tolerated by the laws of Haiti, and its rites are as commonly practiced as those of the church. But even the red sect, which openly stands for human sacrifice, is seldom interfered with. The authorities dare not suppress it, for their own policemen and soldiers stand in awe of the "papaloi" and "mamaloi"—the priest and priestess of the snake god.

More than that, there have been presidents of Haiti in recent years who believe in Vaudoux. Hippolyte was even a "papaloi" himself. He beat the black goatskin drum in the streets of the capital to call the faithful together to see him kill the sen-sel fowl. Another president, Geffrard, tried to do his duty and stamp out the cult. A terrible revenge was taken upon him. His young daughter, Cora, was shot dead as she knelt in prayer before the altar of a church in Port au Prince. Today there is a temple of the red sect in the Haitian capital, near by a triumphal arch which is inscribed with the unctuous words, "Liberty — Education — Progress."

Under British government Obeahism perforce takes forms less dangerous to the social order than it does in Haiti, but it is none the less a constant public peril in Jamaica and the other British West Indian islands. It is the bitter foe of religion, education and social advancement. In olden days it worked by means of wholesale poisoning, and in quite recent days there have been not a few cases of obeah men seeking to do murder in the old way.

When I lived in Jamaica, an old villain made an offer to a black man, whom he thought I had offended, to poison me by mixing ground glass with my food. Unfortunately for him, the negro gave him away, and he got twelve months' hard labor and a sound flogging. Not long before an entire family at Montego Bay was poisoned by the same method. Another favorite trick of the obeah man, both in Jamaica and Haiti, is to mix the infinitesimal hairs of the bamboo in the food of persons who refuse to bow the knee to them. This finally sets up malignant dysentery. If the afflicted one remains contumacious, he dies; if he makes his peace with the obeah man and gives him a handsome present, the slow process of poisoning ceases, and he lives.

In all crises and troubles of life the negro flies to the obeah man. If the has to appear at the police court to answer for his sins, he pays the obeah man to go there also and "fix de eye" of the magistrate so that he will be discharged. Perhaps he has been turned out of his office of deacon in the Baptist chapel for immorality by a white minister. In that case the obeah man will arrange for a choice collection of the most powerful spells—such as dried lizards, fowls' bones and graveyard earth—to be placed in the minister's Bible for him to stare upon when he looks up the text of his sermon. Then, if the Obeah works properly, the erring deacon will be received back to office without abandoning his career as the village Don Juan.

Does chocolate colored Romeo want a love philter to make dusky Juliet kind? The obeah man will oblige him. Has a man a quarrel with his neighbor? He can buy a vial of some filthy mixture, and if he sprinkles but a few drops of it on his enemy's banana "piece" or yam patch the crop will wither and shrivel up. If you have to discharge a colored servant, beware of Obeah! He probably will not try to poison you, but it is certainly annoying to find dried cockroaches and lizards in your whisky and a miniature coffin placed prominently on your pillow when you go to bed at night.

Even colored men of education and official position are often tainted with Obeahism. They often make use of it for profit and to increase their power over the ignorant negroes. The mulatto chairman of a parochial board—the Jamaican equivalent of our county council—was sent to jail for practicing Obeah only a few years ago. A prominent member of the Kingston city council was the leading obeah man in the island, the pontiff of the cult. He was so clever that the police could never catch him, although he was supposed to make over £3,000 a year by his nefarious practices. Once some detectives raided his place, but he received timely warning and fled, leaving his harem of strapping negresses to deal with the intruders. They beat them within an inch of their lives and then flung them into a slimy pond.

Obeahism is kept in check as sternly as possible in the British West Indies. If it were not these colonies would soon revert to the condition of Haiti—essential savagery ornamented by gold lace.—London Globe.

(CASH WITH ORDER $4.55)

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES.

Result of 15 years experience in tire making. No danger from THORNS, CACTUS, PINS, NAILS, TACKS or GLASS. Serious punctures, like intentional knife cuts, can be vulcanized like any other tire.

Two Hundred Thousand pairs now in actual use. Over Seventy-five Thousand pairs sold last year.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road thus overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump and two Sampson metal puncture closers on full paid orders (these metal puncture closers to be used in case of intentional knife cuts or heavy gashes). Tires to be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination.

We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. Ask your Postmaster, Banker, Express or Freight Agent or the Editor of this paper about us. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a small trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

Ben G. Steenerson Drowned last Sunday.

At Newport, R. I., on last Sunday, Ben G. Steenerson, only son of Congressman Halvor Steenenson, was drowned from the tug Annie K. Wood, on the way from Newport to Fort Greble. He perished in an attempt to save the life of his comrade, John M. McIntosh, a marine who was with him and who fell or jumped overboard and was also drowned. The two young men were fast friends and McIntosh was awaiting his discharge from the army. So far as can be learned from the Press dispatches the bodies have not been recovered.

Young Steenerson had enlisted from East Grand Forks last fall and was about 24 years of age. He had had gradnated from the law department of the George Washington University at Washington last June. He was captain of the University football team for three years during which time the university had the best football team in its history.

Congressman and Mrs. Steenerson have the sicere sympathy of all who know the in this great misfortune which leaves them childless. They had only two children, a son and daughter. The daughter, Clara, died at Crookston eight years ago, just after graduating from the Crookston High School, and now their son is snatched away when just on the threshold of a splendid manhood. Both children were always favorites among their companions and with all who knew them.

At Wheaton, in Traverse county, on Webnesday of this week occured the wedding of Miss Belle Nelson, of this place, to William Nelson, a very prominent young man of Wheaton. The bride is one of the best known and most popular young ladies of this vicinity and her wedding comes as a complete surprise to many of her friends. ### The Case Altered.

In France they call gray hair "a little dust from the road of life." which is certainly very poetical. But when you find "a little dust from the road of life" in your butter the poetry vanishes at once.

Of the Success That Awaits the Farmer in Western Canada.

The story of wheat farming in Western Canada (that portion of Canada lying north of Dakota and Montana) has been frequently told, but it will stand a lot of telling, and still retain its touch of interest. During the year just closed 277,376 persons made their homes in Canada as compared with 215,912 for the year 1906, an increase of 61,464. Those from the United States numbered 56,551. A writer in "Industry" recently said: "To-day the "Dominion of Canada is witnessing a "mightier movement of population "than ever stimulated a Biblical writer to pen a chapter of Scripture." The same writer says: "From the Rhine "and the Rhone river valleys; from "the port cities of Germany and the "farms of the Fatherland, from the "peasant soil of Russia; and out from "the grimy Lancashire and over-populated Yorkshire, the discontented "and ambitious of every clime are "seeking to take advantage of the "opportunities afforded by the fertile "soil and exhilarating climate of the "Empire of the North."

Continuing the same writer says: "While a million human beings throng "the shores of the United States every "year, the smaller number arriving in "Canada come with a more well-defined purpose." The question has been asked why do these people come to Canada? The available land between the Mississippi and the Pacific has been exhausted, and the farmers within that territory find that their sons have to seek newer climes. Canada offers one hundred and sixty acres of land free to each. This land yields from 20 to 40 bushels of wheat to the acre. In Southern Alberta, the winter wheat belt of Canada, as high as 60 bushels per acre have been harvested. Less yields than the one mentioned have netted the farmer as much as $35 per acre. There are no words that tell the tale so effectively as those of the farmer himself, the man who has ploughed the fields, sowed the grain, and with folded hands rests while nature, bounteous in that country, in less than three months, placed at his disposal hundreds of acres of ripened grain, now waiting the arrival of the reaper, and therefore we reproduce the following letter.

Any agent of the Canadian government will be pleased to give information regarding the district mentioned or any of any other that may be desired.

E. T. Holmes, Esq.,
Canadian Government Agent,
St. Paul, Minn.

Dear Sir:—

In 1905 I located on a claim about 30 miles from the town of Wadena, on the Canadian Northern Railroad, have lived on my claim most of the time since. I consider this to be one of the best districts in the country for grain growing. In 1906 wheat averaged from 30 to 51 bushels per acre on some of my neighbors' farms, within 4 miles of my claim. Oats go from 75 to 100 bushels. It is also a good country for stock. Where I am there is plenty of fuel. Homesteads nearly all taken the settlement being largely Germans, and Americans, all well-to-do. I left Wadena in February, 1907, returning April 25, so that I missed part of the winter, which the old settlers tell me was one of the worst they ever saw, but there was no suffering, as the people are pretty well fixed, and there are no blizzards in that country, at least there never has been known to be one. Wild land sells at from $10 to $15; closer to town it is higher.

In the summer we have all sorts of wild fruits very plentiful, and I never saw better vegetables, and game is so plentiful a man need not starve for want of something to eat. Plenty of good water too. You need not hesitate to recommend this district, but the homesteads are nearly all taken, most of the homesteaders are living right on their claims.

(Signed), FRANK MORREY,
Kelvington, Sask.

Slept With a Bear.

Two Harbors—While the wind, whistling weirdly, wound it way in woodland wilds, and the drifting snow drove deeper in the drifts, Earnest A. Lange, of Mendota, Minn., snored the anthem of personal safety without the least notion that his head was resting on the furry stomach of a big black bear, and that the warmth which flowed through his body in spite of the bitter cold weather came from a sleeping bruin whose lair he was sharing. It was not until the cold, gray dawn of the morning after that he learned the truth about his situation.

One of the Essentials

of the happy homes of to-day is a vast fund of information as to the best methods of promoting health and happiness and right living and knowledge of the world's best products.

Products of actual excellence and reasonable claims truthfully presented and which have attained to world-wide acceptance through the approval of the Well-Informed of the World; not of individuals only, but of the many who have the happy faculty of selecting and obtaining the best the world affords.

One of the products of that class, of known component parts, an Ethical remedy, approved by physicians and commended by the Well-Informed of the World as a valuable and wholesome family laxative is the well-known Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists.

Spanish Proverb.

Many a lout is wealthy and a clever man hard put to.

BABY CRIED AND SCRATCHED

All the Time—Covered with Torturing Eczema—Doctor Said Sores Would Last for Years—Perfect Cure by Cuticura.

"My baby niece was suffering from that terrible torture, eczema. It was all over her body but the worst was on her face and hands. She cried and scratched all the time and could not sleep night or day from the scratching. I had her under the doctor's care for a year and a half and he seemed to do her no good. I took her to the best doctor in the city and he said that she would have the sores until she was six years old. But if I had depended on the doctor my baby would have lost her mind and died from the want of aid. But I used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and she was cured in three months. Alice L. Dowell, 4769 Easton Ave., St. Louis, Mo., May 2 and 20, 1907."

Derivation of a Term.

The reason we call money "dust"
Is, as I've cause to know it,
To get it we must raise the wind—
How easy then to blow it!

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.
Sold by Druggists. Price, 75c. per bottle.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Irrefutable Tramp Evidence.

Tramp—I understand that a pocketbook, containing $20,000 has been found on the street and you got it here. I lost it."

Police Justice—What proof have you got that you lost it?

Tramp—This big hole in my pocket.

Out of the Usual.

"Guess where I've been," said a man at the noonday lunch counter. "It is a city where in at least two churches they have little cuspidors which match the decorations of the church in the corners of the pews. In the vestibule of one of the large churches hangs a sign to this effect: 'No Spitting Allowed Inside the Church, Throw Away Your Tobacco as You Enter the Vestibule.' This a fact. I can prove it!"

One to Three at Whist.

The late Senator Hoar was extremely fond of whist, which he played with remarkable skill.

A friend says that the only time he ever knew the usually placid and genial man from Masachusetts to be absolutely impatient was when on one occasion at whist the senator had an unusually stupid partner. Notwithstanding this handicap, the pair were winning right along even against good players.

In the middle of one game, some one paused behind the senator's chair and asked, "Well, senator, how are you getting on?"

"Very well, indeed," was the reply, "in view of the fact that I have three adversaries."—Sunday Magazine.

COFFEE DRINKING

A Doctor Says it Weakens the Heart.

"In my opinion," says a well known German physician, "no one can truthfully say that coffee agrees with him, as it has long since been proven that caffeine, contained in coffee, is an injurious, poisonous substance which weakens and degenerates the heart muscles.

"For this reason the regular use of coffee, soon or late, causes a condition of undernourishment, which leads to various kinds of organic disease.

"Convinced of this fact, I have often sought for some healthful beverage to use instead of coffee. At last I found the thing desired in Postum. Having had occasion to forbid people using coffee, whose hearts were affected, I have recommended Postum as a beverage, since it is free from all injurious or exciting substances. I know this from results in my own family, and among patients.

"Hundreds of persons who now use Postum in place of coffee, are greatly benefited thereby." "There's a Reason."

I, John B. O'Brien, County Auditor in and for the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, do hereby certify that the foregoing copy of the list of real estate taxes in said county remaining delinquent on the first day of January, 1908, was this day received from the clerk of the district court in and for said county and state.

(Signed) JOHN B. O'BRIEN,
(Seal) County Auditor.

The Worst Load.

The worst load a man can carry is that of habits begotten of evil passions—that growing pile of sensuous deeds, which, in their accumulation, sohere finally into a mass, devil possessed, which sits between his shoulders, overwhelming all else in kind, and driving him ruthlessly, fatefully on the road downward.—Christian World.

Girl's Independence.

Not so long ago the girl was of a shy, modest and wholly dependent type, shrinking from observation, learning diligently and thoroughly the art of mother-help, acquiring the science of homebuilding. In this age, however, she is for the most part independent, and boasts of her independence, which is carried to extreme.—American Israelite.

Most Brutal Regret.

We note the accident which happened to Maj. Young last Tuesday. He was trying to glom a handful of peanuts from Jenkins' peanut roaster when he accidentally caught his little finger in the machinery and the tip of the finger is there yet. The injury is painful, though not necessarily fatal, which is to be regretted.—Riverton (Cal.) Republican.

Is Barred from Telephone.

A New York man is allowed a telephone in his office only on condition that he never uses it himself. The reason for this is that the man is naturally so profane that his ordinary conversation shocks the most hardened, and when he goes to the 'phone the operators faint, one after another. On one occasion he put a whole exchange out of business.

Antiquity of Beer.

The ancients had beer, but whether it was made from hops does not appear. It is known that the Egyptians made beer from barley, and Pliny writes of a beer that was made in Gaul and other parts of Europe from corn and water. Lager beer, or German beer, is probably of comparatively modern date.—N. Y. American.

Hydrophobia Plus.

A little girl came running to tell about a mad dog she had seen. "We saw a mad dog!" she gasped, but the words seemed too tame to do justice to the situation. "Oh, he was mad! mad!" she added, frowning and pumping her fists. "He was furious!"—Harper's Weekly.

Poet Somewhat Vain.

At a recent auction in Paris an unpublished letter was offered, written by the poet Heine, who said therein (the letter is dated April 21, 1834): "I am to-day the best German author. Among the blind the one-eyed man is king. But since I have two eyes, no doubt can remain."

For the Linen Chest.

Lavender balls for the linen chest are made by mixing dried lavender flowers with a solution of gum tragacanth and lavender water. Ten drops of lavender oil should be added for every quarter of a pound of flowers. Roll the balls in powdered orris.

Enigmatical Calamity.

Men have often abandoned what was visible for the sake of what was uncertain, have not got what they expected and have lost what they had—being unfortunate by an enigmatical sort of calamity.—Demetrius Phalereus.

Bricks of Sand and Lime.

Bricks made of sand and lime and hardened in the air are used largely in communities where there is no clay from which clay brick can be made, but where an abundance of sand can be found.

PERUNA EDITORIAL NO. I.

Dr. Hartman is now offering Peruna to the public as a regular pharmaceutical product. It is just as ethical as any compound put up for the medical profession. No straining of medical ethics can find any fault with it. THE PRINCIPAL ACTIVE INGREDIENTS are prominently incorporated in the label on the bottle, that the people may know that the claims made for Peruna have a true justification.

The only departure we shall make from medical ethics in the conduct of Peruna affairs in the future, is the fact that we shall continue to advertise and sell our product TO THE PEOPLE.

If we would agree to sell to doctors only, to advertise for doctors only, then the medical fraternity would be obliged to recognize Peruna as being entirely within their approval.

BUT WE SHALL NOT DO THIS.

We shall continue to offer Peruna to the people. We shall continue to convey to the people our claims for Peruna as a household remedy. We shall continue to supply the people with free literature, teaching them how to use our medicine, teaching them how to avoid disease, teaching them many things of benefit to the home. We shall continue to do this, whether the medical profession like it or not.

We are proposing from this time on to take the public into our confidence. Notwithstanding that some imitators and substitutors will be attempting to put up something which they consider just as good as Peruna, we are going to draw aside the veil of secrecy and allow any one who chooses to know exactly OF WHAT PERUNA IS COMPOSED.

This ought to disarm all honest criticism. We expect, however, that criticism will continue. On some pretext or other those who are envious of the success of Peruna will continue to find fault. But we are determined to give such people no just complaint. PERUNA IS A GREAT MEDICINE.

People Who Object to Liquid Medicines Can Now Secure Peruna Tablets.

It has become a household word in millions of homes. Our faith in the remedy is stronger than ever. Every year we expect to establish new plants in foreign lands until the people of all the world are supplied with this valuable household remedy.

WE CLAIM PERUNA TO BE A CATARRH REMEDY. Buy a bottle and try it. If it helps you, be honest and acknowledge that it has helped you.

If you want us to we will publish your statement exactly as you furnish it to us. We will add no words, take away no words. If you wish us to we will publish your portrait in connection with it. We will not do this without your written request, without your entire consent.

Peruna has cured thousands of people of chronic catarrh, in many phases and locations. At least, that is what the people say to us, through unsolicited testimonials. Peruna will cure many thousand more, in spite of fabricated slanders to the contrary.

WE GUARANTEE EVERY BOTTLE OF PERUNA TO CONTAIN THE INGREDIENTS PRINTED ON THE LABEL.

We guarantee that every testimonial we use is absolutely true—in the exact language of the testifier.

We guarantee that every photograph published is the photograph of the person whose name it bears, that every word of every testimonial was authorized by the hand that signed it.

We are determined to beat our opponents by being fairer than they are, by dealing squarer than they dare to. We are determined to meet falsehood with truth, duplicity with candor, insincerity with sincerity.

We know that the users of Peruna will appreciate our stand. We believe that the dealers in Peruna will applaud our course. We expect even our opponents will be obliged to acknowledge finally that Peruna is not only an honest and useful remedy, but one of the GREATEST HOUSEHOLD MEDICINES ON THE CONTINENT.

An All-Round Man.

William V. McManus, the new president of the Letter Carriers' association of New York, had been discussing the ideal letter carrier.

With a laugh he ended:

"Yes, the ideal letter carrier needs to be as all-round, as many-sided, as divinely gifted, as the man a Cincinnati suburbanite advertised for last month.

"The advertisement ran:

"'Wanted—A man able to teach Spanish, water color painting, and the violin, and to look after the bull.'"

OFFICIAL PAPER of RED LAKE COUNTY

Subscription price, $1.50 per year
If paid in advance, $1.00.

Entered at the Post-office in Plummer, Minn. as Second Class Mail Matter.

It is stated that John E. King, of Red Lake Falls, the present state librarian, may be chosen as chairman of the democratic state central committee. There is no question but that Mr. King is possessed of many of the qualities that are generally supposed to be necessary to a man in such a position.

In the lose of their only son by drowning Congressman and Mrs. Steenerson are accorded the sincere sympathy of the public and particularly of the ninth district of Minnesota which Mr Steenerson so ably represents in congress. The son who was drowned was one of the brighest boys we have ever known and his loss renders his parents childless. These parents bestowed upon their children while living an affection that was greater than the ordinary. Congressman Steenerson's success as a public man has been truly great but his affection for his children was also great. "How little what fame can gain repays what the heart can lose."

Thief River Falls has a dog—and evidently intends to keep it. The dog was lost some months ago by a Thief River Falls man and was found by a farmer living near Red Lake Falls. The owner sent a request to the finder to return the dog and the animal was sent by express with a C. O. D. tag for the finder's expenses. The owner refused to pay the bill but got possession of the dog by the replevin route. The Thief River Falls News takes advantage of the opportunity to pay somebody a left-handed compliment and says: "With the remnants of sheriff Nelson's deputies and our new state militia it is safe to say that no fool attorney from Red Lake Falls can come up here and take possession of this dog."

SEED WHEAT—I have 200 bushels of May's Early Wonder, grown on new land and free from foul seeds. Will sell for $1.00 per pushel at present. Dan Stoneouse, NW¼ Section 4, Equality township.

ARSENIC EATERS.

Effects of the Drug on the Styrians, Who Make It.

"Eating of arsenic is common in Styria," said Alois E. Steinzierl of Vienna, a manufacturer of chemicals and drugs. "The Styrians say that arsenic makes one plump and comely and gives one strength for great exertions, such as running or mountain climbing. Styria, which is in Austria, gives the world vast quantities of arsenic. The manufacture of this drug is indeed the main Styrian industry. They who make arsenic eat it, as a rule, for they say that only the arsenic eater can withstand the arsenic fumes. These makers and eaters of the drug are comely. They have a clear color and look much younger than they are.

"The foreman in a certain factory told me that in his boyhood, when he first came to that plant, he was advised to begin to eat arsenic lest his health suffer from the fumes. He did begin, and his first two or three small doses gave him a sharp pain, like a burn, in the stomach, and this pain was followed by tremendous hunger and a violent disagreeable excitement. But as his doses increased in frequency and size their effect became pleasant. There was no longer pain or excitement. On the contrary, there were a ravenous appetite and a mood of joyous activity wherein the youth could do three men's work.

"This chap by the time he got to be thirty was taking four grains of arsenic a day. He looked at thirty, with his clear pink and white color, no more than twenty-three. He was as robust as a blacksmith. But he said he would die at forty-five or so, that being the age at which all the Styrian arsenic eaters die."—Washington Herald.

GEESE IN BERLIN.

Rigid Inspection of the Fowls Imported Into the City.

The traffic in geese at Berlin amounts to nearly $2,000,000 a year. As the domestic supply is wholly inadequate a special goose train of from fifteen to forty cars arrives daily from the Russian frontier. Each car is specially built and carries about [illegible] geese. There is a rigid inspection by health officials immediately upon the arrival of the train.

Should it be found that a single goose has died or been ill of a contagious disease in transit the entire carload is quarantined for eight days. If during this period of quarantine another goose should die the quarantine is extended for eight days, at a cost of about $500 to the owner. The penalty attaching to the bringing in of diseased geese makes the owners extremely careful to import only sound and healthy fowls. The geese which are plump and ready for market are sold to dealers at the close of the inspection. The rest, comprising the great majority, go to feeding farms in the suburbs of the city to be fattened for market.

There is a special market near the great market place at which bracken—namely, geese injured en route, but having no disease—are sold at a reduced price. Twenty-one different varieties of the Russian goose are commercially recognized, and the wholesale price varies from 44 to 60 cents a bird.—Chicago Record-Herald.

It Was Plain Enough.

A college professor who recently returned with his wife from their honeymoon greatly amused a company of people in his home town, according to the Lewiston Journal, by assuring them, on being questioned concerning their trip, that nobody where they spent their honeymoon suspected that they were bride and groom.

"What kind of a place was it you were in?" the president of the college asked. "An institution for the blind?"

Economical Woman.

Of small economies the following will be difficult to beat for smallness: A laboring man who hands over his weekly wages to his wife is allowed by her an ounce of tobacco a week. She buys it herself in two separate half ounces in order, she declares, to get the advantage of the two turns of the scale.—London Chronicle.

AN ANCIENT BIBLE.

Valuable Manuscript Treasured In the Cottonian Library.

In the Cottonian library in England is an old manuscript copy of a part of the Bible in Latin. This was used at the coronation of English sovereigns 300 years before the "stone of destiny" was brought from Scone to Westminster by Edward I. In other words, the use of this Bible for the purpose in question dated back to the year 1000.

The Bible is a quarto of 217 leaves, containing the four gospels, and seems from the style of the writing and illuminations, which are very beautiful, to have been made about the end of the ninth century.

The Testament escaped destruction in the fire at Ashburnham House in 1731, of which it bears evidence on its crumpled leaves and ruined margins. There is some evidence that the son of Edward the Elder, Athelstan the Glorious, who was king of the west Saxons from 925 to 940, owned this Bible and presented it to the church of Dover.—Philadelphia Record.

Would Choose His Company.

In the west, some twenty years ago, there lived a good man who gave up a part of his time to teaching the Indians the Christian faith. On one of his trips he stopped at the ranch of a well to do and very religious Swede and requested a night's lodging.

The Swede thought a great deal of the missionary and disliked to offend him, but he also disliked extremely having a pack of dirty, greasy Indians hanging about his place, so, after much hemming and hawing, he stated his objections.

"But these Indians are Christians, my good brother, and if you can't abide with them for a single night here on earth how do you expect to dwell in heaven with them through all eternity?" inquired the indignant missionary.

The Swede was perplexed, but, after thoughtfully scratching his head a moment he said, "The Bible says that in my father's house are many mansions, sir; I think I haf a separate house."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Sympathy Leans to Legs.

"There is one appeal to charity that is pretty sure to be answered," said a philanthropist. "That is a request for an artificial leg. Legs, somehow, are warmly appreciated by the general public, and the fellow who has to scrape along without one is the object of sincere commiseration. During my fifteen years' experience in philanthropic work I have issued appeals to the people at large on behalf of persons who wanted various parts of their anatomy replaced. Some wanted teeth, some an eye, others a hook like Captain Cuttle's. Physical deficiencies of that kind aroused but little interest, but just let a man advertise the fact that he was in need of a leg and enough money was quickly forthcoming to fit him out with three or four pairs of legs."—New York Press.

Very Much Alike.

"See here, Pat," said his employer, "didn't you tell me that when you was out west the Indians scalped you? And now you have your hat off I see you have an extraordinary quantity of hair! You certainly told me so, didn't you, Pat?"

"Oi did, sor," answered Pat, "but Oi bear in moind now that it was me brudder Moike. It's thot much we be aloike that Oi think Oi'm Moike an' Moike be me."—New York Times.

Never Before.

First Lecturer—I've a great story to tell you—one you never heard me tell before. Second Lecturer—Is it a really good story? First Lecturer—It certainly is—one of the best. Second Lecturer—Then I'm sure you never told it before.—Lyceumite and Talent.

One Way to Be Happy.

The only way to be happy is to take every loaf of bread at its face value and every pound of butter for sixteen ounces, for the sure road to discontent is to inquire more closely into such occult matters.—St. Paul Dispatch.

Regular Price $8.50 per pair. To Introduce We Will Sell You a Sample Pair for Only $4.80 (CASH WITH ORDER $4.55)

NAILS, TACKS OR GLASS WON'T LET OUT THE AIR

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES.

Result of 15 years experience in tire making. No danger from THORNS, CACTUS, PINS, NAILS, TACKS or GLASS. Serious punctures, like intentional knife cuts, can be vulcanized like any other tire.

Two Hundred Thousand pairs now in actual use. Over Seventy-five Thousand pairs sold last year.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road thus overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump and two Sampson metal puncture closers on full paid orders (these metal puncture closers to be used in case of intentional knife cuts or heavy gashes). Tires to be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination.

We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. Ask your Postmaster, Banker, Express or Freight Agent or the Editor of this paper about us. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a small trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

COASTER-BRAKES, built-up-wheels, saddles, pedals, parts and repairs, and everything in the bicycle line are sold by us at half the usual prices charged by dealers and repair men. Write for our big SUNDRY catalogue.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

Farmer Burned To Death.

Paul E. Fossbakken, one of the most prominent farmers in the vicinity of Fosston, was burned to death in his barn on Tuesday evening. He had been in town during the day and after returning late in the afternoon, he noticed smoke issuing from the barn and went out to investigate. He went up into the hay mow, where the smoke seemed to be coming from and his wife released the stock from the ground floor. When she got the stock turned loose she called to her husband but got no answer. She then climbed up stairs but could not locate her husband. Fearing he was overcome by smoke, she called in some near neighbors. The smoke was so dense that a lantern could not burn and it was impossible for the men to locate Mr. Fossbakken. Fire broke out in the hay and the entire barn and contents were soon in ruins. In the smoking ruins the dead body was found, charred beyond recognition.

Deceased resided a few miles north of Fosston aud was one of the best known farmers in eastern Polk county. He was 47 years of age and leaves a widow and a large family of children to mourn his untimely loss.

"It would be stranger yet, infinitely stranger," replied the man with the corrugated brow, "if any of them ever had softening of the heart."—Puck.

PLOT ON THRONE OF PORTUGAL IS BARED

LOSS OF NERVE BY YOUNG OFFICER FOILS CONSPIRACY TO OVERTHROW MONARCHY.

REPUBLIC WAS TO HAVE FOLLOWED MURDERS

Signals to Ships in Harbor Flashed Out, But Barrack Doors Were Locked and Deep Laid Plan Ends in a Fizzle.

Lisbon, Feb. 27.—A conspiracy to overthrow the Portuguese monarchy and proclaim a republic on the night King Carlos and Prince Luiz were assassinated failed because a young army officer lost his nerve, is the story that has become public here. Signals to the ships in the harbor and the barracks on the slope of St. George's Hill were shown toward midnight from the roof of the national library, and bands of men went to the barracks of an artillery and infantry regiment which were to join in the proclamation of a republic. The signals brought no responses and the doors of the barracks were found locked.

The entire conspiracy fell through, it is related, because of the treason of a young lieutenant who, after the assassination of the king, confessed to his father, an officer, the role he was to play. The young man claimed that he had been deceived; that he did not know regicide was contemplated, having been led to suppose that only the life of the dictator was to be taken.

Political Leaders as Plotters.

That some of the desperate political leaders were involved in the series of abortive plots against Franco's life which preceded the king's murder is believed in well-informed circles here. Franco himself told a friend the day before he left Lisbon (virtually upon the order of the government) that it was impossible to reveal to the world what he had learned of the intrigues of the enemies of the king and himself, and it was, therefore, better for him to retire forever from the political arena. The connection between the republicans and the regicides is equally difficult to establish.

The disclaimers of leaders like Bernardino Machado must be accepted so far as the "peaceful wing" is concerned, but this cannot be said of the advanced or radical wing.

Throws Veil Over Crime.

The mystery behind the murder of the king and prince is not likely ever to be completely lifted. The new Portuguese government prefers that the crime should be regarded both at home and abroad as the deed of individuals carried away by the political passions of the moment, and inasmuch as the republicans are also anxious to clear their skirts of responsibility for regicide, both sides are glad to see an investigation which would probe the affair to the bottom smothered.

Yet there is undoubtedly much that could be cleared up. It is a matter of common knowledge that there were intrigues in high places as well as low before the tragedy occurred and the rage of the leaders and lieutenants of the two "rotative" parties against which Premier Franco and King Carlos were warring exceeded all bounds.

QUEEN HAS NARROW ESCAPE.

Carriage in Which Wilhelmina and Prince Are Driving Wrecked.

The Hague, Feb, 27.—Queen Wilhelmina and Prince Henry, her husband, had a narrow escape from serious injury in a carriage accident, which occurred near the palace Wednesday. The prince was driving the carriage in which her majesty was seated. In a narrow part of the road an electric street car, coming at full speed, suddenly crashed into the vehicle before the prince could turn out. The impact was severe and the carriage was wrecked, three wheels being torn off.

Fortunately, neither the queen nor the prince was hurt. Her majesty was somewhat unnerved, but was able to walk to the palace. Shortly after she left the palace and went to the residence of her mother in order to reassure her and prove that she had not been injured.

Whisky House Burned.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Feb. 27.—The wholesale whisky, house of Randolph Rose & Company, 819-821 Chestnut street, in the heart of the business section of the city, was destroyed by fire. The loss is estimated at $130,000, with insurance of $75,000. The building was a four-story structure and was burned to the ground. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Crude Oil Above Dollar.

Lima, O., Feb. 27.—The Seep Purchasing agency (Standard Oil company), advanced the price of Lima and Indiana crude oils five cents a barrel Wednesday, placing the North Lima product above the dollar mark for the first time in more than a year. The quotations: North Lima, $1.04; South Lima, 99 cents; Indiana, 99 cents.

No Longer a Military Post.

Guthrie, Okla., Feb. 27.—Fort Reno, on the Canadian river, 40 miles west of here, ceased to be a military post, when the garrison, consisting of the Third battalion of the Nineteenth infantry, was moved to Fort McKenzie. The fort will be turned into a government remount station.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

A Bold Holdup.

St. Paul.—Dick Turp was a dashing, venturesome sort of desperado, but he was not in it with the lone highwayman who held up Batroot Bros.' saloon at Jackson and Eleventh streets.

The clock had just struck nine when Christian Batroot and eight friends were rudely interrupted by a tall gentleman whose features were concealed by a black handkerchief. He wore a heavy automobile ulster and a leather automobile cap. The most distinguishing feature of the intruder, however, was a full-grown revolver with which he emphasized his command: "Hands up!"

Mr. Batroot's friends obeyed the order promptly, but Mr. Batroot essayed to contradict, the masked one's authority to run things in his place of business. Mr. Batroot didn't get very far with his part of the sketch, however, because the robber shot at him. The bullet flew uncomfortably close to Mr. Batroot's car, and figuring that a whole skin was worth more than an empty cash register, Mr. Batroot followed the example of the eight and elevated his hands into the smokewreathed atmosphere of the room.

Will Lecture.

Minneapolis. — Gov. Johnson has made an agreement to deliver a series of Chautauqua lectures this summer and has also made a provisional agreement with the Slayton Lyceum bureau of Chicago to deliver a series of lectures next year. The governor will prepare two lectures, the subject being "The Majesty of Law" and "Landmarks of Liberty."

Gov. Johnson said that he had received a great number of invitations to deliver lectures at different places this summer and that while he could not, on account of his official duties, accept any great number of them, he had decided to speak at a few places, making a series of not to exceed ten or a dozen lectures. In order to save the trouble of having the details of the arrangements on his hands, he had placed the matter in the hands of a lecture bureau.

He has also made a provisional agreement for the next year, although he says this is not a contract. He does not say what the provisions are, but it is presumed that the political developments next summer may be one of the deciding factors.

Insurance Profits.

St. Paul.—According to compilations made from the returns of fire insurance companies to the state insurance commissioner, the year 1907 was profitable so far as Minnesota business was concerned.

In the entire state the premiums for all kinds of fire insurance companies amounted to $7,113,690; the losses only $3,105,866. For 1906, the premiums for the state were $6,579,451, and the losses $3,638,838. In other words, during 1907, the fire insurance premiums were nearly $600,000 greater and the losses less than the year before.

In Minneapolis the premiums were $1,689,213, and the losses but $696,224. The city of Minneapolis alone paid fire insurance companies during the one year $1,000,000 more than the companies returned in the adjustment of losses. This tremendous profit in Minneapolis was also true the year before, when the premiums were but little less, $1,627,385, to losses of $472,416.

The above figures do not include the cost of doing business in the state.

Body Found.

Hamline.—The body of an unknown man, with both cheeks eaten by animals, was found in some brush at Snelling and Minneapolis avenues, one mile north of the state fair grounds. Lillie Schecht, nineteen years of age, living in the neighborhood, made the discovery. Coroner A. Miller and Dr. J. M. Finnell found it impossible to make a thorough examination of the body, which was in a frozen condition, and were unable to tell how the man came to his death. A further examination will be made of the body at the morgue, for there are some indications which might mean that the man met with foul play.

Nothing was found on the body which gave a clue as to his identity.

Later it was learned the dead man was Chris Seamons, a German laborer of St. Paul.

NEWS NOTES.

This play fulfills all the necessary requirements of modern melodrama and has for its hero a character whose thrilling adventures possess the charm of mystery.

St. Paul.—The State Bank on Wabasha street which closed its doors on Jan. 18. has resume business.

The General Demand

of the Well-Informed of the World has always been for a simple, pleasant and efficient liquid laxative remedy of known value; a laxative which physicians could sanction for family use because its component parts are known to them to be wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, acceptable to the system and gentle, yet prompt, in action.

In supplying that demand with its excellent combination of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the California Fig Syrup Co. proceeds along ethical lines and relies on the merits of the laxative for its remarkable success.

That is one of many reasons why Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is given the preference by the Well-Informed. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

Slept With a Bear.

Two Harbors—While the wind, whistling weirdly, wound it way in woodland wilds, and the drifting snow drove deeper in the dells, Earnest A. Lange, of Mendota, Minn., snored the anthem of peace in the fullest confidence of personal safety without the least notion that his head was resting on the furry stomach of a big black bear, and that the warmth which flowed through his body in spite of the bitter cold weather came from a sleeping bruin whose lair he was sharing. It was not until the cold gray dawn of the morning after that he learned the truth about his situation.

IMMIGRATION FROM SOUTH EXPECTED

U. S. FARMERS ARE RECOGNIZING SPLENDID OPPORTUNITIES OFFERED BY WESTERN CANADA.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 9, 1908.—Present indications are that the Canadian Northwest will draw an exceptionally heavy movement of new settlers from the United States this year. It should surpass the banner record for 1907. This is not only based on the fact that the Americans have come to realize generally that the Canadian Northwest offers splendid opportunities, but also because the railroads have awakened to the fact and are offering rates to the Canadian Northwest which are exceptionally favorable.

The lines which lead to St. Paul from the east and south are offering homeseekers' rates to the Canadian Northwest this year which are on a parity with those in existence to the southwest for a couple of seasons.

These rates can be obtained from any agent of the Canadian government, who will be pleased to give all information possible regarding those districts which offer the greatest inducements to settlers. The weather throughout Western Canada has been remarkably good this year. A telegram from the winter wheat belt of Southern Alberta dated at Cardston, Alberta, January 29th, says:

"This winter up to January 25 was nothing short of a marvel, in fact, it was the finest anyone can remember for twenty-five years though there have been others nearly as good. The days were fine, sunny and warm with light frosts at night. Overcoats and gloves, etc., were discarded by most people in the day time. There was so little frost in the ground that post holes could be dug without any trouble after the first inch was broken through. Winter wheat remained fresh and green although there has been no snow since the September storm. If there is an early spring, winter wheat should gain a great start."

Amongst the reports of the yield of last year the following extracts are taken:

H. Howe, of Magrath, Alta, writing on November, 1907, says: "I have 70 acres in crop, 50 acres of wheat and seven acres of oats. My average yield of oats was 35 bushels to the acre, and of wheat 45 bushels. The value to me was $35 per acre."

J. F. Haycock, of Magrath, writes in November: "I had 65 acres in winter wheat, which went 60 bushels to the acre; oats averaged 80 bushels. I also had 12 tons of hay worth $10 per ton. I got 600 bushels of potatoes from three acres of land; I got eight tons per acre from five acres of sugar beet."

J. F. Bradshaw, of Magrath, had 1,030 acres of winter wheat last year which averaged 39½ bushels to the acre. The value of his farm products per acre was: Wheat, $31.60; oats, $11.20 and barley, $25.15.

A Prayer

As forth I fare Sin-conquering,
  When I have found It,
Let me not lack for stone and sling
  Till I have downed It,
Nor let mine ears with plaudits ring
  Till I have found It.
Teach me to go straight through a thing
  And not around it;
Close to my lips Life's bugle bring
  And let me sound it,
And lay my life down for my King
  When Love has crowned it.

THE ZOO MAN

By ELIZABETH MICHELS

(Copyright.)

"Yes, I remember—" said the man, reflectively.

He stood between the children—a boy and a girl—leaning on a fence in the park. In age he looked about 40, of distinguished appearance—soldier-like; and he gave me the impression of being one of those who is in complete sympathy with the young.

Even before I heard his soft, earnest voice I was convinced of this; for the boy constantly regarded him affectionately out of great, grave eyes, and the girl had an unconscious habit of slipping her tiny hand into his.

"Yes, I remember," he repeated. "The Ibex is one of those things that wears a clothes-basket and sings; and the noise that it makes is the cause of earthquakes—an effect that it constantly brings."

He made the whimsical statement with a sincerity of tone that would have been convincing to the least imaginative of juvenile minds. Here, he was evidently appealing to ideally sympathetic ones. The boy gave a nod of comprehension.

"Like at San Francisco. The Ibexes must have sung very loud, though."

"Bassoon playing had something to do with it," said the man, admirably concealing every vestige of cynicism. "There was a mare—"

He paused. I felt sure he was a born story-teller and was with difficulty controlling a propensity to wander into fantastic by-paths.

"What became of the clothes-basket?" inquired the girl.

"I think they were taken to the Japanese laundry, and used as schoolrooms for the children," he answered.

"Or swallowed up when the earth opened," suggested the boy.

"Yes. It's very sad to see the poor creatures without anything on," admitted the man.

"Never mind, they'll soon be measured for new ones," sympathized the girl as she took his hand.

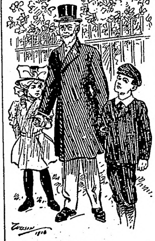
They moved on, stopping at an enclosure a little way off.

"You like the goats," she urged. "They're so silky and tame."

"Yes," he agreed. "But they get fractious sometimes."

"Fractious means broken, doesn't it?" asked the boy.

"Not when you talk about goats," replied the man with decision. "They always come off scot free. The one I'm thinking of did."



They Moved On.

"Tell us about him?" cooed the girl.

"Once," began the man, "a nanny-goat wanted a ride, so she sat on a broomstick astride, but it started so quick that she fell off the stick right on a policeman—who died!"

"What did they do with him?" wondered the boy.

"They buried him—on the hire-system," confided the man.

"I know. In bits. Serve him right!" asserted the girl.

"Why?" asked the boy with surprise.

"For gettin' in the way," was her ready answer.

"I don't suppose he did that on purpose," debated the boy.

"That doesn't matter," said she. "He spoilt everything!"

"Spoilt it! How? The man put just the right touch of wonder into the question. It showed what he could do in the way of stimulating the childish mind. I envied him the gift.

"Why," explained the girl, "if the policeman hadn't got in the way, think how the goat would have bounced!"

"True," mused the man. "I never thought of that."

I was not near enough to catch the fanciful things that passed between the trio for some time after this; but in the marsupial section I managed to get within hearing distance again. The boy was speaking.

"When he sits up like that he looks like a hanson cab."

"That reminds me," rejoined the man. "A very large male kangaroo had a pouch that was licensed for two; and, once, for a fare, he'd a tortoise and hare. This really once happened—it's true!"

The boy pondered the circumstance for awhile.

"I thought it was only the mothers who had pouches," he hazarded.

"The one I'm speaking of had all the latest improvements," ventured the man.

"I know," nodded the girl. "He was a taxameter!"

"Of course, the tortoise won," declared the boy.

"No," confessed the man. "The race had to be declared off because the kangaroo skidded."

"It must have been a very expensive ride," commented the girl.

"I think it was only a trial run," said the man.

In the Elephant house he must have made up something more than usually grotesque, because the discussion that ensued between the children was particularly lively. But there, as well as in the Lion house, on account of the people and the noise, I could catch little of their talk. When, again, I had the opportunity of listening it was in the comparative solitude of the Zebra yards. They were manifesting extreme interest in the Quaggas.

"They were soldiers once," the man was saying.

"Of course; look at their stripes," quoth the boy.

The girl began spelling out the descriptive notice that is affixed to the fence. "From South Africa!" she exclaimed. "Where they in the war?"

"Yes, in the transport department," rejoined the man. "It happened near the Vaal."

"Please go on," was urged.

"A Quagga who wasn't afraid," narrated the man, "was always the first on parade, but when fighting began he got into a van, which he drove a long distance for aid."

"Ah, a turning movement! Good man!" remarked the boy.

"So he got the D. C. M.," augmented the man.

The boy began thinking. "Yes," said he, presently. "The Distinguished Conduct Medal. Of course!"

"No—District Court Marshal," corrected the man.

"Poor thing!" murmured the girl. "And now he's in lager."

"Oh, no," objected the man. "This is the Lower House, you know. He was elected to it by Het Volk, and—"

The Quagga raised his unmusical voice.

"He's speaking now. Hush!" admonished the man.

"Politics?" whispered the boy.

"Yes—suffragettes!" adventured the girl.

Then she said something about "Home," and they went off at a brisk pace. As I strolled in their wake I felt grateful for the glimpse I had had of the devotion which childhood can inspire in the heart of a grown man; of the magic sensibility that enables the adult mind to see things with the eyes of youth.

The afternoon was drawing in, and the people were streaming through the gateway when I reached it. As I mingled with them on my way out there was a touch upon my arm and, turning, I looked down into the uplifted eyes of the girl. Such pleading eyes, each with a tear trembling on the long lashes. By her side was the boy looking deeply concerned.

"Please, please, help us to find father!" she implored. "We've lost him!"

She saw at once that I was ready to obey her, and, putting her hand in mine, led me away while she poured out her fears for her father's safety. Of personal anxiety there was not a trace. The reason followed quickly. A blow on the head from a Boer rifle while he was defending a wounded comrade had destroyed his reason. Once withdrawn from their protection he was irresponsible—helpless as a child.

All day I had been laboring under a delusion. The man was their charge not they his. It was they who had been endeavoring to stimulate his fanciful imagination, and so provide him with entertainment; and I had been deceived by his unconscious humor.

When we found him wandering about aimlessly, as we did within five minutes, the girl's relief was intense.

"My darling!" she sobbed, trying to get her small arms round him. "My poor dear!"

He showed no feeling at the reunion, made no remark; merely fell into step between his small protectors, and left the gardens with one of them on either side guarding him tenderly.

Walking Dresses

The first costume is a very pretty dress in pastel blue face cloth; the skirt has a pleat each side front stitched nearly the whole length; from this two rows of silk oriental embroidery are carried quite round. The bodice has embroidery up each side, and a pointed vest of white silk embroidered with blue and gold tinsel thread. The tight fitting under part of sleeve is tucked; the upper part, which is full, is tucked horizontally on the front. Hat of pale blue felt trimmed with bows of brown velvet and ostrich feathers.

Materials required: Nine yards 46 inches wide, nine yards embroidery, seven yards sateen for lining.

The second has a skirt of gray plaid cloth with flounce of plain cloth at foot, above which is one of plaid. The coat is of the plain cloth with revers and under sleeves of plaid. As will be seen the cut is quite new; the front being only fastened on bust, shows a smart blouse beneath. Hat of gray straw trimmed with silk ruches and damask roses.

Materials required: Five yards plaid 46 inches wide, four yards plain cloth 46 inches wide, six yards silk for lining coat.

HUCKABACK WORK LENDS ITSELF WELL TO FANCY DESIGNS.

Huckaback is again as popular, if not more so, than ever before with the fancy needle workers. No wonder, after one sees the lovely bits of fancy work made with huckaback and tinsel. Some very pretty bags are made by using silver or gold thread to interlace the little huckaback threads and often the work is more artistically outlined with gold or silver beads threaded while the worker is outlining the pattern. Every style imaginable is seen in this work and many oriental patterns show a variety of colors with gold plentifully used in outlines. A dresser scarf was made with three tabs at each end, each end buttonhole stitched with pale blue silk and worked with eyelet. Above this was a six-inch band of pale blue mosaic design, outlined with gold. In the center was a triangle of gold and blue. Pincushions, chair cushions and practically everything in a cover design can be fashioned this way. Little opera bags are woven with silver threads and hung with long pendant silver threads and gold interwoven, with gold threads and gold beads, or black thread and gold beads. The heavy silk-like floss is best for the purpose and can be threaded with finer gold threads.

IN VOGUE

Girdles are empire at the back.

The spring tailormade is prettier than for years.

Coats are short and fit the form closely in the newest suits.

Sleeves, despite variations, generally are upon Japanese lines.

Metal decked evening scarfs are distinctly Egyptian in appearance.

Cretonne patterns appear on everything, from organdie to pique.

Skirts almost without exception are plaited in one way or another.

The plain coat sleeve is the only one used for the new short, tight skirts.

The touch of green is chic just now, and includes the kid slippers of rich laurel green.

Chip straw hats, it is said, again will blossom out. Just now leghorns lead. Coarse straws are more prominent than formerly.

A glorified rajah silk just out, seeking spring favor, has a satin finish and is in a two-tone weave.

French Girdles.

The new girdles sent over from the center of fashion are narrow strips of ribbon or velvet. They go around the waist from the center of the front, cross in the back, return, and tie a little to one side in a knot, whence the ends hang to the knees. It is a graceful style, but it will never suit women who show any signs of becoming stout, for the lines in front only accentuate the size of the hips.

Velvet Coats with Cloth Collars.

Nothing is prettier than the cloth skirt surmounted by a long velvet coat the same color. The skirt will have a two-inch band of velvet at the edge. For young girls dainty pastel shades are much sought after.

TO BE ATTRACTIVE.

Hair Must Be Kept in Perfect Condition—Arrange It to Best Advantage.

The secret of beautiful hair is in knowing how to make the most of it, how to coax and coddle it into growing, and to arrange it to the best possible advantage.

It is the natural frame for the face, and whether or not this frame is becoming remains with the woman herself.

A horrid, untidy, slipshod way of twisting up one's crown of glory will make the most adorable woman look like a cartoon.

Arrange it in fluffy, pretty, neat coils and it will change the cartoon into a picture worth photographing.

It is wonderful what terrible things a woman can do with her own head.

You think this when you go to a matinee and view the sea of mussy pompadours and crooked parts and wispy locks spread out before you.

Hairpins are falling, hair ribbons are dusty and soiled, straggly ends of hair are looking out to see what they can observe, while here and there is displayed the business end of a switch that has not been properly concealed.

Combs are set in crooked, and in many cases a head of hair looks more like a bird's nest than a coiffure.

To have pretty hair you first of all must have clean hair.

This means that you should shampoo it every two weeks.

The hair catches even more dust than the face.

It has a thousand little arms reaching out for it.

The Bordered Gown.

An original white frock of the "youthful simplicity" order struck a new note the other day, being worn by a golden-haired girl in slight mourning. It was a soft filminess of very fine white net resembling tulle, and both the upper skirt (short to the knees in front and apparently caught up at the back of the waist to fall in irregularly edged box pleats) and the lower one were bordered with a deep hem of black velvet, above which was embroidered in a jet running design of round garlands and ribbons, looping over and under a band of silver tissue laid beneath the net.

This idea could be varied and carried out in all sorts of colors, or in one or two shades combined with a white or ivory gown, or all in one pale hue.

The difference in material is often sufficient contrast; velvet on chiffon or crepe de chine, for instance.

Lace Gowns.

The majority of lace gowns are carried out in white, for a great deal of white is worn at the southern resorts both in regard to toilettes and millinery, with ivory as its chief rival, but the lace gown is also conspicuous in colors such as raspberry pink and mole brown, a frock of the latter carried out in punched lace having beneath it a slip of ivory satin.

Serge Cutaway Coat.

A successor to the covert coat which long ago had its deathblow so far as smart dressmaking is concerned, is a serge cutaway with long basques, fastening with three buttons, and in either black or blue. This is a separate coat and will be distinctly modish with either tub frocks or tweeds and cheviots.

WOMAN'S BACKACHE

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

GREATNESS.

The man who has greatness thrust upon him is always sure that he could have achieved it if that had been necessary.

Chance for Conversion.

In the ante-bellum days, when Anson P. Morrill of Maine was making his first run for congress, a henchman of his opponent met an old minister of that section slowly jogging along the road on his old horse and hailed him with: "Who are you going to vote for?" "Well," said the old man, "I thought I should give Anson a vote. Anson has good timber in him, I believe." "Oh, but I don't see how you can vote for him! Don't you know he's a Universalist? He doesn't believe in a hell." With a quiet twinkle in his eye the old man said: "We'll send him to Washington. When he has served his two years if he doesn't believe in a hell I shall be very much surprised."

HER CHOICE OF DEMISE.

Pathetic Thought of Little Girl Who Had Lost Playmate.

Mary had for neighbor a small playmate, a much-loved and attractive boy. The little lad rushed across the street one day, throwing back a glance at his mother. At that instant a trolley car swept around the corner and the resulting tragedy threw the town into mourning. Each family wept as though its own son had been lost. Mary was utterly disconsolate and, little as she had previously known of death, realized in a childish way the added horror of this one. In her convulsive grief, and while her father and mother sat with sobs in their throats and tears overflowing, Mary straightened up and sobbed:

"Mother, when I die I hope it will be of a disease and not of a damage!"

BRAIN POWER

Increased by Proper Feeding.

A lady writer who not only has done good literary work, but reared a family, found in Grape-Nuts the ideal food for brain work and to develop healthy children. She writes:—

"I am an enthusiastic proclaimer of Grape-Nuts as a regular diet. I formerly had no appetite in the morning and for 8 years while nursing my four children, had insufficient nourishment for them.

"Unable to eat breakfast I felt faint later, and would go to the pantry and eat cold chops, sausage, cookies, doughnuts or anything I happened to find. Being a writer, at times my head felt heavy and my brain asleep.

"When I read of Grape-Nuts I began eating it every morning, also gave it to the children, including, my 10 months old baby, who soon grew as fat as a litle pig, good natured and contented.

"Within a week I had plenty of breast milk, and felt stronger within two weeks. I wrote evenings and feeling the need of sustained brain power, began eating a small saucer of Grape-Nuts with milk instead of my usual indigestible hot pudding, pie, or cake for dessert at night.

"Grape-Nuts did wonders for me and I learned to like it. I did not mind my housework or mother's cares, for I felt strong and full of 'go.' I grew plump, nerves strong, and when I wrote my brain was active and clear; indeed, the dull head pain never returned."

A RUSSIAN REFUGEE

TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE UNDERGONE BY MAURICE BALANOVSKY.

His Daring and Exciting Escape from Siberian Military Prison with Several Companions—Now in United States.

Fort Dodge, Ia.—There arrived in Fort Dodge a few days ago a Russian refugee named Maurice Balanovsky, after perhaps as daring and exciting escape from a Siberian military prison as ever fell to the lot of mortal man, after having spent three years of his life as a convict.

Balanovsky was born in Odessa, his father being a wealthy merchant of the city. He was given every advantage and was highly educated in his own language. Three years ago in September his father invited a number of his countrymen to spend the day with him. They feasted until afternoon, when like vultures the Cossacks swept down upon them and in the yard of the Balanovsky home 60 of the party lay butchered, for no other reason than they were Jewish by birth. Among the slain was the father of young Balanovsky, and kneeling by his bruised and mangled body he swore a terrible oath of vengeance. For this, and the additional reason he was a social democrat, he was cast into prison. His mother and two younger brothers escaped to Bremen and later were given assistance by relatives in Fort Dodge and were able to reach here. Their property was confiscated by the czar.

After several weeks in a prison at Odessa young Balanovsky was called into court, and although he plead his own case and was praised for his oratory before the magistrate, he was sentenced to a life of servitude in a military prison in Siberia. Soon the weary march began, but his heart never failed him. His one hope was for a chance to escape and to come to America, there to join his mother and brothers and to tell of the terrible sufferings of the people in these prisons. Being a skilled mechanic he was given liberties after a time in the prison, and although compelled to report daily to the police department, managed to arrange for the escape of 17 of his friends, two of whom were girls.

MAURICE BALANOVSKY.

Plans were laid for their escape and finally the little party made a dash for freedom, nine of them gave up their lives in the first ten miles, but Balanovsky and seven others managed to make their way to freedom after more than three months of wandering by night and hiding by day. Sometimes for several days they were compelled to subsist on roots and herbs, and although they passed within sight of the towers and spires of Odessa, they dared not visit their friends. Neither were the Jewish people with whom they came in contact able to assist them in any way out of the country, for fear of the harm which would befall them should it become known to the secret police of the empire. Finally they crossed the frontier and were able to send word to friends and relatives in this country. Money was immediately forwarded and about one month ago the party landed in Boston. Soon after landing the two girls of the party were united in marriage to two of the male members of the party, while Balanovsky came directly to this city to the home of his cousin, Joe Steinberg.

The terrible experience he underwent told on him physically and from a rugged youth of 17 when imprisoned he is now terrible amaciated from the torture of the past three years, as well as his experience in making his escape. Several times, he says, they were attacked in their way across country and were compelled to take human life to preserve their own, and his own body shows the marks left by bullets. In this city for the first time since the evening his father and 60 of his countrymen were murdered in their yard at Odessa, he had the pleasure of meeting his mother, and will at once set to work to retrieve their lost fortune and monthly—as do many of his countrymen—send back a small part of his earnings to friends and relatives that they, too, in time, may enjoy the blessings of liberty in the United States.

INN FED ENGLAND'S FAMOUS.

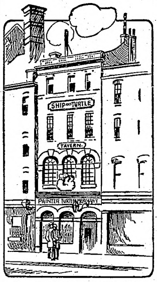
Many Cabinet Dinners Held in Old Ship Tavern in London.

London.—The Ship tavern, one of the most famous of London's riverside inns, in Greenwich, has closed its doors after an existence extending back to the days of the great English statesman, William Pitt, who denounced the war against the American colonies and after whom was named Fort Pitt, from which the city of Pittsburg takes its name. It was at the Ship tavern that Pitt instituted the dinners during his time of 16 years as a member of the ministry.

In the days when Greenwich was a fashionable riverside resort the Ship tavern became known all over the world. It was while William Pitt was leader of the ministry 120 years ago that he introduced the custom of the yearly gathering together at the close of the parliamentary session the cabinet ministers, the judges of the higher courts and the members of the government to partake of a banquet at the Ship tavern, Greenwich, known as the ministerial white-bait dinner. Its feature was the white bait, a small fish not much more than an inch in length, for which Greenwich is famous, which is considered a great delicacy. It is eaten with cayenne pepper, lemon juice and brown bread and butter.



Famous Ship-Tavern of London.

The custom of the ministerial white-bait dinner at the Ship tavern was continued regularly from the time it was instituted by Pitt until 1880. After that time the custom was not observed regularly and ten years ago it fell into entire disuse.

IS IDOLIZED BY WORKMEN.

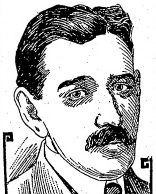
New Yorker Gives Free Rent When He Cuts Wages.

New York.—Herman A. Metz, city comptroller of New York, who owns the Ettrick mills, situated in a New England village, has set a precedent that has made him the idol of 500 employes.

A few days ago the painful duty devolved on him of notifying his 500 employes that it would be possible to operate the mills only three days a week. The gloomy countenances of the workers indicated what the order meant to them. Then Metz added that the employes who live in his houses would need to pay no rent until they were working full time again.



HERMAN A. METZ

A cheer that could be heard throughout the town was his reward.

Asked to explain his action, Comptroller Metz said:

"I felt that my employes could not earn enough in these three days to enable them to live with any comfort, and it is only just that I should aid them until work starts in full force.

"To begin with, factory employes are illy paid, and for that reason are rarely prepared to meet adverse conditions. In my opinion they are the class of people most deserving of help and encouragement.

"The rents I am giving to them amount to something like $2,000 a month, but I know the cause is a worthy one, and wish that more could be done to help this class of people."

Wanted His Money Back.

Barker—Long is a far-sighted man isn't he?

Parker—That's so. Since I borrowed five dollars from him he can see me half a mile away.

HOW DO THEY GET IN?

Physiological Problem That Nora Could Not Solve.

A Philadelphia physician tells of an amusing conversation between two Irish girls in domestic service who, while on the board walk at Atlantic City one day not long ago, were exchanging views as to their various physical ailments.

"It's a sthrange thing, ain't it, Norah," asked one of the girls, "how manny new koinds of diseases people get these days. Only this mor-rnin' I were readin' an advertisement of a new midicine. It said it were wonderful for a sluggish liver."

"Gwan!" exclaimed the other girl, scornfully. "Liver trouble an't no new disease. Me own grandfather was havin' liver trouble whin I were not more'n tin years old."

"Maybe," was the laconic response. "But," added Norah, "what I want to know is: how do thim slugs get inside the liver, anyhow?"—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

ECZEMA FOR 55 YEARS.

Suffered Torments from Birth—In Frightful Condition—Got No Help Until Cuticura Cured Him.

"I had an itching, tormenting eczema ever since I came into the world, and I am now a man 55 years old. I tried all kinds of medicines I heard of, but found no relief. I was truly in a frightful condition. At last I broke out all over with red and white boils, which kept growing until they were as big as walnuts, causing great pain and misery, but I kept from scratching as well as I could. I was so run down that I could hardly do my work. I used Cuticura Soap, Ointment, Resolvent, and Pills for about eight months, and I can truthfully say I am cured. Hale Bordwell, Tipton, Ia., Aug. 17, 1907."

"I cheerfully endorse the above testimonial. It is the truth. I know Mr. Bordwell and know the condition he was in. Nelson R. Burnett, Tipton, Ia."

A Nature Student.

The faculty with which the New York child grasps the "new idea" in matters educational is charmingly illustrated in a composition recently penned by a six-year-old. Her teacher had asked for brief compositions on "Animals I Have Seen." This is the result, written in the present day vertical penmanship:

"Do you see the little robin swinging on the tree? Do you see the little goldfish a-swimming in the bowl? Who teached these two to fly so beautifully together? Who struck the feathers on their breasts? 'Twas God—'Twas God. He done it."

To refuse to yield to others when reason or a special cause require it is a mark of pride and stiffness.—Thomas a Kempis.

One on the Teacher.

Among the corps of instructors in one of Washington's high schools is a woman highly esteemed as a teacher of American history. The class under her care had under consideration one day topics concerning the civil war when one volunteered, in illustration of some point, a lurid account of a battle in which, he claimed, an uncle of his had participated.

The teacher interposed to observe that the anecdote could hardly be correct, as the uncle in question was near her own age and she was not born until after the close of the war.

At this the boy seemed a trifle chagrined at being so evidently in the wrong. After a few moments of embarrassed silence he said, with the naive air of one who has much the best of the situation:

"Oh, but, Miss Blank, I did not mean the Revolutionary war!"—Pittsburg Leader.

In Society.

The negro barber on a limited train running from an eastern city to Chicago was once shaving a man whom he recognized as a well known merchant of Albany. The barber worked with especial skill and was rewarded with a substantial fee.

When the barber was telling the other employees on the train of his good luck, he announced pompously:

"He's shore a mighty fine gentleman, dat Mr. Smith. Jes' as nice a man as you'd wanter meet. I's often been in his sto' in Albany, but dis is de fust time I's ever met him socially."—Lippincott's.

The Greedy One.

Traveling through South Africa, Mr. Dudley Kidd, the author of "The Essential Kaffir," once accused a native of being greedy. The native turned eyes of reproach upon him.

"Me greedy, baas?" he said. "It takes two Kaffirs to eat a sheep in a day, but only one Hottentot. Hottentot greedy, not Kaffir."

City and Country Folk.

The rapid rate of life, the number of decisions in an hour, the many things to keep account of in a busy city man's or woman's life, seem monstrous to a country brother. He doesn't see how we live at all. A day in New York or Chicago fills him with terror. The danger and noise make it appear like a permanent earthquake. But settle him there and in a year or two he will have caught the pulse beat. He will vibrate to the city's rhythms, and if he only succeeds in his avocation, whatever that may be, he will find a joy in all the hurry and the tension, he will keep the pace as well as any of us and get as much out of himself in any week as he ever did in ten weeks in the country.

The stimuli of those who successfully respond and undergo the transformation here are duty, the example of others and crowd pressure and contagion. The transformation, moreover, is a chronic one. The new level of energy becomes permanent. The duties of new offices of trust are constantly producing this effect on the human beings appointed to them. The physiologists call a stimulus dynamogenic when it increases the muscular contractions of men to whom it is applied, but appeals can be dynamogenic morally as well as muscularly.—American Magazine.

Good Nature.

Good nature is worth more than knowledge, more than money, more than honor, to the persons who possess it, and certainly to everybody who dwells with them, in so far as mere happiness is concerned.—H. W. Beecher.

Alone?

Aunt—And have you been all that long way alone? Niece—Yes, auntie. Aunt—Then how is it you went out with an umbrella and came back with a walking stick?—London Punch.

OVER 150 CHILDREN BURNED TO DEATH; AWFUL HOLOCAUST

School Building at Collinwood, O., Destroyed by Flames with Terrible Results.

SCENES ARE HEART-RENDING

Only Two Exits, One of Them Locked—Little Ones Trapped.

Factories Are Closed and Workmen Aid in the Rescue—Victims Burned to Crisp.

Cleveland, O., Mar. 5.—In the most terrible holocaust in the history of this section of the country over 150 school children lost their lives Wednesday in a fire which destroyed the three-story brick school building on Collamer avenue, in Collinwood, a suburb, just outside the city limits. Some estimates place the dead as high as 200. At six p. m. 157 bodies had been taken out of the ruins and it was believed there were still more to be taken out.

Practically every ambulance in the eastern part of Cleveland was called, as well as every available physician.

The fire started in the basement of the building about ten o'clock, just after school convened. It was caused from an overheated furnace. The smoke from the fire quickly filled the building and alarmed the children and teachers. A panic ensued. No fire drill was used in rescuing the children. They rushed pell mell for the doors and windows.

One of Two Exits Locked.

Walter C. Kelley, a newspaper man, two of whose children were in the building, was one of the first upon the scene. He stated that the rear door, one of the two exits, was locked. The children rushed for the front and rear doors. The front exit soon was jammed full of fighting and panic-stricken humanity. Many who reached the exit first escaped, but those, the greater number, who followed choked the doorway. Those who fell were trampled upon and many are supposed to have been killed in this manner. Those behind turned and made for the windows. Some upon the second and third floors jumped from the windows and escaped. In this way three or four were killed, while others were more fortunate and escaped with slight injuries. The greater number of those who met death were cut off from escape by the smoke, which blinded them.

The panic that had worked such fearful results inside the building spread to the helpless crowd outside, but only for a brief time. Organized efforts at rescue were soon under way. Fremen played streams upon the piles of bodies in the doorways and tried to drag out bodies with rakes and other implements.

Bodies Visible in Doorways.

After the fire had been reduced somewhat piles of charred little bodies were still visible in the doorways. In the rear door bodies burned beyond recognition lay piled five feet deep.

The flames shot up through the central halls with terrible rapidity. It is said the children were terrified beyond all control, and the teachers, although they struggled bravely to marshal their charges out of the building in something like order, were utterly helpless.

Those who were familiar with the building and were early on the scene believe that most of the loss of life was due to the fact that all of the rooms were dismissed at once.

Pupils pouring down the stairs made for the doorways already full of children escaping from the lower floors. The exits were soon choked. The desperate ones behind pushed and struggled for their lives, driving the human wedges the tighter in place.

Caught like rats in this manner, they fell with the lower floor, amid the blazing timbers, to the basement below. There the little bodies could be seen writhing in their last death struggle.

Bodies were taken to the morgue at the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railway Company's shops.

"Peruna is certainly a valuable nerve and blood remedy, calculated to build up the broken-down health of worn-out women. I have found by personal experience that it acts as a wonderful restorer of lost strength, assisting the stomach to assimilate and digest the food, and building up worn-out tissues. In my work I have had occasion to recommend it freely, especially to women.

"I know of nothing which is better to build up the strength of a young mother, in fact, all the ailments peculiar to women, so I am pleased to give it my hearty endorsement."

Copyright.

During the last two sessions of congress the question of copyright has come up in all its old complexities and with some new difficulties. The attempt to secure longer copyright for the authors of books has been practically confused with the question of musical copyright in relation to phonograph records and the rolls used in mechanical piano-players. Under both these practical questions, which must be decided separately, lies the fundamental theory of copyright. Copyright, like trade-mark or patent right, is an artificial monopoly, determined not by "natural" justice, but by arbitrary statute. The man who makes a machine or an attractive name for soap or a novel asks the public to give him exclusive use of his idea, in order that he may profit. The public grants him this exclusive use, not for his sake, but for its own sake. The idea, says the Youth's Companion, is that such special protection encourages men to produce ideas. The words of the American constitution express clearly the attitude of government, that is, the public, toward the individual. Congress is empowered "to promote the progress of science and useful arts by securing for limited times to authors and inventors the exclusive rights to their respective writings and discoveries." In this the emphasis is on the welfare of the public, the progress of the art and science, and not on the well-being of the individual. The individual may ask the public to secure to himself and his descendants the profit of an idea for a hundred years. Society replies, in effect, "We do not care about you or your family. How can we get the most out of you? How can we coax and encourage you to produce your best, and at the same time have use of your ideas with the least possible restriction?" To determine where to draw the line, how long copyright shall endure, how long a patent shall live, is a question of psychology. The effort of law should be to cut the term down as low as reasonable generosity and the facts of human nature will permit.

Gambling in Cuba.

American influence has brought about some important changes in Cuban customs and notably in the abolition of the bull ring and the cock pit, which used to be the chief Sunday attractions of the populace. Not a few of the better class of Havanese desire the same fate for Jai Alai and would rejoice to see the Fronton closed forever. High and low wager immoderately on this game and many stories of ruined reputations and wrecked businesses are connected with it. Every race has its prevailing vice and its comparative freedom from others. The Cubans are incurable gamblers, but drunkenness is virtually unknown among them, writes C. H. Forbes-Lindsay in the World To-Day. Both sexes in Havana spend a great deal of time in the numerous open air cafes, but they drink, for the most part, nonalcoholic, fruity beverages, of which there are an extensive variety peculiar to the country.

The Attractiveness of Cuba.

With the recent extension of railroad facilities, tourists in general have begun to extend their travel beyond the neighborhood of Havana, and they are learning that the provinces offer even greater attractions than the capital. All the principal cities are picturesque and interesting, and each has distinctly individual characteristics. The hotel accommodations are seldom as good as they should be, but the traveler will not suffer actual discomfort anywhere, says C. H. Forbes-Lindsay in the World To-Day. In every place one encounters Americans, with an occasional Spaniard, Canadian or Britisher, who are spying out this land of promise and quietly picking up desirable tracts of it.

Prohibition surely seems to be marching on. A conference has been held in London, participated in by men of both hemispheres, and including a good representation from America, the object of which is to inaugurate a world-wide movement, supported by a confederation composed of workers in the prohibition cause in all parts of the globe. The progress made in the United States of late has been remarkable, but the success attained in many parts of the old world, where the drinking habit is far more of an established institution, is still more extraordinary.

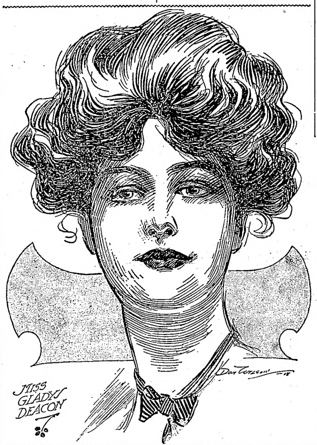
LUCKY FRENCHMAN HAS WON THE LOVE OF GLADYS DEACON

After the Affair of a Smitten Prince and a Duke "Turned Down," Comes the Triumph of Young Baron de Charette, and Another International Romance Is Launched

NEW YORK.—At last Miss Gladys Deacon, of New York and Boston, London and Paris, has found the man upon whom she can bestow her heart and hand. Her engagement to the young Baron Antoine de Charette is announced. For five years Miss Deacon has been one of the most-talked-of young women of society on both sides of the Atlantic. The gossips have had her engaged to a dozen eligibles, from princes down to plain "misters." But all the time she had been laughing up her sleeve—they were all wrong, of course.

There was the young crown prince of Germany, for example. The credulous had him head over heels in love with "La belle Americaine" and willing to renounce his claims to the throne of the German empire for love of her. It took an official announcement from both sides to stop the talk, and even then there were those who believed it to be true—that young Prince Fritz was desperately smitten.



Then there was the duke of Norfolk, premier peer of England, and the prince of Lichtenstein and Lord Brooke and Lord Francis Hope and the Hon. Claude Lowther were reported as about to marry the vivacious American girl, to say nothing of as many more, all lights of considerable magnitude in the social firmament.

But everybody was wrong—at least wrong in that Miss Deacon would marry any of these most desirable men.

Would Have Taken High Rank.

As the wife of the duke of Norfolk she would have taken precedence of every peeress in England; as Lady Brooke or Lady Francis Hope she would have irreproachable position at court.

Gladys Deacon is the eldest daughter of the late Edward Parker Deacon, of Boston and New York; her mother was the lovely Florence Baldwin, daughter of Rear-Admiral Charles H. Baldwin, U. S. N. Society even now whispers of the tragedy that clouded the lives of Gladys Deacon and her younger sisters.

It was just 16 years ago—to be precise, February 17, 1892—when the wires flashed the news from one end of the civilized world to the other—Edward Parker Deacon, an American, had shot and killed M. Emile Abeille, a well-known Parisian, whom he had surprised in his wife's boudoir. Abeille tried to hide behind a sofa, but Deacon's unerring bullet sought him out.

The indignant husband was arrested, fined and imprisoned for a brief period. Mrs. Deacon resumed her maiden name and became Mrs. Baldwin. Eventually Mr. Deacon lost his mind and died in a sanitarium at Waverly, Mass.

Of course there were squabbles about the children, and finally little Gladys was sent to a convent. There, shielded from the outside, she grew up in utter ignorance of the tragedy at Cannes and the scandal that followed upon its heels. She did not learn of it until she had grown up and been launched in society abroad.

Fitted for Society.

The nuns had done well with Gladys Deacon's inborn vivacity, cleverness and tact. She was turned out thoroughly French; in time she became perfectly Parisienne.

The Deacons had plenty of money. Admiral Baldwin was the richest officer in the navy, and when he died a splendid inheritance went to Mrs. Deacon, or Mrs. Baldwin, as she preferred to be called. Married when 17 years old, she was barely 34 when the scandal came; she was even more beautiful as Mrs. Deacon than she had been as Florence Baldwin, the bride of Edward Parker Deacon, the reserved, awkward man of 40.

Europe took up the daughter Gladys as it had taken up the mother a decade before. Aristocratic society welcomed her in every capital in Europe. In the Bois she was saluted as if she were a princess—but then Gladys Deacon was to the manner born. She was at home in Mayfair as she was in Unter den Linden. In winter she became the bright, particular star along the Riviera and in Italy thoroughly cosmopolitan grew the beautiful American girl, who spoke with a strong French accent and frankly admitted that she hardly knew anything about the United States, though she was American to the core.

Europe found everything to admire in the beautiful girl fresh from the convent.

Gladys Deacon is the ideal Anglo-Saxon type in face and coloring. Her mass of hair is the palest flaxen, and it waves naturally. Her eyes are large, rather long than round, and a deep violet blue. Her eyebrows are almost black, very narrow and exquisitely arched. Her eyelashes are black as well and long and sweeping.

Miss Deacon's face is almost classic in its oval, the brow slightly broader and higher than the standard of the Greeks, denoting to some extent the intellectuality of this foreign-born American girl. Her wit and vivacity would have made her a woman of note even without the charming loveliness with which nature has so lavishly endowed her.

Her skin is fair, very white and almost transparent. There is almost no coloring in her cheeks, yet she blushes beautifully when she is interested. But her lips are of that brilliant red which no cosmetic save perfect health can give. Her nose is pure Greek; her mouth a Cupid's bow. The chin is strong and firm. Her teeth are dazzling.

She speaks French, German and Italian with equal fluency, and her Parisian accent when she speaks English is altogether charming. Her taste in dress is undeniable; she always appears in the masterpieces of the French modistes. She is a perfect dancer, a rattling good hand at bridge and she can play billiards with the best of the men.

As soon as she was well launched in society, Miss Deacon began making strong friendships in the great world. Some of the most important people in the Faubourg St. Germain set of Paris became her intimates; in London she chummed with the duchess of Marlborough, the duchess of Devonshire, the dowager duchess of Manchester and Mrs. Arthur Paget, all of them of tremendous social advantage to Miss Deacon.

Suitors in Plenty.

Mrs. Baldwin had Lady Somerset's house in Mayfair, London; a beautiful little maison opposite the Chapel of Our Lady of Consolation, in Paris, and a villa at Versailles.

With all these charms, it could not be doubted but that Gladys Deacon would soon have suitors enough to satisfy even the most exacting debutante. The first soon appeared—to be precise, in 1900. He was Claude Lowther, called the handsomest man in England. Together they made a striking pair, and the matchmakers had them engaged—by rumor. But it was not to be. Gladys Deacon went her way and Mr. Lowther went his. For a brief period the prince of Lichtenstein was favored; then he was dismissed.

Next in line came Lord Francis Hope, who was even then getting his divorce from May Yohe, the one-time soubrette, who had run away with Capt. Putnam Bradlee Strong, son of the late Mayor Strong of New York. But Gladys Deacon gave the noble lord, who some day may be the duke of Newcastle, his conge, and he married some one else.

Then came the affair which nearly brought about international complications. Only Miss Deacon's natural good sense saved the day. The German emperor, who wished his eldest son, heir to the throne, to see something in English life, graciously consented that Prince Fritz should pay a visit to Blenheim palace, the regal home of the duke of Marlborough and his American bride, once Consuelo Vanderbilt. The duchess, who wanted to make his stay as pleasant as possible, invited Miss Deacon to meet him. The prince, always susceptible to feminine charms, had already seen and admired her on the continent. Amid the congenial surroundings of the English country life their former acquaintance ripened rapidly. The prince so far forgot himself as to fall desperately in love, though well he knew that he must marry royalty to inherit the kaiser's throne.

Could Not Share Throne.

He immediately proposed. Miss Deacon knew very well that the best the prince could offer her was a morganatic marriage, and she rejected his suit. Thereupon the gallant emperor-to-be offered to renounce his rights of succession and to leave Germany forever, if need be, in order to marry Miss Deacon on terms of equality.

Of course the kaiser got wind of what was going on.

The young lover was promptly ordered back to Berlin. There a stormy interview took place. At first the prince bravely stuck to his guns. But when the emperor threatened to lock up his eldest son in a fortress the heir capitulated.

To-day the crown prince is happily married to a wife of his father's choice and is a proud papa to boot.

A year went by and the chance of society threw Miss Deacon and the duke of Norfolk together. The duke, a scholarly man well over 50, hereditary earl marshal of England, a widower and without a son who was mentally fit to inherit his vast fortune, estates and the premier dukedom with its privileges at court, became immensely interested in the brilliant American girl.

His sister, Lady Mary Howard, invited Miss Deacon to visit Arundel Castle, Norfolk's ancestral home, and rumors began cropping out everywhere that it would end in Miss Deacon's wearing the strawberry leaves of a duchess. By reason of Norfolk's ancient lineage she would take precedence of every other peeress. But Miss Deacon refused the duke and that was the end of it.

Prince Charming Arrives.

Two years later Lord Brooke, son and heir of the earl of Warwick, came on the scene. He was young, good-looking, not rich, but had influence at court through his mother. People really believed that Miss Deacon had lost her heart at last, but it was a false alarm.

And then—Baron Antoine de Charette!

Amiable, good looking, very rich, possessed of important position and scion of one of the proudest families in France, the young nobleman is one of the most desirable partis in Europe.

There is good American blood in the young baron. His mother was Miss Antoinette Polk of Tennessee, a niece of President James K. Polk. After the civil war Mrs. Polk took her two daughters, Antoinette and Rebecca, and her son, Van Leer Polk, to Italy to live. It was in Rome that Antoinette Polk met Baron de Charette, then serving at the vatican. The impressionable Italians had already hailed the fair American as the most beautiful woman who had ever come to their shores, and the Baron de Charette agreed with them. He laid siege to Miss Polk's heart, won her and brought her home to Paris as his bride.

One son was born, Antoine. From his mother the young man inherits splendid plantations in Tennessee and from his paternal side some of the greatest art treasures in France. Among them is a portrait of Queen Marie Antoinette by Mme. Viego le Brun, given by the queen to the Duchess de Choiseul, now coming in direct succession to the young baron, fourth in line.

At Present in America.

Young Antoine is at present here in the United States attending to the properties of his mother and the interests in the estate, because of the sudden death of his uncle, Van Leer Polk, who dropped dead a few days ago in Memphis. He had been United States consul-general at Bombay, under President Cleveland, and lately had been appointed by President Roosevelt as one of five delegates to Brazil.

In France all the match-making mammas have had their eyes on young De Charette. As his wife the baroness would step into a premier position in Paris, where Mme. la Baronne has an undisputed position. For all her high position in royalist society, the former Miss Polk is intensely American and delightfully democratic. In her salons many an American has made her first bow to fashionable Paris.

The future Baroness de Charette will become chatelaine of three lovely homes—an apartment in Paris, a villa at Cannes—where the tragedy took place, strangely enough—and a charming chateau in Britanny, which for 800 years has been the home of the de Charettes.

It is at Basse-Motte, Chateau Nef, Ille-et-Vilaine, near St. Malo, and only eight miles from Dinard, one of the most fashionable of all European watering places. Here at the old chateau Mme. de Charette entertains such important persons as the king of Naples, Queen Amelie, the widowed queen of Portugal; Prince von Buelow, Prince von Hohenlohe, the princess of Wales, the Duchess d'Eu, the duchess of Mecklenburg-Schwerin and Mrs. Robert Goelet.

Miss Deacon's fiance is only 27 years old—tall, handsome, broad-shouldered like the Americans, with Bourbon features and patrician manners.

The wedding takes place at the fashionable season in Paris and will be one of the social events of the year. And then the matchmakers can no longer play fast and loose with Gladys Deacon's heart and hand.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Cause for Alarm.

A young man had been courting a girl for nine years. "Jennie," he said, one evening, "I read the other day that in 50,000 years Niagara falls would dry up."

Jennie clutched his arm excitedly.

"Why, what's the matter?" he asked.

"Why, you promised to take me there on our bridal trip. Don't you think you had better be a little careful that it does not dry up before we get there?"

Hog Cholera.

The greatest drawback to the hog industry which breeders in this country have to contend with is what is known as "hog cholera" and "swine plague."

Hog cholera is a highly contagious disease and unless checked is liable to carry off a great number of hogs in a very short time.

Mr. A. P. Williams, of Burnetts Creek, Ind., tells of an experience which he had with some hogs that had the cholera. "Five years ago," says Mr. Williams, "I was in the employ of Mr. J. D. Richardson, Lafayette, Ind., as his barn foreman. Some fine hogs that I was feeding took the cholera. I gave them Sloan's Liniment and did not lose a hog. Some were so bad they would not drink sweet milk and I was compelled to drench them. I have tried it at every opportunity since and always find it O. K."

Sunday School Lessons for the World.

A power greater than that of kings seems to have been wielded by the little group of thoughtful men who gathered at the Fenway residence of W. N. Hartshorn to select the lessons for the Sunday schools of the world, says the Boston Herald. Every year they gather to make this choice, and when a decision has been reached the lessons are handed out to the printers and by them literally scattered over the planet. The word thus goes forth not in one but in scores of languages. Europe and Africa, east and west, north and south, get these helps to religious study in the vernacular. There is a supply for Hawaii, Japan and the islands of the sea. For India alone 40 dialects have to be provided for. Some 500,000,000 Sunday school leaflets are thus distributed every year.

OLD SURGEON

Found Coffee Caused Hands to Tremble.

The surgeon's duties require clear judgment and a steady hand. A slip or an unnecessary incision may do irreparable damage to the patient.

When he found that coffee drinking caused his hands to tremble, an Ills. surgeon conscientiously gave it up and this is his story.

"For years I was a coffee drinker until my nervous system was nearly broken down, my hands trembled so I could hardly write, and insomnia tortured me at night.

"Besides, how could I safely perform operations with unsteady hands, using knives and instruments of precision? When I saw plainly the bad effects of coffee, I decided to stop it, and three years ago I prepared some Postum, of which I had received a sample.

"The first cupful surprised me. It was mild, soothing, delicious. At this time I gave some Postum to a friend who was in a similar condition to mine, from the use of coffee.

"A few days after, I met him and he was full of praise for Postum, declaring he would never return to coffee but stick to Postum. We then ordered a full supply and within a short time my nervousness and consequent trembling, as well as insomnia, disappeared, blood circulation became normal, no dizziness nor heat flashes.

"My friend became a Postum enthusiast, his whole family using it exclusively.

"It would be the fault of the one who brewed the Postum, if it did not taste good when served.

"The best food may be spoiled if not properly made. Postum should be boiled according to directions on the pkg. Then it is all right, anyone can rely on it. It ought to become the national drink." "There's a Reason."

A Reflected Proposal

By Nora Linder

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"Well! So you've decided to remember my existence at last, have you? It is so flattering to be home three weeks and never even hear from our oldest friends."

The girl raised herself among the cushions to extend a slim brown hand in greeting, then curled up again like a tired kitten, the bronze of her hair mingling distractingly with the golds and browns of the cushions, and big John Morton stood wondering at its tumbled glory when he should have been telling the girl how much he had missed her and how pleased he was to see her again, etc.

"I hope nothing so dreadful as dumbness has overtaken you, John," the girl continued solicitously; her gray eyes dancing bewitchingly.

"Nothing has overtaken me, Peggy—that is, nothing disagreeable." Morton lifted a white kitten out of a huge leather chair and settled himself comfortably before the glowing fire. "But tell me about yourself, girlie, and your picnicing in the mountains—it was a picnic, wasn't it?" He lifted the kitten by the ears and settling it on his knee, much against its will, began to stroke it reflectively.

"Jack told me Pete Thompson joined the party over on the other side."

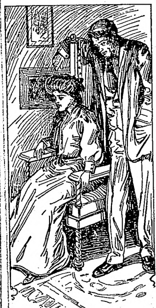
"He was our salvation, John." Peggy sat up and pounded the pillows vigorously, then heaped them up—a rainbow pyramid—and settled her head on the pile with a sigh of physical well-being and feminine content Dull blues and greens harmonize beautifully with bronze hair, and somehow all the dull blue and green pillows were piled on top.

"We had grown dreadfully tired of each other. Nick had told all his jokes a hundred times and Sam and Rob had cracked their voices trying to sing. Mother was growing uneasy about the canned goods and father's winter flannels left out of the cedar chest; Aunt Hannah felt the need of another course of massage—her predigested foods had all given out, too—and I was on the verge of hysteria, mental aberrations or something of that sort, when Pete 'arrove.' He soon had everything running smoothly again. And what a glorious time we had!" She cuddled down among the cushions again, and smiled at John in a way which only Peggy knew—a smile that set all her dimples playing hide and seek yet left her eyes calm and dreamy. "He knew just where to go; could tell papa all about the fishing and Aunt Hannah all about the rocks in the neighborhood; helped mama buy blankets and preserves at half price—in a word, he was all things to all men."

"And what was he to Peggy?"

A spot of crimson gathered on each round cheek and anger blazed in the clear eyes.

"I don't see how that could possibly interest you, Mr. Morton. I am old enough to choose my friends without any assistance, and wise enough, I think, to keep each in his proper place."



Stood Looking Down at Her Bowed Head.

It was a very grand Peggy who slipped from the old sofa and crossed to a stiff-backed chair on the other side of the room; "besides, I think it is about time you dropped that silly name—relic of my tomboy days. Margaret is a much more—"

"Well, go on. Much more what?" John smiled lazily across at the little fury. "Whatever raised this tempest in a teapot? Just an inoffensive, innocent little question about your trip. It must have touched a sore spot." His eyes, instantly grave, searched the girl's face.

Peggy's eyes blazed.

"If you came here to be disagreeable, Mr. Morton, I think it about time for you to go; you have accomplished your mission."

Lines of perplexity gathered on the man's forehead, then a sudden resolve showed in his eyes and in the firm pressure of his lips.

"Come, let's be friends again, girlie, I came over to tell you a wonderful secret. I've found the future Mrs. Morton."

He crossed over to the girl's side and stood looking down at her bowed head. "Aren't you going to wish me luck, for old times sake, Peggy?"

"If you have found her, I don't see what more luck you want." Peggy's voice was quick, nervous, just a trifle harsh. "I'd hate to think that—Pete—" and the words trailed off into silence as Peggy smothered a sudden cough in the lace at her wrists.

John Morton's face lost its fresh color and his square jaws took on an extra angle. An oath was smothered at its birth.

"I've found her, all right," he returned, "but, you see she doesn't know anything about it yet. I came over tonight to ask your advice about the best way to break it to her; you see, girlie, I'm not used to this sort of thing."

"Come, tell me about her, John. What is she like?" Peggy slipped from the stiff-backed chair on to a footstool. John dropped down beside her, and with hands clasped around their updrawn knees, they sat gazing into the cavernous fireplace, much as they had done in the childish days when Peggy was an enchanted princess, and John, a fairy prince in overalls, slew the dragon—as represented by the grinning unicorn forming the andirons holding the "fore stick" in the wide fireplace—and rescued the princess from eternal captivity.

"Do I know her, John?" Peggy continued, as John's eyes still clung to the blazing logs; "can't you even tell me about her; you know we never had any secrets from each other when—when—"

"Yes, I know," the man came to her rescue as he noticed the crimson tide sweeping up over her throat and cheek, "when we used to play at housekeeping and you tied one of your mother's aprons on and became Mrs. John Morton. Jolly old times, weren't they, Peggy?" Watching the girl out of the corner of his eye he was almost sure he saw her lip flutter before the cruel white teeth closed down and held it fast.

"Well, you see we were kids then, and telling things came natural. Do you suppose Pete, for instance, would find it an easy matter to describe the girl of girls?"

Peggy shifted her position so as to bring her face in shadow before answering.

"You needn't tell me her name, you know, or her little intimate ways—just describe her in general."

"A sort of outline sketch and leave the filling in to the hearer's imagination." Morton laughed.

"Well, since I came to you for advice I guess I'll have to mention her chief charms." He caught the stool and twisted it around till Peggy faced the fire again. The old-fashioned mirror, tilted from ceiling to mantel, reflected a very quiet Peggy with a very serious face.

"She's small and dainty and lovable—is that the way the story books begin? I am rather clumsy when it comes to describing a girl, so you'll have to make allowances, Peg, but she's just the dearest girl in creation and her hair is—well—its a kind of golden brown, and her eyes are a jumble of colors—sometimes blue, and then again they're brown or green, but mostly they're gray. Mouth small, teeth like pearls—hang it, Peggy, I can't describe her, but I have a picture of her if you care to see it." He tried to look in the girl's face, but she kept it turned away.

"I know it's that Scott girl, who spent the summer with the Daytons—the description fits to a T—but she's a perfect little cat. I never cared for her." Peggy's voice was very distant and impersonal.

"Guess again," Morton laughed, "I never met Miss Scott."

Peggy reached for the white kitten curled up on the rug at her feet, but Morton caught the hand and held it close.

"Suppose you look at the picture, Peggy—you might recognize it."

The girl sprang to her feet, but Morton drew her down beside him and held her close a moment—a struggling, panting little fury—then placing one hand under her chin, he tilted her head back till her eyes met the eyes in the mirror above the mantel.

"Do you know the future Mrs. John Morton?" he asked, with his lips close to her crimson ear; "is she a cat?"

Peggy gazed at her own reflection a moment, then turned in his arms till she could hide her face on his breast.

"How could you do it, John?" she sobbed; "it wasn't like you."

"I had to be sure about Pete, darling, and past occurrences of a similar nature taught me wisdom. You've kept me on the rack longer than I can remember, Peggy. I had to take you by storm, dear."

The MATTER of DRESS

The tailor-made gown and the lightweight storm coat which will keep off the chill of the spring winds and protect from the sudden storm are two requisites of the wardrobe which must be considered. In our illustration above we show a charming coat and skirt costume. The natty little bolero has double revers and cuffs, the lower one in each respect being of white cloth, which gives a very smart touch to the costume. The material is one of the newest tweeds, which can be had in many shades including several art colors. The skirt is tight fitting around the hips, but has a deep inverted plait at the back and is trimmed round the hem with upright strapped bands with mitred points, which are graduated in size from front to back. The hat shown with this very neat costume is a small round shape of white felt simply trimmed with bunches of violets.

The full-length coat shown at the right is semi-fitting, and the sleeves and body are lined with silk or other lining material, according to the amount one feels disposed to pay for such a garment. The back is well cut and the whole garment though roomy enough to go over a jacket is far more shapely than the usual sacque coat. In the illustration the collar is shown turned up and the revers tucked in to show how cozy it can be made when out in the weather. The hat which so modestly harmonizes with this long coat is made of soft felt with a rolled brim edged with velvet. A band of the same velvet surrounds the crown and forms a huge rosette from which starts a small ostrich tip.

And now to make a big jump from the practicals to the finery of the wedding trousseau let us give a brief description of the wedding dress displayed in our smaller illustration. It is an empire gown of white satin, the long trained skirt being quite plain and the draped bodice arranged with a fichu of Brussels lace, and two long stoles of lace back and front. The veil is of Brussels lace and is fastened with a wreath of orange blossoms.

And now having conscientiously and faithfully disposed of our pictures let us turn to other matters of dress which will interest particularly at this season of the year. In "dressy" costumes for spring the lightweight broadcloths are to be the smartest. The supple chiffon broadcloths so admirably adapted to all sorts of drapings, as well as in plain tight costumes, became fashionable at once, and their vogue, now long continued, promises to see no end.

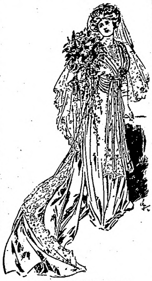
In broadcloths the plain rather than the stripes and checks now seen will be a choice of the fashionable fair one.

The printed mousselines will be much seen in reception and dressy afternoon and also in dinner gowns. The lovely borders that came in last spring will be more worn, as the prices will not be quite so high. Of course they are no longer the novelties they were, but they are beautiful, and will be much worn by the women of fashion.

In the cut of a costume lies its chief charm, provided the fabric is suited to the person and the place.

The plaited skirt is always worn. It suits the ordinary figure, whether too thin or too plump, better than the plain skirts, but the latter of circular cut are infinitely smarter, more graceful, are light in weight, and easier to manage in walking. The tight circular skirt without a plait to relieve it about the hips is suited to the truly feminine figure only. By the feminine figure I mean the womanly one, full of curves, with wide hips, flat in the front, and rounded in the back. The hipless, backless monstrosity which some women claim to admire is the masculine shape, and a man might quite as well and with as much propriety sigh for the broad hips and full curves of the womanly figure. The whole attempt of fashion to achieve long straight lines and the hipless figure is a curious perversion, offensive to the normal human being, whether man or woman, but especially obnoxious to men.

The new thing in coats for hack-about, shopping and morning wear for spring will be the short or hip length coats. These will vary from 22 to 27 inches in length, depending largely on the height of the wearer or the length of the waist. The smartest of these will be tight fitting.



Charming Wedding Gown.

For the wear of most women, however, the costumes offered in even the smart shops will have these jackets semi-fitting and of the longer rather than the shorter lengths.

The semi-fitting coat is much the best for every one for morning and general traveling wear. Many a woman wears different corsets, different in length and build, and she may wear whichever is most comfortable and look as well in the semi-fitting coat. The tight coat, however, demands one's triggest corset. Another strong point in favor of the semi-fitted coat is that the thin woman looks more rounded, while the exuberance of the too plump figure is not defined, but pleasingly veiled.

A feature of the new spring coats will be the pointed skirts. Some of these will be pointed in the front and in the back, or will have the pointed front and rounded back, or points on the sides.

Some of the coat skirts will be slashed and these slashes will in some instances have buttonholes worked in on one side—real buttonholes—and on the other a row of buttons. Short slashes will be outlined with lengthwise strips of braid.

TRIBUTES TO WRITER

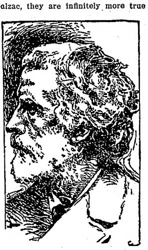
MEREDITH, "THE MASTER," CELEBRATES EIGHTIETH BIRTHDAY.

His Long and Hard Struggle for Recognition—Now Regarded as First in Ranks of English Novelists.

London.—George Meredith, whose eightieth birthday was celebrated the other day by the pouring forth of glowing tributes to his genius by the entire British press, has been hailed as "The Master" for many years by the English critics and by English writers. "The king of us all," he was termed by Robert Louis Stevenson, who was one of the most enthusiastic admirers of Meredith's genius. It was Stevenson, too, who used to speak of "Rhoda Fleming" as "the strongest thing in English literature since Shakespeare," adding quaintly that if Shakespeare could have read the work he would have jumped and cried: "Here's a fellow."

Despite all the acclaim, both from a large part of the public and from virtually the entire literary world, with which he is now greeted, it has been only during the last 23 years that Meredith has come into his own. Not until 1885, when "Diana of the Crossways" appeared and when the novelist was 57 years old, did Meredith obtain general recognition. "No man," one of Balzac's biographers has written, "ever battered more furiously at the gates of fame with masterpiece after masterpiece and no man ever saw those gates yield more slowly inch by inch." If those words were true of Balzac, they are infinitely more true of Meredith. The English novelist did not begin to attain fame, in the general sense, until he was almost as old as Balzac was when he died, famous for years.



GEORGE MEREDITH.

George Eliot and Swinburne, Browning and Tennyson, might write and speak in praise of Meredith during those long years of obscurity, but they could not force the public to take Meredith to its heart. Even to-day Meredith is not a "popular novelist." But his genius is recognized, his place is assured, and he stands in the very forefront of men of letters who write in the English language.

And Meredith, in the opinion of the critics, has both what he is because he remained true to himself. No literary drudgery for bread, no writing out of his heart in book after book which failed to bring him fame, no repetition of disappointment ever made Meredith weaken one jot in holding to ideas and ideals which his genius told him were the true ones. By sheer strength and persistence, little less, perhaps, than by his brains, he has made the world crown him with the laurel.

As long ago as 1862 Swinburne spoke of Meredith as 'one of the leaders of English literature." By this date Meredith had printed two volumes of poems and several novels, among them "The Ordeal of Richard Leverel," now ranked as one of the best of the author's works. It was as a poet, indeed, that Meredith first began to write.

In 1851 he published "Poems," and from then, throughout his active literary life, he has published books of poems every few years. But, while his verse has many admirers, his fame must rest on his work as a writer of prose.

One of the difficulties in the road of Meredith's becoming a "popular" novelist has been his style. Critics have been attacking for years his mode of expressing many of his thoughts. His style has been condemned and has been ridiculed, but Meredith has given no heed to his critics, and, as the years have come and gone, has become more Meredithian, if possible, in his language, than before. "Too involved, too obscure, too incumbered with verbiage, badly constructed"—such have been some of the high literary crimes and misdemeanors charged against the Meredith style. His style as to obscurity has even been compared to that of Carlyle. But the novelist has remained impervious to these shafts

Meredith was born on February 12, 1828, in Hampshire. He was educated partly in Germany, and then read for the bar. He soon turned, however, from the law to literature. Personally Meredith has a legion of friends. He is described as handsome, courteous and polished, while he is declared one of the best conversationalists in England.

TREASURY POST FOR COOLIDGE.

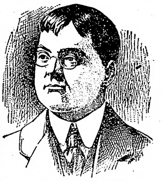
Nominated to Succeed J. H. Edwards as Assistant Secretary.

Washington.—Louis A. Coolidge, who has been nominated by the president to be assistant secretary of the treasury, in place of J. H. Edwards, resigned, directed the literary bureau of the Republican national committee in 1904, and has been editor of the Congressional Directory and indexer of the Congressional Record.

From 1883 to 1888 he was connected with the Springfield Republican and became private secretary to Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, and continued in that position until 1891.



LOUIS A. COOLIDGE.

For several years Mr. Coolidge has represented the Boston Journal and the New York Commercial Advertiser in Washington. He is a native of Massachusetts, 46 years old, and a graduate of Harvard.

Although Mr. Coolidge has given a great deal of attention to politics and newspaper work, he has found time to write several books, among them "The Show at Washington" and "Klondike and the Yukon Country," besides contributing regularly to different magazines of the country.

Mr. Coolidge is a prominent figure in clubdom, being a member of the University and Republican clubs of New York; the Cosmos, University and the Gridiron clubs of Washington, being the president of the last named in 1904.

A WEIRD CARRIAGE.

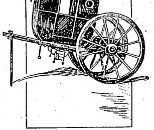
Venerable Fragment of Antiquity Still to Be Seen in Malta.

London.—To a world accustomed to ride in its automobiles, there is something almost uncanny about this venerable fragment of antiquity which may be seen almost any day in the streets of Malta.

The vehicle belongs to an elderly lady who has come down in the world, and this clumsy calessa is practically the only remaining testimony to her former greatness. The old dame is very religious, and, though poor, still drives to and from church in her remarkable carriage.

It speaks volumes for her courage that she should consent to enter the calessa at all, for if the horse were to fall, the occupant would have quite as uncomfortable an experience as the unfortunate tenant of a hansom cab when the steed comes to grief.



Remarkable Carriage Still in Use in Malta.

And when one considers that the horse attached to her conveyance is quite as out-of-date as the chariot, the aged lady's pluck seems greater than ever.

Still, noblesse oblige, and true to the traditions of her erstwhile grandeur, the aged dame sallies forth in all the pride, pomp, and circumstance of her crazy carriage, and will no doubt continue to do so until death claims either her or her ancient horse.

Trick of the Chinaman.

One particular fact developed in the course of the trial in the Massachusetts superior court of nine Chinamen charged with the murder of one of their countrymen, and that is no Chinaman when using a revolver levels it straight at a person or at an object, but rests the muzzle of the "gun" on his left forearm, and with the right hand holding the butt discharges the weapon.

Counsel wanted an explanation, but could not obtain it, and later a member of one of the tongs in the corridor was asked for a reason.

"Don't know why a gun is used in that manner," was the response, "unless it insures more secrecy than the American way. For instance, a Chinaman may wrap the gun in the folds of his sleeve, leaving only the barrel hole free. Then a shot may be fired, when it would appear as though the one who discharged the weapon had his arms folded. There would be no glint of steel and nothing but a curl of smoke to tell who discharged the weapon."

HER GOOD FORTUNE.

After Years Spent in Vain Effort.

Mrs. Mary E. H. Rousé, of Cambridge, N. Y., says: "Five years ago I had a bad fall and it affected my kidneys. Severe pains in my back and hips became constant, and sharp twinges followed any exertion. The kidney secretions were badly discolored. I lost flesh and grew too weak to work. Though constantly using medicine I despaired of being cured until I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. Then relief came quickly, and in a short time I was completely cured. I am now in excellent health."

CURED HER CHILDREN.

Girls Suffered with Itching Eczema—Baby Had a Tender Skin, Too—Relied on Cuticura Remedies.

"Some years ago my three little girls had a very bad form of eczema. Itching eruptions formed on the backs of their heads which were simply covered. I tried almost everything, but failed. Then my mother recommended the Cuticura Remedies. I washed my children's heads with Cuticura Soap and then applied the wonderful ointment, Cuticura. I did this four or five times and I can say that they have been entirely cured. I have another baby who is so plump that the folds of skin on his neck were broken and even bled. I used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and the next morning the trouble had disappeared. Mme. Napoleon Duceppe, 41 Duluth St., Montreal, Que., May 21, 1907."

A prominent specialist gives the following as a never failing remedy for rheumatism, and says if followed up it will effect a complete cure of the very worst cases. "Mix one half pint of good whiskey with one ounce of Toris Root Compound, and add one ounce Syrup Sarsaparilla Compound. Take in tablespoonful doses before each meal and at bed time." Toris Root Compound is a product of the Globe Pharmaceutical Co., Dayton, O. The ingredients can be procured at any drug store and easily mixed at home.

"Yes, and it also makes the gas meter go round."

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

Railroad Earnings.

St. Paul—The gross earnings taxes of all of the railroads operating in Minnesota during 1907 aggregate $3,555,557.84, an increase of $165,676.71 over the gross earnings taxes paid for 1906. The combined gross earnings of all the roads in 1907 was $88,888,946, an increase of $4,137,098.14 over 1906, when the gross earnings were $84,751,847.86.

That the increase in the gross earnings taxes in 1907 over 1906 was not so great as the increase in 1906 over 1905 is accounted for by the fact that during the last half of 1907 the 2-cent passenger fare and a reduced schedule of merchandise freight rates were in effect. The financial flurry of last fall also had the effect of reducing somewhat the volume of business. The gain of $165,676.71, under all of the circumstances, is considered a strong indication of the prosperous condition of the state generally.

In the amount of taxes paid, the Great Northern heads the list with $918,115.88, followed by the Northern Pacific with $577,462.53, the Duluth, Missabe & Northern with $477,210.49, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul with $395,768.20 and the Duluth & Iron Range with $321,908.81.

Republican Conventions.

St. Paul—William H. Taft, secretary of war, was endorsed for the Republican nomination for the presidency, by the Minnesota Republican State Central committee which met here.

The committee named the dates of the two conventions to select delegates to the national convention and to nominate candidates for state offices. It also fixed the apportionment of delegates. April 16 was fixed as the date of the convention to select delegates to the national convention and Minneapolis was chosen as the place of holding. April 9 was set as the date for holding the county convention to name delegates to this state convention.

After considerable debate, July 1 was decided upon as the date of the convention to nominate candidates for state offices and the county conventions to select delegates to this convention will be held Thursday, June 25. St. Paul was selected as the convention city.

School Apportionment.

St. Paul—The public schools of the state will soon receive their shares of $712,667.20, the amount of the March state school apportionment. This is at the rate of $1.90 a pupil, the largest apportionment ever made in March. In making up the enrollment list only those pupils who attended school for at least forty days during the last school year are considered.

The apportionment is made on the basis of an enrollment of 375,088 pupils, the total in March, 1907, being 378,251, the smaller number this year being responsible for the higher rate per pupil. Last March $605,057.73 was distributed at the rate of $1.60. The rate in March, 1906, was $1.70, which was the highest ever made until this year for the March apportionment. The October apportionments run considerably higher, that of October, 1907, having been $2.50.

Nine New Companies.

St. Paul—Adjt. Gen. F. B. Wood has selected the towns in which the nine new companies of the Minnesota national guard will be organized, this number of additional companies being required to bring the militia up to the standard of the Dick law and to secure the largest possible federal aid for its maintenance.

The new companies will be located at St. Peter, Madison, Bemidji, Thief River Falls, Redwood Falls, Duluth, Eveleth, St. Paul and Minneapolis.

The St. Peter company, which will be known as Company K of the Second regiment, was mustered into the service Feb. 28th.

Assessments Must Stand.

Minneapolis—The fact that property is generally assessed at one-half of its true value in this state is not a sufficient ground for disturbing an assessment which does not exceed the fair value of the property, even though the assessor's valuation has been increased both by the city and the state board of equalization. A decision to this effect was handed down in the supreme court yesterday in the case of the state against the Cudahy Packing company. The opinion was written by Justice Jaggard.

NEWS NOTES.

Austin—Owen Gahagan's body was found in the Cedar river.

Minneapolis. — Jules Murry's big production, "At Yale," will be seen at the Bijou Opera House, the week of March 8. Fresh and vibrant, it swings along through its three acts with a jollity, and a large, vigorous, expressive, whole-souled college spirit that inhabits none but a genuine play of college life. It is a play well worth seeing, and is one of the notable bookings of the Bijou's season.

St. Paul—Gov. Johnson issued a proclamation offering a reward of $300 for the arrest and conviction of the murderers of Bernhard Roemer, who was murdered at his home in the town of Pepin, Wabasha county, on Feb. 20.

Minneapolis—Ashamed of shiftless father, Fred Beck, fifteen years old, takes out insurance to pay funeral expenses and commits suicide.

St. Paul—The Northern Pacific telegraph operators will continue to work at same wage schedule under nine-hour law as at present.

WINTER WHEAT CROP

HE REALIZED $38 PER ACRE. HIS OATS $37 PER ACRE IN SOUTHERN ALBERTA, WESTERN CANADA.

Coaldale, Alta, Can., Nov. 19, 1907.

Sir: I beg to say that this year we had 349 acres of grain, consisting of 197 acres of spring wheat and 152 acres of oats. The average yield of wheat was 38 bushels per acre and oats 74 bushels. We were offered $1.00 per bushel for wheat and 50 cents for oats, making the acre values for the two crops $38.00 and $37.00 respectively.

We also had 50 tons of hay worth $13.00 per ton, and 500 bushels of potatoes, worth 60 cents per bushel, the latter off 2½ acres of ground.

Our best yields this year were 107 acres of wheat, making 41 bushels per acre at $1. 00 per bushel, would be $41.00 per acre; 47 acres of oats, yielding 95 bushels per acre were sold for 50 cents per bushel. Proceeds, $47.00 per acre.

I might add that 50 acres of our oats were "stubbled in."

During the spring of 1906, we hired about 300 acres broken by steam. We put in and harvested 55 acres of grain last year, did the remainder of our breaking, worked up the ground and seeded this year's entire crop, put in seven acres of alfalfa and five acres of garden potatoes, trees, etc., all with one four-horse team. During harvest we hired other teams, but, aside from this, and part of the breaking, the one team did the work of raising practically 19,000 bushels of grain, worth $12,000.

Yours truly,
W. H. PAWSON, JR.

WINTER WHEAT 25 TO 30 BUSHELS TO THE ACRE IN SOUTHERN ALBERTA.

Warner, Alta, Canada, Jan. 9, 1908.

Dear Sir: This is the first year of farming in this settlement. Mr. A. L. Warner raised twenty-five hundred and fifteen bushels of fine winter wheat on one hundred acres of breaking and Tenny brothers had sixty acres that went thirty bushels per acre. The winter wheat that is in this year looks fine.

Spring wheat here went thirty bushels per acre, oats fifty to eighty, barley fifty, and flax ten to fifteen on sod.

The settlers here are all well pleased with the country. The stock have not required any feed except the grass up to this date and are all fat.

Yours truly,
F. S. LEFFINGWELL.

RESOLVED TO SNUB EVE.

Mrs. Intheswim Intended to Draw Social Line in Heaven.

The minister had dropped in to tea, and the conversation had drifted through various channels to the question of whether or not we should know each other in heaven. Presuming that our physical beings would be perpetuated, and that recognition would be assured, the minister had asked various ones at the table among whom the Biblical characters they would be most interested in recognizing.

Some mentioned one prophet and some another, but one lady, noted for her social exclusiveness, had not spoken. Turning to her the minister said: "And who would you like to meet in heaven, Mrs. Intheswim?"

Mrs. Intheswim pursed her lips. "I really don't know," she said, "but there is one thing I do know, and that is that I shouldn't care to meet Eve. In fact, I don't know that I would speak to her if I did!"

LOST TEMPER WAS COSTLY.

Poet Banker Threw Away and Bought Back His Own Property.

Edmund Clarence Stedman, the poet banker, had a high temper and was exceedingly sensitive. One day, exasperated by the crass stupidity of a servant, he threw a book at his head. The boy ducked and the book sailed out of the window. After it hurried the menial, but he was too late; a passerby had picked it up and walked off with it. Stedman began to wonder what book he had thrown away, and to his horror discovered that it was a quaint and rare little volume for which he had paid $50. His chagrin was intense, as the work was almost unique and the prospects of replacing it were remote.

Some time afterward, when browsing in a second-hand book shop, our splenetic poet banker perceived to his great delight a copy of the very book he had lost. He asked the price. "It's very rare," replied the dealer, "but as you are an old customer I'll let you have it for $40; nobody else could have it for less than $60." Stedman gladly paid the $40, got home with his treasure as soon as possible, and sat down to gloat over it. A card dropped out of the leaves. It was his own. Further examination showed that he had bought back his property. It cured him of casting books at servants' heads.—New York Press.

The St. Hilaire Spectator is after the Standard Oil Co. That will surely bring John D. to time. Why didn't nobody think of bringing that pressure to bear on him before?

There is a bunch of fellows up at Beaudette and Spooner who got together the other day to draw up resolutions antagonistic to the Steenerson Drainage measure, which contemplate the drainage of government lands by the goverment. These fellows surely would suffer if they had to live in a "dry" town.

The new 9-hour law for railroad telegraph operators went into effect this week and some changes have been made in nearly every railroad station in the country in conformance with the terms of this law. The railroads dont like it and neither does the general public who have been in the habit of being waited on at all hours by the agent at a one-man station. But this law is no more than fair play for the operators and the other fellows will get used to it after a while.

Down in Ohio a couple of days ago the republicans held their convention. They eliminated Foraker and Dick and instructed the delegates for Taft for president. Their platform may be described as a square Roosevelt platform. Every indication all over the country points to Taft as the nominee of the party and to the platform of the party being a straight embodiment of the Roosevelt policies. No wonder Bryan told "Uncle Joe" Cannon that he hoped he (Cannon) would be the republican nominee for president.

SNAILS FOR FOOD.

Stores Devoted Entirely to Them In Many Cities of Europe.

France is the premier snail producing nation, although Austria, Bavaria and Switzerland have thousands of snail farms, where the famous escargots are raised and fattened on vine leaves. The demand for snails in France is far too great for the supply to be left to chance, and thus it comes about that snail farming is an important industry. Paris alone consumes millions between September and May, when these little creatures are at their best.

In great cities of Europe are stores devoted entirely to them, each ornamented by an immense gilt snail over the door as a sign. Huge tubs of snails in the rough are displayed, and there are besides dishes of carefully prepared mollusks all ready for eating. These have been cooked, extracted from their shells and minced. The meat is then mixed with butter, chopped parsley and herbs, and the shells, trimmed and made attractive, are refilled with this prepared paste.

The most popular snails today come from Dijon and Macon, in Burgundy, where they are fed on vine leaves, and the parks, as the local snail farms are called, open their gates in the month of August, when the little creatures bestir themselves actively.—Chicago News.

Mississippi Oratory.

Jasper county has been noted for the high grade of eloquence produced by the public men of that part of Mississippi. An appeal to the "mighty men of Jasper" made by one of that county's great men when a candidate to the voters who elected him is as follows:

"Mighty men of Jasper, if I can be instrumental in the hands of my people in adding a few jewels to those that now shine in imperishable luster on the queenly brow of our proud commonwealth, whose associated radiance, like the lambent beauty of the star, is to guide the footsteps of her children along the paths of peace and prosperity, security and happiness, I shall then have accomplished the ambition of my life."—Mobile Register.

William Morris In Court.

In one of the London police courts over which Mr. Newton presided—the Thames, I think—Morris protested against the magistrate's sentence on his comrade and called out "Shame!" in court and, being roughly hustled by the police, resisted them and was instantly arrested and placed in the dock. The magistrate, in entire ignorance of the identity of the unusual looking prisoner, asked Morris who he was, and he replied, "I am William Morris, artist and poet; pretty well known throughout Europe, I believe." This had the effect of bringing about his immediate release, but Morris said afterward that it was the only time he had had to bounce about himself, and he would never do it again.—Walter Crane's Reminiscences.

Didn't Matter Much.

Would Be Passenger (out of breath from running)—When does the half past 5 train leave?

Porter—Five thirty.

Passenger—Well, the church clock is twenty-seven minutes past, the post-office clock is twenty-five minutes past, and your clock is thirty-two minutes. Now, which clock am I to go by?

Porter—Yer can go by any clock yer like, but yer can't go by the train, for it's gone.—London Scraps.

The Censor.

"Does your wife assist you in your work?" queried the horse reporter. "I see her at your desk often."

"Yes," replied the self confessed humorist. "She destroys all my wife and mother-in-law jokes."—Chicago News.

A DIFFICULT TERM.

The Word "Bourgeois" and a French Woman's Definition.

I am always embarrassed when asked by foreigners to give the definition of the word "bourgeois," which is generally emphasized disdainfully. The dictionary defines it as "common, without distinction." It is not exactly that. Bourgeoisism, like provincialism, is a mentality. It represents a kernel without the pulp and emanates from the shell of the dinner pot. It is one of the props of society. Props are never beautiful nor graceful. Without it, however, the world could not retain its equilibrium, yet with it alone the world could not progress. It gives to individuals the impenetrability of a shell. One often finds its characteristics in persons who have received a good education, in those who possess superior culture, who have taste and a sense of beauty. It betrays itself by mean and narrow ideas, by implacable intolerance, by stubborn blindness and, above all, by an incapacity to understand liberty or to accord it generously. This mentality creates a certain atmosphere which is felt at once. The workman, the peasant, the artist, are not bourgeois. I could name a king who is much more so than many of the residents of our worst districts. Napoleon I. was bourgeois; Napoleon III. was not. Balzac, Maupassant, were not bourgeois; Zola was. England, Italy, Spain, are not bourgeois. Germany is, but her emperor is not, and so one might continue indefinitely.—From Mme. Pierre de Coulevain, Translated by Jessie Henderson Brewer.

Accounted For.

John B. O'Brien, County Auditor.

PETITION FOR PUBLIC DITCH.

To the County Board of the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota:

The undersigned land owners, whose lands will be liable to be affected by, or assessed for, the expense of the construction of the Public Ditch hereinafter described, would respectfully represent that the public health convenience and welfare and the reclamation of wet and overflowed lands require the establishment and construction of a Ditch along the following described route in the Town of River Falls, in said County of Red Lake and that the construction of the same would be of public benefit and utility.

N. A. Nelson,
John H. Follstad.

A general description of the proposed starting point, route and terminus of said ditch is as follows: Commencing at the quarter(¼) post on the section line between sections eighteen (18) and nineteen(19) Township One Hundred Fifty two(152), Range Forty three(43), thence running south on the east side of the public highway about One(1) mile to the quarter post on the section line between sections Nineteen (19) and Thirty(30), thence east about One(1) mile following the old ditch on the north side of the public highway and terminating at the Red Lake River as its outlet, the earth removed from the excavation, to be layed along the centre line of the entire ditch as a road bed for public use.

And your petitioners pray that you will proceed to establish such Ditch and cause the same to be constructed as provided by Chapter Two Hundred thirty(230) of the general Laws of Minnesota for 1905, and acts amendatory thereof.

Dog Got On His Ear.

John Hagen, one of the prosperous farmers of Mentor, had his ear bitten off by a pet terrior Monday morning at his farm home and he will be mutilated for life.

The day before the dog had been presented to Mr. Hagen by Steve Quesnelle, a neighbor. Mr. Hagen had picked up the dog, which was a very small terrier, and was fondling it in his arms when, without warning, the vicious little brute sank his teeth into Mr Hagen's hand. The man snatched the dog away and rested it against his shoulder while he examined the wound in the hand, and the dog immediately nipped at his ear taking the greater portion of it clean away.

Mr. Hagen at once wrapped up the ear in a piece of papar and started for Erskine, with the idea that the piece could be sewed on again, but by the time he reached that town the severed member was dried up and dead, and the physician informed him that he would be mutilated for life.

Suggests Smiles.

Turn your face into Dollars. Many a man has failed because his face was a picture of Calamity. It takes sunshine to produce a rose—a perfect rose—and so a man, to be successful, must have sunshine inside. A life which has no happiness is sour, surly, pessimistic and a failure. The world already has too many Vinegar Faces that breathe ill-will and strife.

The best way to be happy and enjoy good health: Buy one gallon pure California Port Wine, one gallon pure California Blackberry Brandy, each $2.00 per gallon; one gallon pure California Grape Brandy at $4.00 per gallon. If all of the above is not sufficient get a gallon of Sunny Brook Rye and you will be O.K. I also have the White Seal Liquid Food when you get dry. For sale by

Cheap Cheer.

A charitable man dropped a nickel in a blind beggar's hat and exclaimed in a benevolent voice, "There, my poor fellow, is a quarter for you."

"Why on earth," said the man's companion, "did you give him a nickel and say it was a quarter?"

"Oh, was the reply, "I wanted to cheer him up."—Argonaut.

TAKAHIRA SAYS JAPS WANT PEACE

AMBASSADOR TO UNITED STATES OUTLINES TRUE AIM OF NATION.

QUESTIONS AT ISSUE OF SMALL IMPORT

Declares That the Mikado's Influence Is Big and All Toward Strengthening of Friendships with America—Says His Country Has Grown.

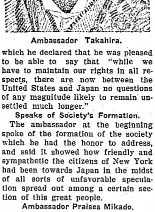
New York, Mar. 12.—With declarations that there are now between the United States and Japan no questions of any magnitude likely to remain unsettled much longer and that any questions arising in the future will be brought to satisfactory conclusions by the spirit of friendship existing between the two countries, Baron Kogoro Takahira, Japanese ambassador, called forth prolonged cheers Tuesday night at the banquet at the Hotel Astor, tendered in his honor by the Japan society of New York.

Ambassador Takahira's address was notable from the fact that it touched upon Japan's enlarged influence "on a small portion of the Asiatic continent" to her treaty with Great Britain, "our honored ally," which was concluded "purely and simply to secure the peace and, therefore, the prosperity of the far east," and to the question of immigration regarding which he declared that he was pleased to be able to say that "while we have to maintain our rights in all respects, there are now between the United States and Japan no questions of any magnitude likely to remain unsettled much longer."



Ambassador Takahira.

Speaks of Society's Formation.

The ambassador at the beginning spoke of the formation of the society which he had the honor to address, and said it showed how friendly and sympathetic the citizens of New York had been towards Japan in the midst of all sorts of unfavorable speculation spread out among a certain section of this great people.

Ambassador Praises Mikado.

Touching then upon the question of Japan and Japanese affairs, Mr. Takahira said the emperor is the same person—large-minded and far-sighted, always eager for the happiness and prosperity of his subjects, and at the same time equally sincere in his desire for the well being and good care of all other peoples. Japan's enlarged sphere of influence by no means, the ambassador said, necessitated any change in the general policy of the empire. Japan's aim and purpose as a nation are always the same. In discussing this feature of his talk the ambassador recalled a speech he had made at Philadelphia five years ago on the position of Japan in the far east, and in this connection said:

"I remember I said then, among other things, that "the sincere desire of the Japanese government and people was to have all neighboring countries realize that mutual interests can best be promoted by the maintenance of peace, the promotion of commerce and industry and the strengthening of the ties of interdependence."

Le Sueur.—People in Le Sueur who for several years have known about the wonderful "noiseless rifle" invented by Mr. John Oliver, an eccentric mechanic of Le Sueur, are somewhat amused by the statement of Hiram Percy Maxim, that he has invented a "noiseless rifle," accompanied as the statement is, by the admission that there is a slight hissing sound at each discharge.

WHAT WINTER WHEAT IS DOING FOR SOUTHERN ALBERTA.

Splendid Crops on the Former Ranching Plains of Canadian West.

That portion of the country in Western Canada formerly recognized as ranching country has developed into one of the best winter wheat districts in the continent. Yields are quoted running from 30 to 60 bushels to the acre, and giving a return to the farmer of from $25 to $50 per acre. These lands are now selling at from $12 to $20 per acre, and pay well at that figure. H. Howes of Magrath, Alberta, Western Canada, had 50 acres of land in wheat, which averaged 45 bushels to the acre; his yield of oats was 35 bushels. The value to him per acre of wheat was $35.00. J. F. Haycock of the same place, says: "I had 65 acres of wheat, 35 acres of oats and four acres of barley. My average yield of oats to the acre was 80 bushels; wheat—winter—60 bushels and red fyfe, 33 bushels, and barley, 50 bushels. The value to me per acre was, wheat, $28.00; oats, $32.00, and barley, $24.00." J. F. Bradshaw of Magrath, had 1,030 acres of wheat in crop that averaged 39½ bushels to the acre, his oats, 32 bushels; barley, 53 bushels. He threshed 31,000 bushels of wheat from 540 acres. He also had 250 tons of sugar beets from 25 acres worth $5.62½ per ton. W. S. Sherod, of Lethbridge, says: "I came to Lethbridge from Souris, North Dakota, in April, 1907, having purchased 900 acres of land in this district last fall. I had 128 acres of Alberta Red winter wheat which was put in on breaking in the fall of 1906, which yielded 41½ bushels to the acre, for which I received 87½ cents per bushel, which paid me $36.30 per acre. I had 190 acres "stubbled in" that is disced in on the stubble, which yielded 22 bushels to the acre at 87½ cents per bushel, which paid me $19.25 to the acre. I also had 350 acres of strictly volunteer crop, which it was intended to prepare in the summer; but when it was seen that it was a good looking crop, it was allowed to go. From this we threshed 15 bushels to the acre, which paid us at the rate of 87½ cents per bushel or $13.12 per acre. Our total crop yielded us 14,742 bushels of first-class wheat. Taking it as a whole, I consider that I had a first-class crop all through; and, taking into consideration the fact of part of the crop having been "stubbled in," and part strictly volunteer (which was never touched at all until the binder was put into it), I consider I had a heavy crop. I might say that I was in North Dakota five years, and I never grew as heavy a crop during that time. This is the 25th day of November, and my teams are still ploughing, and, from the appearance of the weather, will be for some time yet." R. W. Bradshaw of Magrath, says: "I had this year 400 acres in crop, viz.: 200 acres of wheat and 200 acres in oats. My average yield of oats to the acre was 50 bushels, and wheat, 22½ bushels. The value to me per acre for wheat was $19.00, and oats, $17.00. The highest price obtained by me this year or offered me for my grain was for wheat 82 cents per bushel, and $1.05 per hundred for oats. I also had 100 tons of hay worth $12.00 per ton, and will say my wheat was all volunteer this year. Lots of wheat is averaging from 50 to 60 bushels per acre on summer fallow, and on new breaking, when the breaking was done early in the spring." Writing from Spring Coulee, Alberta, W. L. Thompson says: "I had this year 3,000 acres in crop, viz.: 2,000 acres of wheat and 1,000 acres of oats. My average yield of oats to the acre was 30 bushels and of wheat 35 bushels. The value to me per acre for wheat was $27.00 and for oats $15.00."

DEMOCRATS NAME JOHN A. JOHNSON

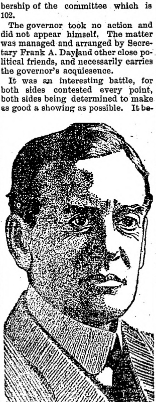
MINNESOTA STATE DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE NAMES HIM FOR PRESIDENCY.

He is Endorsed by a Vote of 68 to 23 After a Very Interesting Contest—The Bryan Adherents Show Considerable Strength.

St. Paul, March 7.—Resolutions endorsing Gov. Johnson for the Democratic nomination for president were adopted by the Democratic state central committee yesterday afternoon by a vote of 23 to 68, just a two-thirds vote of the entire membership of the committee which is 102.

The governor took no action and did not appear himself. The matter was managed and arranged by Secretary Frank A. Day and other close political friends, and necessarily carries the governor's acquiesence.

It was an interesting battle, for both sides contested every point, both sides being determined to make as good a showing as possible. It began with a fight on the proxies presented by men on both sides and continued, when the resolutions were presented, with an eloquent and earnest debate, which lasted two hours, and ended with a roll call, in which the Bryan men lost out, 68 to 23. All in all, is was one of the most interesting and best attended meetings a state central committee has ever held in this state.



GOV. JOHN A. JOHNSON.

That the Bryan men were able to muster twenty-three votes was really more than the Johnson men expected. They did not look for more than ten or a dozen. Several of them were votes of men who had proxies of members, though most of the proxies voted as the men they represented would have voted.

Neither side at any time had any doubt as to the result. It was only a fight to show the outside world whether Johnson or Bryan had most friends in Minnesota. Both sides had worked hard to get as many of their men present as possible, and there were few of the members who were not represented. Every question presented, almost, was decided by the same vote.

St. Paul won out over Minneapolis in the fight for the state convention, the Bryan men favoring Minneapolis. The date, May 14, was fixed by a unanimous vote, but the apportionment was fixed by the divided vote.

The resolution is as follows:

Gov. John A. Johnson has twice brought victory to the democracy of Minnesota. During his incumbency of the office of governor more reform has been instituted and more remedial legislation adopted than before in the history of our state.

Confidently believing that his nomination as candidate of the party for the presidency, will bring to our support the electoral votes of the states in the Mississippi valley and thus secure a national triumph, we respectfully present to the democracy of the nation the name of John A. Johnson as candidate for presidency of the United States, and recommend to the Democrats of Minnesota that they cause his name to be presented to national convention at Denver for nomination.

The committee ruled out James Manahan who held the proxy of A. B. Clair of Grand Rapids. Mr. Manahan is recognized as Bryan's personal representative.

Hear Robbers; Go to Sleep.

La Crosse, March 7.—Postoffice Inspector E. E. Fraser of La Crosse, who has just returned from Bay City, Minn., after an unsuccessful hunt for the burglars who dynamited the safes of that and adjoining cities a few nights ago, says persons living over the postoffice and general store told him that they heard the explosions of dynamite, but thought it was a screen door banging in the wind. They went back to sleep, and when morning came the robbers had a start which made their escape successful.

JUDGING BY THE RESULTS.

Villager's Conversion Had Not Been of Great Avail.

"In our business we get many doubtful compliments," said Col. John F. Bishop, deputy surveyor of the port, the other day, "but I do not think I ever received a compliment such as my grandfather got down in my native state of Tennessee. My grandfather was a minister and I was a very small boy when we both strolled down the road one day. One of our fellow villagers came along toward us.

"'Good morning,' said the villager, who apparently had looked upon the cup. 'I-sh conver—hic—ted, parson,' he stammered with difficulty. 'Antwashyou—hic—that con—hic—converted—hic—me.'

"'That must be so,' replied my grandfather, 'for it's certain the Almighty had nothing to do with your conversion.'"—New York Evening Telegram.

Woman Tells of Her Brother's Terrible Suffering—Two Babies Also Cured —Cuticura Invaluable.

"My brother had eczema three different summers. Each summer it came out between his shoulders and down his back, and he said his suffering was terrible. When it came on the third summer, he bought a box of Cuticura Ointment and gave it a faithful trial. Soon he began to feel better and he cured himself entirely of eczema with Cuticura. A lady in Indiana heard of how my daughter Mrs. Miller, had cured her little son of terrible eczema by the Cuticura Remedies. This lady's little one had the eczema so badly that they thought they would lose it. She used Cuticura Remedies and they cured her child entirely, and the disease never came back. Mrs. Sarah E. ### Such a Clever Waiter.

Two gentlemen dining in a New York restaurant were surprised to find on the bill-of-fare the item, "green bluefish."

"Waiter," one asked, "what sort of fish are green bluefish?"

"Fresh—right out of the water," said the waiter, offhand.

"Nonsense," said the man. "You know well enough that they do not take bluefish at this season."

The waiter came up and looked at the disputed item.

"Oh, that, sir," he said, with an air of enlightenment, "that's a hothouse bluefish, sir."—Youth's Companion.

Not Born There.

A Washington man, whose business had brought him to New York, took a run not long ago into Connecticut, where he had lived in his childhood.

In the place where he was born he accosted a venerable old chap, of some 80 years, who proved to be the very person the Washingtonian sought to answer certain inquiries concerning the place. As the conversation proceeded the Washington man said:

"I suppose you have always lived around here?"

"Oh, no," said the native. "I was born two good miles from here."

THE DOCTOR'S GIFT.

Food Worth Its Weight in Gold.

We usually expect the doctor to put us on some kind of penance and give us bitter medicines.

A Penn. doctor brought a patient something entirely different and the results are truly interesting.

"Two years ago," writes this patient, "I was a frequent victim of acute indigestion and biliousness, being allowed to eat very few things. One day our family doctor brought me a small package, saying he had found something for me to eat, at last.

"He said it was a food called Grape-Nuts, and even as its golden color might suggest, it was worth its weight in gold. I was sick and tired, trying one thing after another to no avail, but at last consented to try this new food.

"Well! it surpassed my doctor's fondest anticipation and every day since then I have blessed the good doctor and the inventor of Grape-Nuts.

"I noticed improvement at once and in a month's time my former spells of indigestion had disappeared. In two months I felt like a new man. My brain was much clearer and keener, my body took on the vitality of youth, and this condition has continued."

A WELL MAN, AT 81.

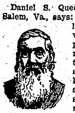
The Interesting Experience of an Old Settler of Virginia.



Daniel S. Queen, Burrell Street, Salem, Va., says: "Years ago while lifting a heavy weight a sudden pain shot through my back and after that I was in constant misery from kidney trouble. One spell kept me in bed six weeks. My arms and legs were stiff and I was helpless as a child. The urine was discolored and though I used one remedy after another, I was not helped until I used Doan's Kidney Pills, and I was so bad then that the first box made only a slight change. To-day, however, I am a well man at 81, and I owe my life and health to the use of Doan's Kidney Pills."

ECONOMY CARRIED TOO FAR.

Old Man's Thrift That Led Him Into Ridiculous Action.

President J. G. Schurman of Cornell was discussing elective college courses, of which in the freshman and sophomore years, he disapproves.

"A freshman of 16 or 17," said President Schurman, "is too young to choose for himself the courses best for him. His mind is not mature enough. It will make mistakes.

"In its immaturity, its proneness to error, it is like the mind of an old man in my native Freetown. He, though old, was mentally undeveloped, and saw nothing wrong or ridiculous in a piece of economy that he put in practice in the cemetery.

"The old man had lost four wives, and desired to erect for each a headstone, with an inscription commemorative of her wifely virtues.

"But inscriptions, he found, were very expensive. He economized in this way:

"He had the Christian name of each wife cut on a small stone above her grave—"Emma," "Mary," "Hester," "Edith." Under each name a hand pointed to a large stone in the center of the lot, and under each hand were the words:

"'For epitaph see large stone.'"

OLD GENTLEMAN NOT PLEASED.

Letter's Inscription Certainly the Reverse of Flattering.

In the English club at Hongkong a white-haired old gentleman, who had come down from some northern port, was seated at dinner when he suddenly became very excited. He had been brought a letter by a solemn-faced Chinese butler, and he saw something on the outside of this letter which sent him downstairs two steps at a time to interview the hall porter. When he came back he told us what was the matter. The hall porter had inscribed in the envelope, in Chinese, for the information of the butler:

"This is for the old baboon with white fur."

Unfortunately for the hall porter, the old gentleman was a first-class scholar in the Chinese language.

Perfectly Plain.

With all the impartiality of the partisan, Prof. Price set forth the contentions of both political parties regarding the tariff.

At the close of his talk he was surrounded by the fair members of the Woman's Current Events club.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. ### Diplomacy.

"Why do you make a practice of predicting bad weather?"

WHISKEY FOR RHEUMATISM.

The increased use of whiskey for rheumatism is causing considerable discussion among the medical fraternity. It is an almost infallible cure when mixed with certain other ingredients and taken properly. The following formula is very effective: "To one half pint of good whiskey add one ounce of Toris Root compound and one ounce of Syrup of Sarsaparilla Compound. Take in tablespoonful doses before each meal and before retiring." Toris Root Compound is a product of the laboratories of the Globe Pharmaceutical Co., Dayton, O.

A prominent druggist states he fills this prescription often and has seen its good results. It is surely worth trying by anyone who may be afflicted.

Found a Customer.

"My friends, are you aware with what vile compounds you insult your stomachs?" said an eloquent preacher in a mining town recently. After a short pause he continued: "The stuff served to you at the dramshops here is not honest whisky, but a mixture of alcohol and water colored and flavored with fusel oil and chemicals. You can go to any drug store and for 50 cents buy enough of these ingredients to make a barrel of the stuff you drink!"

As he reached this climax a great burly man jumped up and, waving a five dollar bill high in his hand, exclaimed in stentorian tones:

"One moment, please. Here is my last V. Give me that recipe. I would sooner possess it than a gold mine!"

A hearty cheer by the audience ended the meeting. The preacher prudently withdrew, richer in experience and more circumspect in his remarks at subsequent gatherings.—Buffalo News.

A BRONZE STATUE.

The Model, the Core and the Pouring of the Metal.

"Immense pains and immense labor attend the production of a bronze statue of any size even after the artist has done his work," remarks a sculptor.

"To begin with, the plaster model has to be completely covered with small lumps of a special kind of sand, sometimes as many as 1,500 to 2,000 of these pieces being required. After these blocks of sand are dry they are taken off the cast one at a time and carefully put together to form the mold. The latter is then filled with clay, and the same operation is again gone through, a facsimile of the plaster cast being thus obtained.

"Then comes the most delicate part of the whole work. The clay model, or 'core,' as it is technically called, has to have a quarter of an inch taken off its entire surface, which, as may readily be imagined, is anything but easy, especially if the subject be at all ornate.

"The 'core' is then again put into the mold—which has of course to be reconstructed once more—being kept exactly in the center by means of iron rods.

"The molten bronze is then poured in from the top, completely filling the space between the 'core' and the mold. After it has cooled the latter is again removed and the clay interior extracted, when the statue, somewhat rough and needing a slight touching up, is revealed."—Cassell's Journal.

Encouraged.

"I am afraid," said Mr. Henpeck, "that I made a fool of myself today."

"Don't worry about it," his wife replied. "It isn't likely that anybody noticed anything unusual about the way you spoke or acted."—Chicago Record-Herald.

As a Missile.

"Don't you hate to grow old?" said the first egg sadly.

"No, I don't," returned the second egg, with a toss of the head. "When I become old enough I am going on the stage."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that a petition, of which the following is a copy, has been filed in the office of the County Auditor of Red Lake County, State of Minnesota, and that a hearing will be had upon said petition before the County Board at the office of the County Auditor of said County, in the city of Red Lake Falls, Minn., on the 24th day of March, A. D., 1908, at 2 o'clock p. m.

Dated at Red Lake Falls, Minn., this 19th day of February, 1908.

John B. O'Brien, County Auditor.

PETITION FOR PUBLIC DITCH.

To the County Board of the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota:

The undrsigned land owners, whose lands will be liable to be affected by, or assessed for, the expense of the construction of the Public Ditch hereinafter described, would respectfully represent that the public health, convenience and welfare and the reclamation of wet and overflowed lands require the establishment and construction of a Ditch along the following described route in the Town of River Falls, in said County of Red Lake and that the construction of the same would be of public benefit and utility.

N. A. Nelson,
John H. Follstad.

A general description of the proposed starting point, route and terminus of said ditch is as follows: Commencing at the quarter(¼) post on the section line between sections eighteen (18) and nineteen(19) Township One Hundred Fifty two(152), Range Forty three(43), thence running south on the east side of the public highway about One(1) mile to the quarter post on the section line between sections Nineteen (19) and Thirty(30), thence east about One(1) mile following the old ditch on the north side of the public highway and terminating at the Red Lake River as its outlet, the earth removed from the excavation, to be layed along the centre line of the entire ditch as a road bed for public use.

And your petitioners pray that you will proceed to establish such Ditch and cause the same to be constructed as provided by Chapter Two Hundred thirty(230) of the general Laws of Minnesota for 1905, and acts amendatory thereof.

Dated January 23rd, 1908.

N. A. Nelson,
John H. Follstad.

DEEP SEA FISHING.

Quite as Much a Game of Chance as Politics or Poker.

You let down a heavy lump of lead and two big hooks baited with clams into thirty, forty or sixty feet of water. Then you wait until something nudges the line or until you suspect that the hooks are bare.

Then you give the line a quick jerk and pull in hand over hand, with more or less resistance, and see what you have drawn into the grab bag.

It may be a silly but nutritious cod, gaping in surprise at this curious termination of his involuntary rise in the world, or a silvery haddock, staring at you with round, reproachful eyes, or a pollock, handsome, but worthless, or a shiny, writhing dogfish, whose villainy is written on every line of his degenerate, chinless face.

It may be that spiny gargoyle of the sea, a sculpin, or a soft and stupid hake from the mud flats. It may be any one of the grotesque products of Neptune's vegetable garden, a sea cucumber, a sea carrot or a sea cabbage, or it may be nothing at all.

When you have made your grab and deposited the result, if it be edible, in the barrel which stands in the middle of the boat, you try another grab, and that's the whole story.

It is astonishing how much amusement apparently sane men get out of such a simple game as this. The interest lies, first, in the united effort to fill the barrel, and, second, in the rivalry among the fishermen as to which of them shall take in the largest cod or the greatest number of haddock, these being regarded as prize packages. The sculpin and the sea vegetables may be compared to comic valentines, which expose the recipient to ridicule.

The dogfish are like tax notices and assessments—the man who gets one of them gets less than nothing, for they count against the catcher. It is quite as much a game of chance as politics or poker. You do not know on which side of the boat the good fish are hidden.

You cannot tell the difference between the nibble of a cod and the bite of a dogfish. You have no idea of what is coming to you until you have hauled in almost all of your line and caught sight of your allotment wriggling and whirling in the blue water Sometimes you get twins.—Scribner's.

British Manners.

A man shoves past a woman on a staircase or he leaves her standing while he sits. He comes into a crowded public room with his hat on and talks loudly as if all the place belonged to him. His womankind do the same. At present the workingman has the best manners, the middle class the worst.—Lady Violet Greville in London Graphic.

Henry's Adventure In Sewing Society.

From Crookston come the story that Henry Thompson, of Tenstrike, and a dressmaker, of Red Lake Falls, played at lovemaking with the result that Henry got bunced out of about $150, lost the girl and went home madder than a hornet. The story goes that Henry went to Red Lake Falls on Tuesday to meet his loved one and that she agreed to wander along life's pathway with him but she had some bills that had to be paid before she left town. Henry was willing to pay the bills and dug up about $60 for that purpose. Then she had to have some hats and things for which Henry put up about $40 with a smile. They took the next train for Crookston and put up at a hotel while waiting for a train to take them to Tenstrike. They did some shopping and Henry paid the bills. Then the maiden claimed she was tired and would rest a little while and Henry went out for a stroll.

He had the check for her trunk and carelessly left it on the bureau in his room. During his absence she hunted up the check, hired a hack and had her trunk and herself taken to South Crookston where she boarded a train for points unknown. Henry hunted for her for a while and then took the next train for Tenstrike with a light pocketbook and a heavy heart. He has made up his mind that hereafter he will patronize a tailor shop instead of the dressmaking parlors.

Barber's Wife Used The Barber's Knife.

Reports from McIntosh are to the effect that considerable of a sensation was caused in that village on Wednesday afternoon when Mrs. Albert Rice attempted to commit suicide by slashing her throat in the barber shop where her husband is employed.

According to the story published in the Crookston Journal Mr. and Mrs. Rice are a young married couple and their life is not a perpetual honeymoon. On Wednesday afternoon the woman went to the barber shop and wanted her husband to go out with her. He declined and there was a scene. The police were sent for to remove her from the shop but before the officer arrived she grabbed a razor and slashed her throat. The wound was promptly sewed up and, while she is very weak from loss of blood, she will probably recover.

He Knew the Play.

Miss Grace Lane, an English actress, who achieved her first success as Babbie in "The Little Minister," told of her introduction to the author. One night at a Stoke Newington theater the manager told her that Mr. — was coming round to see her at the end of the act. She did not catch the name and thought that a representative of the local paper was seeking a chat with her. "Very well," she answered and gave the matter no more thought. At the end of the act she found the manager and a small, delicate looking man awaiting her, and, without stopping for an introduction, Miss Lane started talking nineteen to the dozen that she might get the interview over and take a little rest in her dressing room before the next act. "I hope you are enjoying the play," she said when she had finished giving the astonished young man a long account of her private history and her early professional career. "Oh, yes," he answered. "Don't you think it is a pretty play?" she asked. "Quite a pretty play," was the reply. "Did you see it at the Haymarket?" "Oh, yes, I saw quite a lot of it. You see, I wrote it," said Mr. James Barrie.

Talking and Thinking.

The Man — A learned scientist advances the theory that a severed head is capable of thinking, although it is unable to speak. The Woman—That's queer. It is so much easier to talk than it is to think!

Call Money.

Nell — What is call money, dear? Belle—I guess it's the kind you call up your husband on the telephone for to tell him you must have it right away. —Baltimore American.

What's a Widower?

Is a widower a married or a single man?

This question continually crops up and it is continually being answered both ways. Certainly a widower is married—he is not a bachelor. That is one answer. Certainly, on the other hand, no matter what the man once was, he is single now. That is the other answer. Thus in all match games of single against married men—games of hockey, football, baseball, cricket—the poor widower is tossed from one side to the other like a shuttlecock. The solution depends solely upon his skill.

EYESIGHT WAS IN DANGER

From Terrible Eczema—Baby's Head a Mass of Itching Rash and Sores—Disease Cured by Cuticura.

"Our little girl was two months old when she got a rash on her face and within five days her face and head were all one sore. We used different remedies but it got worse instead of better and we thought she would turn blind and that her ears would fall off. She suffered terribly, and would scratch until the blood came. This went on until she was five months old, then I had her under our family doctor's care, but she continued to grow worse. He said it was eczema. When she was seven months old I started to use the Cuticura Remedies and in two months our baby was a different girl. You could not see a sign of a sore and she was as fair as a newborn baby. She has not had a sign of the eczema since. Mrs. H. F. Budke, LeSueur, Minn., Apr. 15 and May 2, '07."

Oh, Pshaw!

One of the consuls to Persia, during a recent visit home, said at a dinner in Chicago:

"The present shah will never be the equal of his predecessor. What a character the late shah was. He never opened his mouth without saying something worth repeating.

"Lady Drummond Wolfe once got permission to visit the shah's harem. She took a friend with her, a Miss Blank, who was about to be married. The two English women wandered over the splendid palace, among the hundreds of beautiful girls, and presently the shah encountered them.

"'Come here,' he said to Miss Blank, in his crude French.

"She approached. He looked closely at her.

"'You are about to be married?' he said.

"'Yes, your highness.'

"'It's late!'"

Leisure to Burn.

"My dear," asked the overworked business manager of his wife, as he tried to write a check for her, answer the telephone, receipt the expressman, and give instructions to a floor-walker, at one and the same time: "My dear, in that 'Great Beyond,' do you suppose any of the elegant leisure, of which the preacher tells us, will fall to my lot?"

"Sure, John," answered his wife, sweetly, "you will doubtless have leisure to burn."—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

MUSIC STUDENTS

Should Have Steady Nerves.

The nervous system of the musician is often very sensitive and any habit like coffee drinking may so upset the nerves as to make regular and necessary daily practise next to impossible.

"I practise from seven to eight hours a day and study Harmony two hours," writes a Mich. music student. "Last September I was so nervous I could only practise a few minutes at a time, and mother said I would have to drop my music for a year.

"This was terribly discouraging as I couldn't bear the thought of losing a whole year of study. Becoming convinced that my nervousness was caused largely by coffee, and seeing Postum so highly spoken of, I decided I would test it for a while.

"Mother followed the directions carefully and I thought I had never tasted such a delicious drink. We drank Postum every morning instead of coffee, and by November I felt more like myself than for years, and was ready to resume my music.

"I now practise as usual, do my studying and when my day's work is finished I am not any more nervous than when I began.

"I cannot too highly recommend Postum to musicians who practise half a day. My father is a physician and recommends Postum to his patients. Words cannot express my appreciation for this most valuable health beverage, and experience has proven its superiority over all others." "There's a Reason."

WE WIN THE BANNER

MINNESOTA AGAIN CARRIES OFF ALL HONORS IN NATIONAL BUTTER CONTEST.

Most Successful Convention of National Creamery Buttermakers Association.

St. Paul—Earnest discussion of the improvement of the quality of butter and of dairy conditions in general was commenced by the buttermakers of the United States when the annual convention of the National Creamery Buttermakers' association was opened at the Auditorium. The attendance was unusually large for the first day of the convention and a good many more are expected to arrive. They come from almost every state in the Union, the following states being best represented: New York, Vermont, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, Wisconsin, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, South and North Dakota, Montana, Washington, California and Minnesota.

President J. J. Farrell of Carver introduced Gov. Johnson, and the governor was given an ovation. The governor spoke briefly of the surprising growth of the dairy industry and the development of the dairy country in the Northwest. He spoke of the growth of the creamery industry in this state and complimented the persistent efforts of the buttermakers in continually improving their products.

H. J. Nietert, of Walker, Iowa, made the response. He pointed out the vast wealth invested in the dairy industry and the wealth produced each year.

President J. J. Farrell then gave his address. He also spoke of the growth of the dairy industry and of the work of the association in increasing the quantity and improving the quality of the butter produced in this country.

Minnesota was honored at the morning session the second day by the reelection of J. J. Farrell of Carver as president. Lauritz Olsen, of West Depere, Wis., was elected vice president, and S. B. Schilling, of Chicago, was re-elected secretary-treasurer. These were all elected unanimously, although there had been a lively boom for Lauritz Olsen for president.

A lively discussion was the result of the paper read by A. Jenson, of Eureka, Cal., on "How to Secure Uniformity in Overrun and Quality of Butter." His paper contained some pointed statements aside from the technical topics it covered. He charged that in his trip across the continent he had not had a bite of decent butter and had not found any at any of the St. Paul hotels.

L. S. Edwards, of Arlington, Iowa, read a paper on "Do Buttermakers Need Accident Insurance?"

B. D. White, connected with the dairy division of the department of agriculture, read a paper at the afternoon session on keeping creamery records. Two papers on market conditions were read at the afternoon program. W. S. Moore, of Chicago, discussed whether butter could be paid for according to quality under present conditions.

Minnesota again carried off all the honors at the National Creamery Buttermakers' association. Not only does Minnesota win the banner for the highest average scores, but her buttermakers got the highest individual score and the second highest. Iowa won the first in the gathered cream class and Minnesota second. Iowa also won the butter scoring contest, with Minnesota and North Dakota tied for second.

All in all, the convention was as successful as any the association has ever held, both in point of attendance and enthusiasm. "If the people of St. Paul are as well satisfied with the convention as we are," said Secretary S. B. Schilling, "we'll be satisfied all around."

THE WINNERS.

Prize banner, high average of ten tubs, won by Minnesota; score, 95.9.

INDIVIDUAL PRIZES.

Whole Milk—

First prize, J. C. Past, Hector, Minn.; score, 98.

Second prize, E. O. Blomquist, Center City, Minn.; score, 97½.

Gathered Cream—

First prize, A. Christensen, Royal, Iowa; score, 96.

Second prize, L. P. Hanson, Windom, Minn.; score, 94½.

Team butter scoring contest, Iowa; team, J. J. Ross, F. Stephenson, L. S. Edwards.

Iowa Wins Scoring Contest.

The Iowa team won the scoring contest. The team scored 15 tubs which had previously been scored by the official judges, and they came within 18 points of the official scores. Minnesota and North Dakota tied for second, each team being 22 points off.

Federal Dairy Bureau.

Resolutions practically indorsing the proposed advance in freight rates on cream on long hauls were passed by the convention. The resolutions also urge the secretary of agriculture to place the dairy interests under a separate bureau in the agricultural department.

The session closed with the announcement of the scores and the presentation of the cups. The highest scorer in each state was awarded a cup, and all those scoring above 90 in the whole milk class or above 88 in the gathered cream class will share in the prize money. J. C. Past, of Hector, Minn., winner of the sweepstakes, also in 18 points of the official scores of 98. G. P. Sauer, of East Troy, had the highest for Wisconsin, 97. A. M. Whitney of Whittemore got the Iowa prize scoring 96 in a warm contest.

PERUNA EDITORIAL NO. 2.

Dr. Hartman has claimed for many years that Peruna is an EXCELLENT CATARRH REMEDY. Some of the doctor's critics have disputed the doctor's claim as to the efficacy of Peruna.

Since the ingredients of Peruna are no longer a secret, what do the medical authorities say concerning the remedies of which Peruna is composed?

Take, for instance, the ingredient HYDRASTIS CANADENSIS, OR GOLDEN SEAL. The United States Dispensatory says of this herbal remedy, that it is largely employed in the treatment of depraved mucous membranes, chronic rhinitis (nasal catarrh), atonic dyspepsia (catarrh of the stomach), chronic intestinal catarrh, catarrhal jaundice (catarrh of the liver), and in diseased mucous membranes of the pelvic organs. It is also recommended for the treatment of various forms of diseases peculiar to women.

Another ingredient of Peruna, CORYDALIS FORMOSA, is classed in the United States Dispensatory as a tonic.

CEDRON SEEDS is another ingredient of Peruna, an excellent drug that has been very largely overlooked by the medical profession for the past fifty years. THE SEEDS ARE TO BE FOUND IN VERY FEW DRUG STORES. The United States Dispensatory says of the action of cedron that it is used as a bitter tonic and in the treatment of dysentery, and in intermittent diseases as a SUBSTITUTE FOR QUININE.

OIL OF COPAIBA, another ingredient of Peruna, is classed by the United States Dispensatory as a mild stimulant and diuretic. It acts on the stomach and intestinal tract. It acts as a stimulant on the genito-urinary membranes. Useful in chronic cystitis, chronic dysentery and diarrhea, and some chronic diseases of the liver and kidneys.

These opinions as to the ingredients of Peruna are held by all writers on the subject, including Bartholow and Scudder.

Our Peruna Tablet Is Peruna With Fluid Removed.

OF HYDRASTIS, BARTHOLOW SAYS it is applicable to stomatitis (catarrh of the mucous surfaces of the mouth), follicular pharyngitis (catarrh of the pharynx), chronic coryza (catarrh of the head). This writer classes hydrastis as a stomachic tonic, useful in atonic dyspepsia (chronic gastric catarrh), catarrh of the duodenum, catarrh of the gall duct, catarrh of the intestines, catarrh of the kidneys (chronic Bright's disease), catarrh of the bladder, and catarrh of other pelvic organs.

BARTHOLOW REGARDS COPAIBA as an excellent remedy for chronic catarrh of the bladder, chronic bronchitis (catarrh of the bronchial tubes).

BARTHOLOW STATES THAT CUBEB, an ingredient of Peruna, promotes the appetite and digestion, increases the circulation of the blood. Useful in chronic nasal catarrh, follicular pharyngitis (catarrh of the pharynx), increasing the tonicity of the mucous membranes of the throat. It also relieves hoarseness. Useful in atonic dyspepsia (catarrh of the stomach), and in chronic catarrh of the colon and rectum, catarrh of the bladder, prostatorrhea, and chronic bronchial affections.

MILLSPAUGH, MEDICINAL PLANTS, one of the most authoritative works on medicinal herbs in the English language, in commenting upon COLLINSONIA CANADENSIS, says that it acts on the pneumogastric and vaso motor nerves. It increases the secretions of the mucous membranes in general. In the mountains of Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and Carolina, collinsonia canadensis is considered a panacea for many disorders, including headache, colic, cramp, dropsy and indigestion. DR. SCUDDER regards it highly as a remedy in chronic diseases of the lungs, heart disease and asthma.

These citations ought to be sufficient to show to any candid mind that Peruna is a catarrh remedy. Surely, such herbal remedies, that command the enthusiastic confidence of the highest authorities obtainable, brought together in proper combination, ought to make a catarrh remedy of the highest efficacy.

This is our claim, and we are able to substantiate this claim by ample quotations from the HIGHEST MEDICAL AUTHORITIES IN THE WORLD.

Surely a No-Account Dog.

A man in Missouri recently sued a railway company for damages for the death of a hound killed on the track, says the Youth's Companion. The company defended itself upon the following points:

Said dog was chasing a rabbit up defendant's tracks in violation of the game laws.

Said rabbit lived on defendant's right of way, and was therefore the property of the defendant.

Plaintiff's dog was a trespasser, and was hunting defendant's property without permission.

Said deceased was not much of a dog, anyhow, or it could easily have kept out of the way of defendant's trains.

And having fully answered, defendant prays to be discharged.

LUMBAGO

This is really Rheumatism of the Muscles of the Loins and is characterized by a severe, at times, agonizing pain in the small of the back, allowing the sufferer scarcely a moment's rest, while the ailment is at its worst. It can come from cold, exposure to draft, from getting wet feet or wearing wet or damp clothing. It causes acute suffering, and if allowed to become chronic it may permanently disable the sufferer. The way to secure quickest relief is to redden the skin over the painful part by rubbing with a flesh brush or piece of flannel rag, and then apply ST. JACOBS OIL by gentle friction with the hand.

To refuse to yield to others when reason or a special cause require it is a mark of pride and stiffness.—Thomas a Kempis.

CLIMATE IS IDEAL

GREAT WEALTH ACQUIRED IN GROWING GRAIN.

Writing from Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, Canada, W. H. Ellwanger, who was formerly a resident of Green Mountain, Iowa, says: "The climate in summer is ideal for growing grain. Long, clear days of sunshine, no bad storms. We never need to guard against cyclones; I never saw a better climate in my life. We made more money during the season of 1906 than any previous five years in central Iowa—one of the best districts in the state." But Mr. Ellwanger was a resident of the town, and it might be more interesting to read what a farmer has to say about Western Canada. From hundreds of letters all filled with words of praise, recounting success in Western Canada there has been one selected. It is as follows:

Paynton, Sask., Canada,
Dec. 10th, 1907.

To Whom This May Concern:

I moved to this address February 3, 1907, from Montgomery, Iowa, and took a homestead 35 miles north of Paynton. It was cold when I moved here but it did not stay cold long; it broke up the 8th of February, and was not so cold after that but the spring was late on account of the heavy snow fall, but in spite of the late spring I saw better grain than I ever saw in the states, raised this year. I helped a man finish sowing oats the 4th of July and they made fair oats. In a good year oats will go 100 bushels to the acre and wheat 25 to 50; all root crops do well here. I saw turnips weigh 7 and 8 pounds. I raised potatoes this year that measured 11½ inches one way and 18½ the other in circumference. This is a fine stock country; hay in abundance, good water, plenty of fuel, free and plenty of building material—the government gives us timber to saw into lumber and we can get it sawed for about $6.00 per thousand. All small fruit grows wild here, then there are ducks, geese, grouse, pheasants, deer, moose, elk and fish in abundance. I was over to Turtle Lake yesterday where there is lots of fishing being done this winter. I saw about a carload of white fish in one pile. I gave 25 cents for 86 pounds of fish. What do you think of that, Brother Yankee? I think this is a fine place both to make money and to live. There was an old man up here visiting his brother-in-law. Now this man owns land close to Des Moines, Iowa, and is in good circumstances, but he took a homestead and says he will be contented if he can only put in the rest of his days in Canada. He would get up in the morn and look out of the door and say: "Well, who wouldn't live in Canada?" Now I have been in 13 different states in the United States, and I never saw the chance that there is here for a man that has a little muscle and a little brains. Three cheers for Canada!

Fatal Accident.

Minneapolis—While hunting squirrels on the outskirts of North Minneapolis, S. D. De Witt sent a bullet whizzing thru the air and before its course had been spent it pierced the heart of Nels Nelson, an employe of the C. A. Smith sawmill, killing him instantly.

De Witt was at once placed under arrest and hauled into police court, where, after a preliminary examination on the charge of manslaughter, he was held to the grand jury. He was released on $1,000 bonds. The shooting took place within the city limits, thus giving the municipal court jurisdiction in the case.

Nelson, at the time of the accident, was unloading edgings about a mile west of the city workhouse. While they were at work, the other men heard a shot apparently some distance away and saw Nelson drop to the ground. They ran to their wounded comrade, picked him up and started for the city.

Leaves Guests to Die.

Winona, Minn.—William Estey, aged 65, a wealthy farmer, left his home at midnight, while his house was full of guests, and hanged himself to a tree. The body was found in the morning ten rods from the house.

Estey had invited friends to spend the evening at his home. Just as his guests were preparing to depart, Estey stepped outside, saying he would return in a few minutes.

Failure to return alarmed his friends, who went to search for him.

No trace of the man was found, but at daylight his son, looking from the window, saw his father's body hanging on a rope which had been fastened to a tree near the house.

Ill health is given as the cause of the deed.

Lost Child Is Found.

Crookston—While the police of Crookston and Winnipeg and two great railway corporations were searching for her, little 13-year old Ragna Bye, who was lost between Bemidji and Calgary, Alta., passed thru this city unrecognized. She had been lost in Winnipeg while trying to make the change from the Canadian Pacific railroad station to the Great Northern. She remained in a hotel in that city until Mrs. J. T. Olson, of St. Hilaire, Minn., discovered her and brought her to Crookston. She was sent from here to her friends in Bemidji.

A Fine Legacy.

Crookston—S. P. Swedburgh, a liquor dealer of this city, has received from his uncle, Olaf Olson, who died some time ago at Bjorgshire, Helsinglund, Sweden, an inheritance worth $15,000. The uncle had willed the estate to the five brothers of the Swedburgh family in return for kindnesses extended him by the family during his lifetime. Mr. Swedburgh is conferring with the Swedish consul at Grand Forks that he soon may receive the property. The deceased had no other living heirs.

Grafting Is Charged.

Duluth—Sensational graft charges are made against Treasurer Charles Buyck and Clerk W. A. Jones, of the town of Buyck, St. Louis county, in a civil suit instituted by the town authorities as the result of an examination conducted by the public examiner.

Restitution of $33,000 by Buyck and $4,500 by Jones, alleged to have been misappropriated from the township funds, is demanded by the plaintiff in the action.

Alleged "Terror" Nabbed.

Winona—Thomas McCoey, who is alleged to have terrorized the residents of Dresbach by keeping them in a state of fear by the use of a loaded revolver, and who was brought to this city and examined as to his sanity, was found sane, was arraigned in the municipal court on the charge of assault in the second degree, and was bound over to the grand jury under bail of $500. He is charged with having threatened the life of his wife.

NEWS NOTES.

St. Paul—Gus Schulze, a hostler, succumbed to injuries that he sustained thru horse's kick.

Minneapolis—Immigration officials ordered to rid Twin Cities of anarchists and undesirable aliens.

Crookston—The Crookston club at its meeting decided to produce a minstrel and specialty show in this city early in April.

Minneapolis—William Burns, 14 years old, and Leonard Capron, 17 years old, students of St. John's military academy, Collegeville, are prisoners at Central police station on a charge of raising a $5 check to $50 and forging the indorsement.

Moorhead—General Manager George T. Slade, General Superintendent F. W. Gilbert and Division Superintendent J. E. Craner, of the Northern Pacific, have held a conference with Agent L. T. Stodder regarding building a new passenger depot in this city.

St. Paul—Burnett Krantz, 14 months old, was drowned in a pail of water on the Krantz farm near Robbinsdale, while his mother went to the barn to call Matt J. Krantz, the baby's father, to dinner.

HOW TO KNOW PURE PAINT.

A Way in Which It May Be Identified Before Using.

After a building has been painted long enough for a weather test, it is easy to tell if the paint used was made of pure White Lead or not. But such belated knowledge comes like locking the barn after the colt is stolen.

What one wants is a test that will tell the quality of the paint before it and the labor of putting it on are paid for.

Nature has provided a way in which genuine White Lead may be positively distinguished from adulterated or fake White Lead before you spend a cent on your painting.

Pure White Lead is made from metallic lead, and, under intense heat, such as is produced by a blow-pipe, pure White Lead will resolve itself back into metallic lead. If, however, it is not genuine White Lead, or if it contains the slightest trace of adulteration, the change will not take place. Therefore the "blow-pipe" test is an absolute and final one.

The National Lead Company are urging everyone interested in painting to make this test of paint before using it, and they guarantee that the pure White Lead sold under their "Dutch Boy Painter" trade-mark will always prove absolutely pure under the "blow-pipe" or any other test. To make it easy for you to perform the experiment they will send you free upon request a blow-pipe and everything necessary for you to make the test, together with a valuable booklet on paint. Address, National Lead Company, Woodbridge Building, New York City.

FOR BETTER ROADS.

Under the present law the question of good roads and better drainage throughout the county is placed on a different footing from what it was formerly and there is no question but that many of the road overseers and town boards throughout the county do not understand their powers and duties under the new law. Now, would it not be a good idea for the county Superintendent of Highways to call a meeting of town officers at some convenient place, extend an invitation to all members of town boards and road overseers to attend, and instruct them as to their duties under the law. This is the same plan that has been adopted regarding school boards and it has proved to be a very good thing. There is no provision in the law for such meetings or to cover the expenses of town officers in attending such meeting, but, it seems to us that each township can and should appropriate money out of the town funds to pay such expenses. The PIONEER makes this suggestion believing that this plan would bring the very best results to the county at large so far as better roads are concerned. Our present county superintendent of highways is, and has been for many years, a practical and most efficient civil engineer and knows the proper methods to pursue in the construction of roads and ditches. He is also well posted on the new laws governing these matters and we believe that a public meeting and discussion of these questions would be productive of an immense amount of good

If this suggestion should find favor in the eyes of the superintendent of highways and various town officers we would suggest further that such a meeting should be called as early as possible.

THE COAL SACK IN THE SKY.

It Is Visible Because It Contains Nothing That Is Visible.

Immediately below the lower stars of the group which forms the Southern Cross there is a black patch in the sky, dark, sack shaped and mysterious. Scientifically accurate astronomers explain that it is not a patch, but rather something which becomes visible by reason of the anomaly that it contains nothing that is visible.

The lay mind, preferring bald reality to abstract truth, is somewhat startled to learn that an object is seen because there is nothing in it to see, but no one can dispute the fact. The coal sack is visible because it contains nothing that is visible.

In other words, it is a vast hole in the stellar system in which there is not even a pinch of stellar dust to shed a flicker of luminosity. It is typically and absolutely the quintessence of blackness.

Because it is so, and in contradiction of all preconceived notions, the human eye can see it without the aid of a telescope or other instrument.

Between the stars of the Milky Way there are many little holes in the stellar system—little by comparison, that is to say—but one must have telescopes and patience to find them. One need only cross the line to the southern hemisphere and locate the Southern Cross in order to see the coal sack.

With the wealth of legendary tale and fable woven around the northern stars by the highly gifted races gazing on them through the ages that are gone one is tempted to speculate what tales would not have been constructed around that fathomless mystery had it appeared north instead of south of the equator.

When it rouses the poetical impulse within the brain of aboriginal Australians, what might it not have done with the ancient Greeks or still more ancient Egyptians? But they were denied it. The aboriginal uses it as he uses most things, in a topsy turvy fashion. To him the world is a flat plain crowned with a dome shaped roof.

When a man dies he has to go up to the roof and slowly journey over it until he can clamber down to the flat again and squeeze through, once more a man. The coal sack is the hole he goes through to get on to the roof, and to get up to it is a very long climb.

The journey over the roof is also very long, and it is hard to squeeze through when he reaches the flat again. So long does it take that by the time a man has completed the journey not only his hair, but his skin, has grown white with age.

Wherefore the black fellow who has made the journey rejoins his tribe as a white fellow. Thus it was that when the white man first came to the land the aborigines regarded him as a long lost comrade.—Macmillan's Magazine.

LAWS AGAINST TOBACCO.

Early Legislation to Restrict the Use of the Weed.

One of the curiosities of early colonial legislation is the laws enacted against the planting and the use of tobacco. Evidently the magistrates and elders of those days regarded that "creature called tobacko" as one of the many emissaries of the devil, against whom it was their duty to wage constant warfare. The planting of it was forbidden except in small quantities to be used "for meere necessitie, for phisick, for perservaceon of the health, and that the same may be taken privately by ancient men."

All keepers of hotels and other public places were ordered not to "suffer any tobacco to be taken into their houses." If they disobeyed the order, they were required to pay a fine to the "victualler" and one also to "party that takes it." At little later the law was changed so that it was forbidden to "take tobacco in any wine or common victual house except in a private room there, so as the master of said house nor any guest there shall take offense thereat, which, if they do, the said person shall forbear upon pain of 2 shillings sixpence for every such offense."

No one was permitted to use tobacco "publiequely," not even in his own house, in the presence of strangers. It was against the law for two men to smoke together. In Windsor every user of tobacco was required to procure a physician's certificate before he was permitted to enjoy the obnoxious weed. All smoking was forbidden within two miles of a meeting house on the Sabbath day. Connecticut, as a great indulgence to travelers, allowed a man to smoke once during a journey of ten miles made not by trains, but afoot or by horse locomotion.—New York Press.

Ware Your Friend's Plants.

"If you have a friend going away for the summer," said the woman of experience, "don't keep a plant for her. The thing will probably die away, and you would consider yourself responsible. I worried through six weeks one summer tending a plant for a friend and then was invited to the country for a week end. I stayed two days in addition. Of course the plant was dead when I came back, and my outing was half spoiled by worrying over it. I bought a duplicate of it the day before my friend returned, and it cost me $2. Even then she said she thought it looked somewhat peaked."—Exchange.

Garnes-Malone Route Is Established.

The new star mail route between Garnes and Malone is now an established fact. This route has been held upfor some time by the postoffice department for some reason or another and the people in the territory to be served were beginning to feel pretty much disappointed over the prospects. Less than two weeks ago the matter was taken up by local parties with Congressman Steenerson and on Tuesday a letter received from that gentleman announced that the contract for carrying the mail on this route had been awarded to Ole Reiersgaard and and would be sent forward at once. It is safe to say that the people along this mail route will appreciate the prompt action of the big congressman in their behalf.

The Painter Man.

Mark Twain at a dinner at New York once talked about the troubles of housekeepers at the painting season. He said, "If you are a housekeeper, I don't need to tell you that when a painter has taken up the parlor carpet, removed the furniture from the dining room, leaned two ladders against the hall mantel and stacked a half dozen variegated cans of paint on the sideboard it means he is now ready to paint the outside shutters and the back fence."

The measure provides that 16-knot vessels plying between this country and South America, the Philippines, Australia, China and Japan shall receive four dollars a mile, which was the amount awarded only to vessels of 20 knots by the act of 1891.

More criticism of President Roosevelt was indulged in in the house of representatives, when he was roundly denounced by Mr. Hardwick of Georgia for failing to send to congress all information regarding corporations which had come into his possession. The president, however, found a ready and vigorous defender in Mr. Mann of Illinois, who asserted that the president had acted with the utmost good faith in sending to congress all the information that had come to him.

OUT OF A JOB—JUST HANGING 'ROUND.

ACTION IS URGED ON LEGISLATION

PRESIDENT SENDS IN SPECIAL MESSAGE DEALING WITH NEEDED LAWS.

Again Recommends that Congress Deal with Child Labor, Injunctions, Interstate Commerce and Anti-Trust Law Amendments.

Washington, Mar. 25.—President Roosevelt sent to congress Wednesday a special message urging action on certain pending legislation. He renewed his recommendation of prohibition of child labor, the passage of an employers' liability law and legislation concerning injunctions in labor disputes.

Rate Law Amendments.

Continuing, the message said:

I again call attention to the urgent need of amending the interstate commerce law and especially the anti-trust law along the lines indicated in my last message. The interstate commerce law should be amended so as to give railroads the right to make traffic agreements, subject to these agreements being approved by the interstate commerce commission and published in all of their details. The commission should also be given the power to make public and to pass upon the issuance of all securities hereafter issued by railroads doing an interstate commerce business.

A law should be passed providing in effect that when a federal court determines to place a common carrier or other public utility concern under the control of a receivership, the attorney general should have the right to nominate at least one of the receivers; or else in some other way the interests of the stockholders should be consulted, so that the management may not be wholly re-delivered to the man or men the failure of whose policy may have necessitated the creation of the receivership. Receiverships should be used, not to operate roads, but as speedily as possible to pay their debts and return them to the proper owners.

Would Amend Anti-Trust Law.

In addition to the reasons I have already urged on your attention, it has now become important that there should be an amendment of the anti-trust law, because of the uncertainty as to how this law affects combinations among labor men and farmers, if the combination has any tendency to restrict interstate commerce. All of these combinations, if and while existing for and engaged in the promotion of innocent and proper purposes, should be recognized as legal. As I have repeatedly pointed out, this anti-trust law was a most unwisely drawn statute.

The substantive part of the anti-trust law should remain as at present; that is, every contract in restraint of trade or commerce among the several states or with foreign nations should continue to be declared illegal; provided, however, that some proper governmental authority (such as the commissioner of corporations acting under the secretary of commerce and labor) be allowed to pass on any such contracts. Probably the best method of providing for this would be to enact that any contract subject to the prohibition contained in the antitrust law, into which it is desired to enter, might be filed with the bureau of corporations or other appropriate executive body. This would provide publicity. Within, say, 60 days of the filing—which period could be extended by order of the department whenever for any reason it did not give the department sufficient time for a thorough examination—the executive department having power might forbid the contract, which would then become subject to the provisions of the antitrust law, if at all in restraint of trade.

Labor Organizations.

It is important that we should encourage trade agreements between employer and employe where they are just and fair. A strike is a clumsy weapon for righting wrongs done to labor, and we should extend, so far as possible, the process of conciliation and arbitration for strikes. Moreover, violence, disorder and coercion, when committed in connection with strikes, should be as promptly and as sternly repressed as when committed in any other connection. But strikes themselves are, and should be recognized to be entirely legal. Combinations of workingmen have a peculiar reason for their existence. The very wealthy individual employer, and still more the very wealthy corporation, stand at an enormous advantage when compared to the individual workingman; and while there are many cases where it may not be necessary for laborers to from a union, in many other cases it is indispensable, for otherwise the thousands of small units, the thousands of individual workingmen, will be left helpless in their dealings with the big one unit, the big individual or corporate employer.

Objects to Boycott.

The right of employers to combine and contract with one another and with their employes should be explicitly recognized; and so should the right of the employes to combine and to contract with one another and with the employers, and to seek peaceably to persuade others to accept their views, and to strike for the purpose of peaceably obtaining from employers satisfactory terms for their labor. Nothing should be done to legalize either a blacklist or a boycott that would be illegal at common law, this being the type of boycott defined and condemned by the anthracite strike commission.

The question of financial legislation is now receiving such attention in both houses that we have a right to expect action before the close of the session. It is urgently necessary that there should be such action. Moreover, action should be taken to establish postal savings banks. These postal savings banks are imperatively needed for the benefit of the wageworkers and men of small means, and will be a valuable adjunct to our whole financial system.

Tariff Revision.

The time has come when we should prepare for a revision of the tariff. This should be, and indeed must be, preceded by careful investigation. It is peculiarly the province of the congress and not of the president, and indeed peculiarly the province of the house of representatives, to originate a tariff bill and to determine upon its terms; and this I fully realize. Yet it seems to me that before the close of this session provision should be made for collecting full material which will enable the congress elected next fall to act immediately after it comes into existence. This would necessitate some action by the congress at its present session, perhaps in the shape of directing the proper committee to gather the necessary information, both through the committee itself and through government agents who should report to the committee and should lay before it the facts.

I am of the opinion, however, that one change in the tariff could with advantage he made forthwith. Our forests need every protection and one method of protecting them would be to put upon the free list wood pulp, with a corresponding reduction upon paper made from wood pulp, when they come from any country that does not put an export duty upon them.

Waterways Commission.

Ample provision should be made for a permanent waterways commission, with whatever power is required to make it effective. The reasonable expectation of the people will not be met unless the congress provides at this section for the beginning and prosecution of the actual work of waterway improvement and control. The congress should recignize in fullest fashion the fact that the subject of the conservation of our natural resources, with which this commission deals, is literally vital for the future of the nation.

DEEP CRACKS FROM ECZEMA

Could Lay Slate-Pencil in One—Hands in Dreadful State—Permanent Cure in Cuticura.

"I had eczema on my hands for about seven years and during that time I had used several so-called remedies, together with physicians' and druggists' prescriptions. The disease was so bad on my hands that I could lay a slate-pencil in one of the cracks and a rule placed across the hand would not touch the pencil. I kept using remedy after remedy, and while some gave partial relief, none relieved as much as did the first box of Cuticura Ointment. I made a purchase of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and my hands were perfectly cured after two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and one cake of Cuticura Soap were used. W. H. Dean, Newark, Del., Mar. 28, 1907."

Transmitted Snake Bite.

An extraordinary case of snake poisoning is reported from a country hospital in Victoria, N. S. W. An old man was brought in in a comatose state and showing all the symptoms of having been bitten by a venomous snake. But on investigation it was found he had been bitten by a dog, which died almost immediately afterward from snake bite. Medical treatment was successful, and the man gradually recovered from the snake poison which the reptile had indirectly transmitted to him.

The past winter has been especially hard on cattle and horses. The scarcity and poor quality of the feed has left the horses in poor condition for spring work and the cows weakened at their most critical, the calving, time. In many localities the farmers are using a tonic which they prepare themselves with good results. An 8 oz. box of Powdered Germas Compound is obtained at the druggist's and mixed with 8 oz. Powdered Willow Charcoal, 8 oz. Powdered Ginger, 1 lb. Common Salt, 6 lbs. Ground Oil Cake. Two tablespoons of the mixture is fed to each cow or horse with regular feed twice a day.

Answered Truthfully.

During the late financial flurry a St. Louis business man was called to serve on a jury. "What is your name?" asked the attorney. "John Smith," the business man replied. "Your color?" the attorney continued. "White," said John Smith. "Your age?" "Forty-eight," quoth Mr. Smith." "Your business?" "Rotten," said John Smith.

DO YOU KNOW WHAT WHITE LEAD IS?

Its Chief Use and a Method of Determining Good from Bad Explained.

White Lead is the standard paint material all over the world. It is made by corroding metallic lead into a white powder, through exposing it to the fumes of weak acetic acid and carbonic acid gas; this powder is then ground and mixed with linseed oil, making a thick paste, in which form it is packed and sold for painting purposes. The painter thins it down to the proper consistency for application by the addition of more linseed oil.

The above refers, of course, to pure, genuine White Lead only. Adulterated and fake "White Lead," of which there are many brands on the market, is generally some sort of composition containing only a percentage of white lead; sometimes no White Lead at all; in such stuff, barytes or ground rock, chalk, and similar cheap substances are used to make bulk and imitate the appearance of pure White Lead.

There is, however, a positive test by which the purity or impurity of White Lead may be proved or exposed, before painting with it.

The blow-pipe flame will reduce pure white lead to metallic lead. If a supposed white lead be thus tested and it only partially reduces to lead, leaving a residue, it is proof that something else was there besides white lead.

The National Lead Company guarantee all White Lead sold in packages bearing its "Dutch Boy Painter" trademark to prove absolutely pure under this blow-pipe test, and that you may make the test yourself in your own home, they will send free upon request a blow-pipe and everything else necessary to make the test, together with a valuable booklet on paint. Address, National Lead Company, Woodbridge Building, New York.

KAISER TURNS DOWN HILL AS AMBASSADOR

PERSONAL DISLIKE BY EMPEROR IS GIVEN AS REASON FOR EXTRAORDINARY ACT.

PRINCE HENRY VISIT IS CAUSE OF BREACH

Nature of Untoward Incident Unknown—Appointee to Have Taken Place Vacated by Charlemagne Tower, Who Resigned.

Washington, Mar. 26.—The German government has declined to receive Dr. David Jayne Hill in the capacity of American ambassador to succeed Charlemagne Tower, whose resignation has been accepted to take effect upon the qualification of of his successor. Dr. Hill is at present American minister to The Hague and was formerly first assastant secretary of state under the administration of Secretary Hay.

Dr. David Jayne Hill.

Kaiser Dislikes Hill.

The objection to Dr. Hill is one purely personal to Emperor William, who has simply caused it to be made known that the American diplomatist is persona non grata to him. The reason for the emperor's objection is connected with the visit to America several years ago of his brother, Prince Henry, the ranking admiral of the German navy. Dr. Hill at that time was first assistant secretary of state and necessarily was brought into official contact with the distinguished foreign visitors. Just what he did or did not do to give offense is not known here.

Once Consented to Him.

A perplexing feature of the case is presented by the fact that last November the German government let it be known that Dr. Hill would be cordially received as American ambassador to Berlin. At that time Ambassador Tower, after the president had sought in vain to dissuade him from such a course, reached the decision that proper consideration for his own private business interests and the welfare of his children, whose education he deemed it necessary to perfect in America, obliged him to insist upon the acceptance of his resignation.

Reasons for His Selection.

Dr. Hill was selected to fill this important vacancy for two reasons: First, because of his high rank in the world of literature and diplomacy, and, second, because his promotion would be in execution of Secretary Root's cherished plan for the application of civil service principles in the diplomatic service. For two years preceding Dr. Hill had been an American minister, first accredited to Switzerland and then to The Hague. He was engaged in monumental literary work, covering the entire history of the world's diplomacy, and those two posts afforded exceptional advantages for the procurement of the great mass of material needed.

Decision a Great Surprise.

As that task neared completion Dr. Hill found himself willing to abandon the field for the higher diplomatic post of Berlin and, as already stated, the German foreign office cordially responded to the usual cautious overtures from the state department here as to his availability for appointment as ambassador. So Wednesday's decision of the German emperor has come as a complete surprise to official Washington. It is nevertheless final as far as Dr. Hill is concerned, for the etiquette that governs international relations does not permit of any question of the right of a sovereign to interpose an objection to the reception of any official who comes to his post in the extraordinary and personal character of ambassador.

Rumor Quickly Confirmed.

Notice of the action of the German government in Dr. Hill's case came to the state department quite unofficially at first Wednesday, there being nothing in the shape of a formal notification, but simply an intimation of what was to follow. Secretary Root was amazed, because his own information was that not only the German foreign office, but Emperor William himself, had formally signified a willingness to receive Dr. Hill when his name was suggested last fall. Therefore, the first conclusion reached at the state department was that somewhere a mistake had been made. Secretary Root immediately communicated by telephone with Baron Speck von Sternburg.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

Plans for Duluth.

New York—In connection with the proposed Duluth steel plant of the United States steel corporation, the report of the corporation for the year ending Dec. 31 last says:

"There has been purchased a site containing 1,580 acres, of which 300 acres are now submerged, ten miles from the center of the city of Duluth, on which is proposed to construct a moderate sized iron and steel plant. The tract fronts on the St. Louis river, which is navigable for large lake steamers, and is located on the line of the Northern Pacific railway.

"It is expected, however, that there will be constructed in connection with the steel plant a belt railway, extending northwardly therefrom to a connection with the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railway to enable the prompt and economical delivery of ore to the plant from the Minnesota ore ranges; also eastwardly from the steel plant across the St. Louis river into Superior, Wis., where connections will be made with five trunk lines of railways reaching the head of Lake Superior from the south and west.

Find Home on Fire.

Crookston—Mrs. Peter Huff and son, Louis, a boy fifteen years old, had a narrow escape from death by fire. The dwelling is situated about a block from the business portion of the city and two blocks from the fire department. The young boy was awakened during the night and smelled smoke. He descended the stairs and investigated its origin. He found the entire lower floor of the dwelling a mass of flames, and ran hastily back up the stairs after his mother.

They again returned to the head of the stairs to escape from the house, but were driven back by the flaming of the wall paper which had detached itself from the wall. The mother, an old lady, became frantic and ran wildly back into the upper rooms. However, the young boy discovered that the paper at last consumed itself, and, calling his mother, they ran down over the burning embers and made their escape.

Caribou.

Greenbush—Although it has been supposed for several years that caribou were no longer to be found in Minnesota, except a stray animal now and then, it is now reported that there is a herd of fifty to sixty in the region northeast of the north arm of Red Lake in Beltrami county. Reports have also been received by Carlos Avery, executive agent of the state game and fish commission, that the Indians on the Red Lake Indian reservation have been killing some of these caribou during the winter, and the matter will be taken up with the interior department in an effort to restrain the Indians from killing off this last herd.

Want Recount.

Owatonna—A petition has been filed with S. C. Goff, Jr., clerk of court, for a recount of the license vote at the election of March 10. The formal petition is brought by W. P. Canfield vs. The City of Owatonna, and is signed by a large number of prominent business men of the town. It is the desire to find out if there was crooked work in the throwing out of no license votes at the election.

Three years ago license won by 13 votes. For the next two years the saloon was voted in by over 100 majority. This year the vote was down to 8 for license.

Mountain Lion Seen.

Tower, Minn.—B. C. Everett was here from the dam and brought with him the startling news that a large mountain lion had been seen several times in the vicinity of the Alger-Smith camps. Mr. Everett states that on several occasions he and others have seen and examined the tracks, which the huge animal had left in the fresh snow but a few hours before, and that they measured five and one-half by six inches.

NEWS NOTES.

Duluth—Interior department will be asked to interfere in reported killing of surviving herd of caribou by the Indians in Minnesota.

WESTERN CANADA CROPS CANNOT BE CHECKED.

OATS YIELDED 90 BUSHELS TO THE ACRE.

The following letter written the Dominion Government Commissioner of Emigration speaks for itself. It proves the story of the Agents of the Government that on the free homesteads offered by the Government it is possible to become comfortably well off in a few years:

Regina, Sask., 23rd Nov., 1907.
Commissioner of Immigration,
Winnipeg.
Dear Sir:

It is with pleasure that I reply to your request. Some years ago I took up a homestead for myself and also one for my son. The half section which we own is situated between Rouleau and Drinkwater, adjoining the Moose Jaw creek, is a low level and heavy land. We put in 70 acres of wheat in stubble, which went 20 bushels to the acre, and 30 acres of summer fallow, which went 25 bushels to the acre. All the wheat we harvested this year is No. 1 hard. That means the best wheat that can be raised on the earth. We did not sell any wheat yet as we intend to keep one part for our own seed, and sell the other part to people who want first-class seed, for there is no doubt if you sow good wheat you will harvest good wheat. We also threshed 9,000 bushels of first-class oats out of 160 acres. 80 acres has been fall plowing which yielded 90 bushels per acre, and 80 acres stubble, which went 30 bushels to the acre. These oats are the best kind that can be raised. We have shipped three car loads of them, and got 53 cents per bushel clear. All our grain was cut in the last week of the month of August before any frost could touch it.

Notwithstanding the fact that we have had a late spring, and that the weather conditions this year were very adverse and unfavorable, we will make more money out of our crop this year than last.

For myself I feel compelled to say that Western Canada crops cannot be checked, even by unusual conditions.

I am, dear sir,
Yours truly,
(Signed) A. Kaltenbrunner.

Origin of the Elevator.

The elevator originated in Central Europe. The earliest mention of the elevator is made in a letter of Napoleon I. addressed to his wife, Archduchess Maria Louise. He writes to her that when in Schoenbrunn, then the summer residence of the Austrian emperor, near Vienna, he used the "chaise volante" (flying chair) in that castle which had been constructed for Empress Maria Theresa. It consisted of a small, square room, sumptuously furnished with hangings of red silk and suspended by strong ropes with counter weights, so that it could be pulled up or let down with great ease in a shaft built for the purpose about 1760.

Asserted His Rights.

John Hunter was a negro given to chastising his wife.

"You, John," said a neighbor one day, "Susanna say, ef you don't quit beatin' her she gwine to de Freedman bureau!"

"She do, do she?" he replied, with scorn. "Now, lemme tell yer, wunst an' fer all! Susanna am my wife! An' so long as she go 'bout her bizness I gwine leff her 'lone. But w'en she git ter cuttin' up I gwine ter beat her, an ther' ain't no bureau nor no sidebode nor no chist of drors what kin hol' me back!"

A New Excuse.

"I suppose your husband is proud to contribute his share toward the support of our beautiful library?"

"Yes," answered the woman with the slightly acid expression; "only John was none too industrious in the first place and now he's tempted to put in most of his time reading novels and trying to get his money's worth."
—Washington Star.

HAPPY OLD AGE

Most Likely to Follow Proper Eating.

As old age advances, we require less food to replace waste, and food that will not overtax the digestive organs, while supplying true nourishment.

Such an ideal food is found in Grape-Nuts, made of whole wheat and barley by long baking and action of diastase in the barley which changes the starch into sugar.

The phosphates also, placed up under the bran-coat of the wheat, are included in Grape-Nuts, but left out of white flour. They are necessary to the building of brain and nerve cells.

"I have used Grape-Nuts," writes an Iowa man, "for 8 years and feel as good and am stronger than I was ten years ago. I am over 74 years old, and attend to my business every day.

"Among my customers I meet a man every day who is 92 years old and attributes his good health to the use of Grape-Nuts and Postum which he has used for the last 5 years. He mixes Grape-Nuts with Postum and says they go fine together.

"For many years before I began to eat Grape-Nuts, I could not say that I enjoyed life or knew what it was to be able to say 'I am well.' I suffered greatly with constipation, now my habits are as regular as ever in my life.

"Whenever I make extra effort I depend on Grape-Nuts food and it just fills the bill. I can think and write a great deal easier."

"There's a Reason." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

OFFICIAL PAPER of RED LAKE COUNTY

Subscription price, $1.50 per year
If paid in advance, $1.00.

Entered at the Post-office in Plummer, Minn. as Second Class Mail Matter.

County politics are beginning to warm up a little and the indications are that there will no scarcity of candidates for the various offices.

President Roosevelt has sent another lively message to congress urging that august but inert body to wake up and do something. Practically nothing has been done at this session of congress and the president, and the people are losing patience. A review of the message will be found elsewhere in this paper.

The supreme court of the United States has handed down its decision in the appeal taken by attorney general Young from the ruling of Judge Lochren in the United States Circuit court. It will be remembered that Judge Lochren issued an injunction restraining the Attorney General from prosecuting certain railroad rates cases in the Hennepin county District court and, when Mr. Young proceeded with his action under the state law a fine of $100 was imposed by Judge Lochren for contempt of court. This was carried to the Supreme court and their decision just rendered is against Attorney General Young. This decision goes further and holds that the Minnesota laws for the regulation of railroads are invalid and unconstitutional and says practically the same thing regarding similar laws passed by other states. It is held that railroad rates can be regulated by the interstate commerce commission and come under the jurisdiction of the federal courts and not state courts. Clearly, if there is to be any railroad regulations, it is up to Congress to give us the necessary laws.

MACBETH.

A Famous Actor's Views on the Sleepwalking Scene.

The first time I read this tragedy I expected to see the sleepwalking scene played by Macbeth instead of his wife. This scene occurs at the beginning of the fifth act, and not until the gentlewoman and the doctor converse together are we aware of the change in Lady Macbeth's character and of the illness that has made her weak. A woman so brutal in her conception and so resolute in her projects—how could she at once lose steadfastness, she who was capable of saying:

> I would, while it was smiling in my face,
> Have plucked my nipple from his boneless gums
> And dashed the brains out.

Such a woman is capable of committing any crime without losing her impassiveness. I should have preferred not to see her, even in sleep, wash her hands of the murder of Duncan. Her wicked personality would have appeared still greater.

I do not believe that Shakespeare meant the sleepwalking scene for Lady Macbeth. Have you not noticed how precise the famous writer was in drawing his characters? He always tried to keep them in the same light from beginning to end. To my mind it seems impossible that Lady Macbeth should collapse like that. Instead it would be more natural in Macbeth. I found this scene so unnatural that I cut it out in my version.

The explanation may be something like this: In Shakespeare's day there were no women players. Perhaps some of the actors were not satisfied with the length of their respective parts. Shakespeare, to keep the peace, may have shortened Macbeth's speeches and given them to somebody else.

The tragedy of Macbeth is a sublime display of tragic passion, a pathetic picture of fate and evil conquering good. There is no moral, but without doubt this play may be regarded as the greatest work of dramatic literature.—Tommaso Salvini in Putnam's Monthly.

ENGLISH GHOST STORY.

A Vision That Saved a Life on the Yorkshire Dales.

It is not often that we hear of a ghost saving a man's life. There is, however, an instance, and it seems to be tolerably well authenticated, and materialists will hardly know how to account for it. Here is the story. It is of the Yorkshire dales and of a good many years ago. A clergyman whose duty lay in that wild country, where a strong race of men and women lived principally on bacon and oatcake and knew not save rarely butcher's meat, used to ride or walk to visit the people. He had been raising a subscription in a time of scarcity and had to be out late at night. One evening on his outward journey he suddenly became aware of a figure moving besidehim, and in the gloaming he recognized his brother, who had died some time before. He was too awestruck for words, and after keeping by his side for some distance over the lonely moor the figure disappeared. He noted the time and the vision, but nothing occurred to throw any light upon it. However, some years after he had taken the duty at a jail in another part of the country one of the prisoners lying under sentence desired to make a confession. After telling him of a lot of crimes he said: "I wor very near once taking your life, sir. It was in that bad year, and I heerd as how you went carrying money about in those lonesome dales. I hid behind the big bowlders of the brown moor. I saw you coming up and waited till you should be near enough, but that night you were not alone." This is a startling tale and the stronger because the vision or whatever it was was seen by two people. The anecdote occurs in an article twenty years ago in Macmillan's Magazine by Lady Verney.

The Case Altered.

THOUGHT HIM A SPY.

An English Official's Narrow Escape In France In 1870.

The thrilling adventure which befell Captain Haworth, one of Queen Victoria's messengers, vividly illustrates the perils of the diplomatic service when a member of that corps is traversing a country where the storm and stress of war is raging.

It was during the Franco-German war, and Captain Haworth was on his way home charged with dispatches from the English ambassador, then at Tours. He got as far as the town of Le Mans, when something suggested to the excited townsfolk the idea that he was a Prussian spy.

He was arrested, carried before the juge de paix and required to give an account of himself. He explained that he was in the service of the British government and produced his credentials. He was then asked to show the contents of the little bag which, as he affirmed, contained his official dispatches. This he absolutely refused to do, though he showed them the government label and seal.

His refusal was thought suspicious, and he was plainly told that unless he could produce some more satisfactory evidence he must be prepared to die. The unlucky messenger was actually led away for execution and was saved only by some little glimmering of common sense in the captain of the guard he was committed to.

This officer remonstrated with his prisoner on the folly of refusing to satisfy the court by submitting his papers to their inspection. Captain Haworth told him that their bullets should go through that bag and his breast at the same time and that then they would have to reckon with the British government. The officer seemed to be impressed and sent him back to the authorities. After further parley the Englishman was ordered to clear out of the town with all speed, an order which he did his best to comply with.

Why He Never Married.

A matinee girl from Chicago looked up from a long and painful study of one of Clyde Fitch's autographed sentiments into that author's face.

"Mr. Fitch," she began mournfully, "I know why you have not married."

"Tell me. I would like to know."

"Certainly. It must have happened this way: You wrote a proposal of marriage to a beautiful leading woman in one of your companies. You should have proposed in person. But you wrote. She couldn't read your writing and thought it was a dismissal from the company. She drowned herself, and you are still unmarried."

The dramatic author thoughtfully rolled a cigarette.

"It is as good a reason as I know," he responded.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

From now on cream will be received at the Plummer creamery three times a week. Every patron should make a note of the change and do their best to bring their cream regularly and in the best possible condition. It is decidedly unfair to some of the patrons to have the grade and price of the butter cut down by reason of a few bringing in cream of an inferior grade.

Andrew Nelson, representing the Continental Bridge Co., has been here for several days making preliminary preparations for the work of putting up the new steel bridge across the Clearwater river, between Garnes and Mayfield townships. ## Notice to Creamery Patron.

During the past few days there has been considerable old and badly flavored cream received at the Plummer creamery and the inevitable result of this poor cream being received and churned is a falling off in the quality of the butter and a lower price for it. In order that this fault may be overcome the buttermaker has been instructed to keep a record of each patron's cream and report to the directors at their meeting to be held on the 18th inst. Where it appears that proper care is not taken of his cream by the patron the buttermaker will be instructed to reject the cream. It is decidedly unfair to the carful patrons to have the price of their butterfat cut down because of the carelessness of the few in keeping their cream sweet and bringing it to the creamery while it is fresh. We suggest that every patron bring in his cream as quickly as possible: do not keep it over for a week or more. From now on the cream should be delivered three times a week and particular care should be taken to keep the separators and the cream cans perfectly sweet and clean. This is best done by giving them a thorough scalding and scrubbing immediately after being used. When the cream is separated the separator should be taken apart and thoroughy scalded and cleaned. The same should be immediately cleaned and scalded as soon as they are taken home after delivering the cream. Attend to these details and bring your cream three times a week to the creamery.

This is a fair warning to all patrons, ourselves included, as the buttermaker will be obliged to reject the poor cream in the future. The board of directors will see to it that there is no favoritism shown and the patron bringing in cream, no matter who he may be, will be forced to take it home again if it is not in good condition.

P. S. MEECHILL,
OLAF TANDE.

A Gracious Negative.

"The other day I got the politest turndown," said a bond salesman, "that ever happened. I had been talking from 11 o'clock till almost noon to a man I'd known at college, trying to interest him in $10,000 of what I considered very exceptional bonds. Finally he looked at his watch.

"'Bob,' he said, 'it's lunchtime.'

"'That's so,' I answered.

"'Bob,' he went on, 'if I buy those bonds will you take me out to lunch?'

"'Of course,' I said. 'Why, sure.'

"'Well, Bob,' he concluded, 'you'd better have lunch with me this noon.'" —New York Sun.

Solitude Cures Crying.

"The best way to cure yourself of crying is to live alone," said the woman. "I used to cry an awful lot when I was married, but I hardly ever do now. It's the saddest thing in the world to hear yourself crying all alone in your flat, and what's the use anyway if there is nobody around to say 'There, there!'"—New York Press.

Clearwater Dam Was Dynamited.

On Tuesday night of last week some parties living in the neighborhood of the Clearwater dam, near Clearwater Lake, undertook to destroy the dam by exploding a ten pound charge of dynamite. The explosive was hung over the railing over the dam but evidently was not lowered enough to reach the water. By means of a long fuse the charge exploded and the entire top structure of the dam was blown to pieces. Bob Nevins, the man in charge of the dam, and who lives close by, was rather rudely awakened as the force of the explosion upset things generally in the house and threw him out of bed; all the windows in his house were smashed and the building otherwise injured.

An investigation was made promptly and several parties have been arrested, among them being the mail carrier who is charged with bringing in the dynamite for the purpose. Those arrested are to be given an early hearing and it is said that there is good evidence against several of them.

Later reports state that the dam has been plugged and will soon be put in good condition again. The volume of water which escaped threatened to destroy the state bridge but it is now thought that there is no danger. All the logs and poles in the big drive of the S. P. K. Lumber, Cedar & Tie Co. are reported safe and ready to be started for Plummer.

George Thayer and John Samuelson were arraigned before Justice Loen at Bagley on Tuesday on a charge of felony for blowing up the dam and the evidence against Thayer was strong enough for the justice to bind him over to the grand jury. He gave the required bond and Samuelson was discharged from custody.

Logs are Banked Ready for Plummer Mill.

A. T. Swanson, the well known cook, arrived here on Monday night from Bagley near where he has been working in one of the big logging camps all winter. He reports that the big cedar drive for the Donald Land & Lumber Co., is all banked and ready for floating down the Clearwater river to Plummer, where they will be marketed the same as last year. He also says that saw logs amounting to about a million and a quarter feet are banked there and ready to be brought down with the cedar drive to be sawed in the new sawmill which will be erected here in Plummer this year. The logging season has been unusually poor, consequently the cut of logs for this mill is very small this year but it is expected that a much larger amount will be cut next winter.

The company which is to put in the saw mill here will be known as the "S. P. K. Co" and the promoters have the best kind of financial backing. Incidentally, when this mill is started there may be some other important business surprises in this vicinity.

We want all your butter and eggs and will pay you more than the highest market price for them. Clearwater Mercantile Co.

Sense of Smell.

The olfactory nerves are wonderfully sensitive. Much has yet to be investigated with regard to the differentiation of the points in these nerves so that they may discriminate with such apparently miraculous accuracy, yet even the results in the scent of dogs show how wonderfully fine is their discriminating power. Our sense of smell, unless in the trained chemist, is not even so acute as that of the semi savage. Much have we gained by civilization, but not without some loss to our bodily energies and senses. Man's recuperative power after an injury is said frequently to be in inverse ratio to his social advancement. Similarly he seems to become less acute and delicate in the sense of smell as he fares better and lives more comfortably.—St Louis Republic.

Biggest of All Animals.

The sulphur bottom—or blue whale, as it is better called by the Norwegians—is not only the largest living animal but the largest that has ever lived, reaching a length of eighty feet or very rarely a little more. Whales grow much larger than this in books and newspapers, but in actual life not one in a dozen even of this species attains a length of eighty feet. The popular idea of a whale is that it is a clumsy animal, but, as shown by models, it has the graceful lines of a yacht. The total weight of a whale is about sixty tons, and unusually large and fat individuals must reach at least sixty-five tons. The largest animal of the past so far discovered is the great Dinosaur brontosaurus, and this big reptile weighed about thirty-eight tons.—Museum News.

LIGHTHOUSE KEEPERS

Weird Vigils of the Men In the French Service.

TOIL THAT BREEDS MADNESS.

The Only Wonder Is That Any of These Lonely Workers Escape Insanity—Pitiful Plight of the Isolated Keeper at Four on Finisterre.

A French writer, telling of the life of the lighthouse keepers along the coast of Brittany, thinks it strange that any of them escape insanity.

The system of relief that prevails in this country has no equivalent in the French service, and, with short intervals, months apart, a French lighthouse keeper may spend forty years of his life tending the lamps in one station, with a single companion, and that station may be on a rock out in the channel or the bay of Biscay, which boats can approach only in fine weather.

As a matter of fact, the men often do become insane or at least develop monomania. Sometimes it takes the form of hatred of each other.

In one case, at Terennec, one of two men was found by a party who came off from the shore in response to signals lying dead in his bed with a long keen bladed knife through his heart.

His companion's story was that he had committed suicide after a long period of melancholia. There was no proof to the contrary, but after examining the wound the authorities doubted the truth of the story.

On another occasion, where father and son tended an isolated beacon together, the young man was seized with an attack of acute mania. When the time came to light up he planted himself in front of the stairway to the lantern and refused to allow his father to ascend.

The old man attacked his son and, finding he could subdue him in no other way, so that the lights on which so many lives depended might be kindled, strangled him to death. The next day he signaled to the shore for help and gave himself up to the police, telling what he had done.

Sickness and death are no strangers in the lighthouses. There is ninety-nine times out of a hundred no chance of medical aid, and the well man prescribes from the medicine chest for the sick one as best he can. He also does double duty until his partner recovers or relief comes.

There are not infrequent cases when the survivor has to sew up his dead comrade in a hammock and launch his weighted body from the rocks into the sea. Then come long nights of lonely watching.

In winter time the lamps must be tended and the clockwork kept going for fourteen to fifteen hours. The lantern is unheated except for the glow of the lamps up in its ceiling, and the government allows the watcher no chair lest he fall asleep.

It is no wonder that weird fancies come to the men. They hear voices calling from the sea and see drowned men and women looking up at them from the breakers. One of their horrors is of the birds that beat against the windows of the lantern at night, attracted by the glare.

Just as is the case with American lighthouses, the feathered armies that migrate at night beat against the walls and balconies of the beacons with their wings and dash against the panes of the lantern, sometimes breaking the glass with their beaks. As their eyes shine in the glare they seem to express anger or bloodthirstiness to the men within.

One of the most pitiful stories of lighthouse life is told of the keeper at Four en Finisterre, who kept all alone a station on an isolated rock a couple of miles out from the shore, but so surf beaten that only once a month or so was a boat sent out to it with supplies.

The cabin in which the keeper made his home was on the shore opposite his lighthouse, and the recreation he most enjoyed was watching it through his telescope. He could see the people go in and out and the children playing in front of it.

One day he saw something fluttering from the door jamb. He was puzzled. Then it flashed on him that it was crape and that some one had died in the house.

Was it his mother, he wondered, or his wife or one of his brothers? He counted the children later in the day, and they were all right.

The wind blew, and the water raged. No boat could come near him, and he watched the crowd of sympathizing friends come and go. Then he saw the funeral.

He recognized the cure at the head of the procession by his white surplice and the altar boys walking beside him. Then came the coffin, carried by six men.

As the mourners walked after it he strained and strained his eyes trying to identify each and thus determine the missing one. But in vain. All walked with bowed head. The women's faces were buried in their handkerchiefs; the men held their hats before theirs. He could make out nothing characteristic.

The men who eight days later risked their lives to row out to him and break the news of his wife's death found him a physical and mental wreck from sleepless anxiety. But he had kept the light burning faithfully all the time.

The French lighthouse keepers receive from 700 to [illegible] $140 to $190. [illegible] out they retire on [illegible] a month.—Chicago [illegible]

Diamond Versus Paste.

"It's curious how little vanities keep some men keyed up to a point where they are on good terms with themselves," was the philosophic comment of a private detective who is a figure in the daily life of the Wall street district.

"What I mean is this, for example: It's my business to know a good many men, high and low, down here. Now, you can take it from me that four out of five of those you see dashing along the street or in and out of big buildings with worried expressions or faces which suggest that their owners are bearers of stupendous business cares and responsibilities are really underlings whose work is routine and who would be staggered if they had to risk personally a thousand dollars, while the real burden bearers more often than not appear with unruffled brow and without undue precipitation. It's a part of the game.

OHIO MAN SUCCEEDS MITCHELL AS PRESIDENT OF TOILERS' ORGANIZATION.

250,000 ARE IDLE; SAY PEACE IS NEAR

Belief Is Expressed That Agreement to Work, Pending a Settlement, Will Be Reached in Conferences of Most of Districts Involved.

Indianapolis, Ind., Apr. 2.—At the international headquarters of the United Mine Workers of America Wednesday Vice-President Thomas L. Lewis of Ohio succeeded John Mitchell of Spring Valley, Ill., as president of the organization; W. D. Ryan of Illinois succeeded Mr. Lewis as vice-president, and J. P. Waite of Iowa succeeded Congressman W. B. Wilson of the central Pennsylvania district as secretary-treasurer. They busied themselves handling the strike of 250,000 bituminous coal miners, who are idle on account of the failure of the United Mine Workers of America and the coal operators to agree upon a wage scale.

May Be of Short Duration.

District meetings are being held in an effort to reach an agreement in the different states and it is believed the strike will be of short duration.

Central Pennsylvania and Indiana mines are in operation, as an agreement has been reached in the former district, and in this state miners and operators have agreed to continue work pending a settlement which is being negotiated by joint meetings at Terre Haute.

All the miners of western Pennsylvania, Ohio, the trans-Mississippi and outlying districts have quit work.

Ohio Industry Dormant.

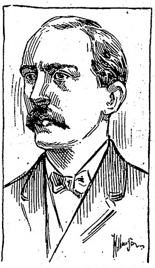
Columbus, O., Apr. 2.—The vast soft coal industry throughout Ohio was idle Wednesday as the result of the failure of the miners and operators to reach an agreement on the wage scale. Careful estimates from all the mining centers in the state Wednesday show that nearly 465 mines throughout the state are idle and that about 50,000 people employed in the mines as miners, drivers and in other capacities did not go to work Wednesday and will remain out until the questions before the operators and miners are settled. It is said here that the operators are not averse to having the mines idle for some time as they have thousands of tons of coal at the docks on the lakes which the mild winter prevented them selling, and this is to be disposed of before they will agree to any scale or other question before the joint conventions for settlement. The general belief among the miners' representatives here is that the lay-off will not last long, but that some sort of a compromise agreement will be reached within a few weeks.



Thomas L. Lewis.

Celebrate in Hour of Strike.

Des Moines, Ia., Apr. 2.—Every coal mine in Iowa was closed Wednesday. Fifteen thousand men were idle. Miners Wednesday celebrated the tenth anniversary of the eight-hour law. They held a meeting at the Trades' Assembly hall Wednesday.

Look for Early Peace.

Kansas City, Mo., Apr. 2.—The 35,000 coal miners in Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, who enjoyed a holiday Wednesday, will return to work pending a settlement of the difficulties with the officials of the Southwestern Interstate Coal Operators' association. The operators' and miners' convention met separately Wednesday, each to take steps looking to an early conference. James Elliott, president of the operators' association, met with the other officials of that association. The operators would not discuss their plans in advance, but said that in all probability a committee from the commission would be appointed to meet with the mine workers' conference when the subject of a conference to settle upon a new contract would be taken up.

Illinois Mines Stay Closed.

Springfield, Ill., Apr. 2.—All the coal mines in Illinois were closed Wednesday while the miners celebrated the anniversary of the eight-hour day law going into effect. They will remain closed until an agreement between the operators and miners is reached, the operators having voted to suspend until the scale is signed.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

Heavy Demand.

Fish Hatchery.—If applications for fish fry continue to come in at the present rate, the state will have to provide more fish hatcheries is the opinion of S. F. Fullerton, superintendent of fisheries of the state. He says that for some time they have been receiving applications at the rate of fifty a day and there will be a demand for much more than the state can supply even if the hatcheries are worked to their limit. The limit for pike fry at present is 300,000,000.

Four crews will start soon for the purpose of gathering spawn. The largest catch is expected at Tower. They have for many years attempted to catch spawn there, but the operations of the lumber compaines have interfered and the catch has been very small. But the recent decision of the district court gives the fish commission free use of the river during the spawning season and they will try this year to make the best use of their opportunity.

Another crew will be sent to Fond du Lac on the St. Louis river, another to Gull Lake and a fourth to Pine River.

Reopen Red River Lands.

Washington.—Representative Steenerson has secured a favorable report on his bill to restore to entry and settlement a large tract of ceded Red Lake land which was withdrawn two years ago pending investigation, with a view to the establishment of drainage works thereon. The investigation was made, and it was found that reclaimation by drainage would cost more than $1,000,000, which congress was not disposed to provide at this time, even though the appropriation is made reimbursable from the sale of reclaimed land.

There has been a demand from that section for the reopening of this land, some of which can be cultivated without drainage, and the bill was introduced in response to that demand.

It provides for payment in accordance with the terms of the Red Lake treaty, with the addition of 3 cents an acre, to cover the cost of the drainage survey.

The Shiloh Shaft.

St. Paul.—Adjt. Gen. Fred B. Wood has completed arrangements for the trip of Governor Johnson and official staff to Shiloh, Tenn., where the governor will deliver an address at the unveiling of a monument to the Minnesota soldiers who participated in the battle of Shiloh. There will be forty-four and possibly fifty in the party, which will leave St. Paul on April 7 and arrive at Shiloh the morning of April 10, when the ceremonies will be held.

Owing to the lack of railroad facilities, the party will travel 272 miles by boat on the Tennessee river. On the return trip they will spend a day at the Mamouth cave in Kentucky and spend one day in Louisville and one in Chicago.

Penalty Clause Only.

St. Paul.—According to the statement of one of the leading railway lawyers of the city, it is now the general opinion of the railroad attorneys that the decision of the United States supreme court invalidates only the penalty clause of the passenger and commodity laws. Ever since the announcement of the decision that question has been unsettled and upon it hinged whether roads might not get together and raise passenger fares above the 2-cent rate. Since it is believed by legal departments that only the penalty clause is held unconstitutional, it is improbable that there will be any move made even to consider raising passenger fares.

GOV. JOHNSON IS A CANDIDATE

HE IS A RECEPTIVE CANDIDATE BUT NOT AN URGENT AGGRESSIVE ONE.

He Plainly Announces that He Would Accept the Nomination only for the Betterment and at the Call of the Democratic Party.

St. Paul, March 30.—John A. Johnson, governor of Minnesota, will accept the Democratic nomination for president if it is offered, but he is not an "open" candidate. That, officially, formally, is his position. He has spoken.

Gov. Johnson heard that he has been mentioned as a presidential candidate, and after considering the matter he stated exactly where he stands. There will be no Mayo business about this, for the governor takes his bold stand in a letter to Swan J. Turnblad, editor of the Daily Posten, a Scandinavian newspaper in Minneapolis.

Mr. Turnblad apparently had an idea that Frank A. Day, chairman of the Democratic state central committee and the governor's private secretary, was fooling when he fought throught the Democrate state central committee the now famous 68 to 23 resolution asking the Minnesota Democratic convention to send a Johnson delegation to the national convention at Denver. So Mr. Turnblad decided to ask the governor himself about it.

The announcement places Governor Johnson before the country in a dignified candidacy for the leadership of his party, not, as he expresses it, for the purpose of defeating Mr. Bryan or anyone else, but an acknowledgment of the fact that the executive of Minnesota has responded to the favorable mention he has received from all parts of the country. It means that the Minnesota governor will figure in the Democratic convention at Denver, even if he has nothing more than the support of Minnesota which will undoubtedly be his, and that his name will furnish the rallying point for Democrats who, whether they favor William Jennings Bryan, are convinced that to nominate the man from Lincoln would be to immolate the party upon a third alter of certain defeat.

Gov. Johnson says,

"I do not believe that any American citizen should be an active open candidate for the nomination to the presidency. Any American would appreciate the high honor which could come to him in being selected as standard bearer of his party. While I recognize that the press has had much to say about me in connection with this high office I have hitherto avoided any public or private expression regarding my position. Matters have progressed so far however that I should at least say, in answer to your interrogation, that if the Democratic party of the nation believed me to be more available than any other man and felt that by my nomination I could contribute any service to the party and to the nation I should be happy to be the recipient of the high honor which it would thus confer."

Asked concerning the announcement, Governor Johnson stated that his announcement meant just what it said. That he would not seek the nomination, that he would do nothing himself to further his candidacy and that he would have no regular organization.

"Who will manage your campaign?" was the direct question put to him.

The governor picked up a copy of his letter and referred to it. "Let me read this to you," he explained. "You will note that I say I will have no organization and will make no active campaign. I mean just exactly what I say."

"But you will certainly have some kind of an organization, some sort of a rallying point for your supporters?"

"Well," continued the govenor, "my candidacy so far has been the work of my friends. I suppose they will continue to do so. Some sort of room will be engaged in Chicago, but no elaborate headquaters will be opened. What work is done will probably be accomplished and directed by Fred B. Lynch of St. Paul and by Frank Day.

The Johnson presidential movement started when Henry Watterson speaking for the large body of national Democrats who look upon the name of Bryan as spelling inevitable defeat anounced he had discovered a "Dark Horse."

The name was kept in abeyance for some time and then Watterson announced that the man he had in in mind was "Johnson of Minnesota."

Mr. Day will undoubtedly look after the governor's interest in the state while Fred B. Lynch will probably have charge of the Johnson headquarters in Chicago and look after the national end.

Vengeance is Boomerang.

Worthington, Minn., March 27.—Because they believed they had been wronged by neighbors, August W. Nelson and Ben Berning, each stole a team of horses and forged two checks to get even. Both are in jail.

Nelson, when arrested, explained that last year he worked for Foster Moore, but that Moore did not pay him all he thought he had coming so last Sunday he took the horses, harness and buggy from Moore's barn and started to Duluth to sell them. He was arrested at Storden.

The Evolution of Household Remedies.

The modern patent medicine business is the natural outgrowth of the old-time household remedies.

In the early history of this country, EVERY FAMILY HAD ITS HOME-MADE MEDICINES. Herb teas, bitters, laxatives and tonics, were to be found in almost every house, compounded by the housewife, sometimes assisted by the apothecary or the family doctor. Such remedies as picra, which was aloes and quassia, dissolved in apple brandy. Sometimes a hop tonic, made of whiskey, hops and bitter barks. A score or more of popular, home-made remedies were thus compounded, the formulae for which were passed along from house to house, sometimes written, sometimes verbally communicated.

The patent medicine business is a natural outgrowth from this wholesome, old-time custom. In the beginning, some enterprising doctor, impressed by the usefulness of one of these home-made remedies, would take it up, improve it in many ways, manufacture it on a large scale, advertise it mainly through almanacs for the home, and thus it would become used over a large area. LATTERLY THE HOUSEHOLD REMEDY BUSINESS TOOK A MORE EXACT AND SCIENTIFIC FORM.

Peruna was originally one of these old-time remedies. It was used by the Mennonites, of Pennsylvania, before it was offered to the public for sale. Dr. Hartman, THE ORIGINAL COMPOUNDER OF PERUNA, is of Mennonite origin. First, he prescribed it for his neighbors and his patients. The sale of it increased, and at last he established a manufactory and furnished it to the general drug trade.

Peruna is useful in a great many climatic ailments, such as coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchitis, and catarrhal diseases generally. THOUSANDS OF FAMILIES HAVE LEARNED THE USE OF PERUNA and its value in the treatment of these ailments. They have learned to trust and believe in Dr. Hartman's judgment, and to rely on his remedy, Peruna.

NEURALGIA

The real meaning of the word Neuralgia is nerve-pain, and any one who has suffered with the malady will not be so anxious to know of its nature as to hear of its antidote. Though scarcely recognized by the profession and people half a century ago, it is now one of the most common and painful ailments which afflict humanity. As now generally understood the word signifies an affection of the nervous system, with pain in the course of the principal nerves.

The two great causes of Neuralgia are, Impoverishment of the Blood and Deficiency of Nerve Force; and the treatment of it is not so obscure as many would be led to suppose. The first thing is to relieve the pain, which is done more quickly and satisfactorily by ST. JACOBS OIL than by any other remedy known; the second object is to remove the cause, which is accomplished by the abundant use of nourishing food, of a nature to strengthen and give tone to both the muscular and nervous systems.

CLAY-EATING SECT

LIVE IN MOUNTAIN REGIONS OF NORTH CAROLINA.

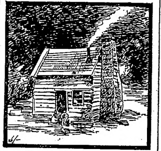
People Are Wretchedly Poor, Woefully Ignorant and Foolishly Superstitious—Moonshining Their Principal Occupation.

New York.—Strange as it may appear, there are people in this country whose chief article of diet is clay. These people live in the mountain regions of North Carolina and are apparently as happy and contented as the majority of mankind.

The writer has spent several days among these people who eat clay as a part of their daily food, and his conviction is that the only bad effect of clay eating seems to be the peculiar appearance it gives the skin of those who become addicted to the habit. The skin turns pale, so pale in fact, as to give the face the pallor of death, and then later on it turns a peculiar pale yellow, a color closely resembling some of the clay eaten. Children who eat it grow old, at least in appearance, prematurely, and their faces lose forever the bright glow of youth and health. There is little sickness among the clay-eaters, and they live as long as the average of mankind, so it is conclusive that the habit is not fatal in its effects.

The clay eaten by these people is found along the banks of the small mountain streams in inexhaustible quantities. It is usually of a dirty white color, but sometimes a pale yellow, with a peculiar oily appearance, and this oil keeps it from sticking to the mouth or hands. When dry it does not crumble, and a few drops of water will soften it so that it can be rolled into any shape desired. It is almost tasteless, but must possess some nourishment, as these people declare they can subsist upon it for days. They place a small piece in the mouth and hold it there until it gradually dissolves, and is swallowed in small quantities at a time. The quantity eaten at one time varies from a lump as large as a pea, for a child as a beginner, to a lump as large as a hen's egg for those who have eaten it for years. The clay is eaten with a relish. A peculiar fact is that they do not wish it generally known that they are clay-eaters, and few will confess that eat it.

As may be imagined, these people are densely ignorant. They are not surrounded with churches, schoolhouses, nor any such refining and civilizing influences; they appear satisfied with their lot, and do not wish to be taught. None of the family can read, and their parents before them could not. Their children are growing up equally ignorant, and the majority of them do not believe in book learning.



Cabin of a North Carolina Clay-Eater.

Many of these mountaineers eke out a miserable existence by farming, hunting, fishing and making a little illicit whisky. The land is very poor in fact, so poor that it would be hard to even raise a difficulty on it, and their "farms" consist of a few acres around their cabins, planted in corn, potatoes, peas, tobacco, and a few who are fortunate enough to own a horse attempt to raise a little cotton. No matter how faithfully the clearings are cultivated the yield is always poor.

In almost every cave on every little brook among the hills is a "mooning still," and the little crop of corn gathered by the clay-eaters is sold to the owner of the still or converted into "mountain dew" on shares. They are too far from a market to sell their corn for money, but they can carry a keg of corn whisky to some of the larger settlements a few miles away and obtain a little cash, some calico, tobacco and coffee for it. Men, women and children are slaves to the tobacco habit. The women chew and smoke and dip snuff when they get it. Home-made "long-green," as they call it, is so strong that only those old in the habit can use it, consequently manufactured tobacco is a luxury to them.

It may or may not be the result of clay-eating, but these people are as superstitious as the followers of a Voodoo. They have signs for everything, and almost worship the moon. Corn is planted when the moon is full, and potatoes on the dark of the moon. They foretell storms and all kinds of disasters by the appearance of the moon.

The average clay-eater has a mortal dread of an owl. The hooting of an owl at any door, day or night, is an omen of ill luck, and answered by the barking of a dog it is a sign that one of the family will soon die. As soon as the hoot of an owl is heard a chair is overturned, and if the hooting stops the threatened danger has been warded off for a time, but if it continues there is weeping and wailing in the home of the clay-eater.

$16 AN ACRE REALIZED ON CROP IN WESTERN CANADA.

ANOTHER FARMER REALIZES $22.50 PER ACRE FROM HIS WHEAT CROP LAST YEAR.

Charles McCormick of Kenville, Manitoba, writes:

"During the season of 1907, I had 100 acres in crop on the S. W. quarter of section 18, township 35, range 27 west of the Principal Meridian, Western Canada, yielded as follows:

"80 acres at 22 bushels per acre, which I sold for 90 cents per bushel; and 20 acres oats yielding 60 bushels per acre I sold for 35 cents per bushel so that my total crop realized $2,004.00. From this I deducted for expenses of threshing, hired help, etc., $400.00, leaving me a net profit on this year's crop of over $1,600."

Thomas Sawatzky of Herbert, Saskatchewan, says:

"The value of my crop per acre of wheat is $22.50. I threshed 1,750 bushels of wheat from 70 acres, and was offered 90 cents a bushel for it. Oats, 15 acres, 500 bushels; and barley, 5 acres, 80 bushels. I do not know if I have been doing the best in this district, but I know if all the farmers were doing as well, Western Canada would have no kick coming as far as grain growing is concerned; and I further say that if you want to put this in one of your advertisements, this is true and I can put my name to it."

PRESCRIBED CUTICURA

After Other Treatment Failed—Raw Eczema on Baby's Face Had Lasted Three Months—At Last Doctor Found Cure.

"Our baby boy broke out with eczema on his face when one month old. One place on the side of his face the size of a nickel was raw like beefsteak for three months, and he would cry out when I bathed the parts that were sore and broken out. I gave him three months' treatment from a good doctor, but at the end of that time the child was no better. Then my doctor recommended Cuticura. After using a cake of Cuticura Soap, a third of a box of Cuticura Ointment, and half a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent he was well and his face was as smooth as any baby's. He is now two years and a half old and no eczema has reappeared. Mrs. M. L. Harris, Alton, Kan., May 14 and June 12, 1907."

"Thar ain't much of a problem in raisin' boys ef you'll have a little common sense about it," said Mr. Billy Sanders. But don't fergit that the mammies an' daddies of the land are twice responsible when one of the'r boys goes wrong. Ef the legislatur' wants to do a good work, an' make better citizens out'n the risin' generation, let it put a heavy penalty on the dear parents of the boys that go wrong."—Joel Chandler Harris, in Uncle Remus' Magazine.

How Her Life Was Saved When Bitten By a Large Snake.

How few people there are who are not afraid of snakes. Not long ago a harmless little garter snake fell on the wheel of an automobile which was being driven by a woman. The woman promptly fainted and the car, left to its own resources, ran into a stone wall and caused a serious accident.

The bite of a poisonous snake needs prompt attention. Mrs. K. M. Fishel, Route No. 1, Box 40, Dillsburg, Pa., tells how she saved her life when bitten by a large snake.

"On August 29, 1906, I was bitten on the hand twice by a large copperhead snake. Being a distance from any medical aid, as a last resort I used Sloan's Liniment, and to my astonishment found it killed all pain and was the means of saving my life. I am the mother of four children and am never without your Liniment."

AN INTERESTING CHEMICAL EXPERIMENT

Any Child Can Do It—The Result Is Almost Like Magic—Useful, Too.

Anything in the nature of a chemical experiment is always interesting and usually educative. Here is a simple experiment which any child can perform and which is instructive in a very practical way: Get a bit of White Lead about the size of a pea, a piece of charcoal, a common candle in a candlestick, and a blow-pipe. Scoop out a little hollow in the charcoal to hold the White Lead, then light the candle, take the charcoal and lead in one hand and the blow-pipe in the other, with the large end of the blow-pipe between the lips; blow the flame of the candle steadily against the bit of White Lead on the charcoal and if the White Lead is pure it will presently resolve itself into little shining globules of metallic lead, under the intense heat of the blow-pipe, leaving no residue.

If, however, the White Lead is adulterated in the slightest degree, it will not wholly change into lead. So, it will be seen, that this experiment is not only an entertaining chemical demonstration, but also of practical use in the home. White Lead is the most important ingredient of paint. It should be bought pure and unadulterated and mixed with pure linseed oil. That is the best paint. The above easy experiment enables anyone to know whether the paint is the kind which will wear or not.

The National Lead Company guarantee that white lead taken from a package bearing their "Dutch Boy Painter" trade-mark will prove absolutely pure under the blow-pipe test; and to encourage people to make the test and prove the purity of paint before using it, they will send free a blow-pipe and a valuable booklet on paint to anyone writing them asking for Test Equipment. Address National Lead Company, Woodbridge Building, New York City.

A Powerful Combination.

Tim was a protege of Mr. Blank, a well-known Boston lawyer. He was often in trouble, but by personal influence with the courts Mr. Blank managed to have him let down easy, so it became a matter of talk, the Green Bag says, that he did not suffer greatly in being arrested.

"How is it, Tim," some one asked one day, "that you are arrested very often, but never go to jail nor pay any fines?"

"It's just this way," Tim replied. "I have Mr. Blank for me lawyer, and what he doesn't know about the law I tells him."

OFFICIAL PAPER of RED LAKE COUNTY

Subscription price, $1.50 per year
If paid in advance, $1.00.

Entered at the Post-office in Plummer, Minn. as Second Class Mail Matter.

Sam Langum, of the Preston, (Minn.) Times and postmaster of congress, recently sent home some correspondence for publication in his paper and in his article he took occasion to express sentiments derogatory to President Roosevelt. The Red Lake Falls Gazette, seeing an opportunity to malign one whom the people respected and loved, took occasion to publish some of Langum's remarks. Thos. Germo, our present efficient county attorney, in a letter to the Minneapolis Journal, defends the president in an able manner and his defense looks so good that we publish it in full with the hope that it may have a tendency to open the eyes of the public to the character of the paper which published the extracts from the Preston Times.

Mr. Germo's letter is as follows:

To the Editor of The Journal-

Sam Langum has edged himaelf along until he has found himself not only postmaster of congress, but in the dilemma of discovering himself in an atmosphere of hostility to the president. In correspondence to his home paper he says:

> So thoroly are the people here imbued with their dislike, and so sharp and universal are the criticisms heaped upon him, that I sometimes fear that he may have been placed by the great bulk of the people opon an eminence that he does not deserve.

This runs smoothly and trippingly from the tongue, but that he makes unfortunate used of words must be apparent to all thinking people. His deploying with the word 'universal' is, in my humble opinion, a libel upon the people of Washington. My experience has been that the sharpest criticisms and abuse of the president comes from the lawbreakers and those who sympathize with them or apologize for them. I do not believe that these criticisms are 'universal'. At any rate, just why should the people of Washington dislike Roosevelt so thoroly?

He is a true husband and a good father. Should he be disliked or criticized for that?

His morals are good; he has an unblemished character, both in private and public life. Should he be hated for that? He is a Christian gentleman. Should he be disliked for that?

He stands for the doctrine of equal justice before the law of the rich and the poor. Should he be hated for that?

He has given the best that was is in him, as he sees the light, for his country, and it is not so bad. Should he be hated for that?

He is himself strenuous, and he has told congress that they must do something and not idle away their time. Should he be so thoroly disliked for that?

For what, under the sun, then is he so "universally" disliked in Washington? Should not Sam Langum be subpenaed to explain why, or on what account; the president is so "universally" disliked in Washington, so that the dear readers of his paper coulb by process of arithmetic decipher for themselves whether their dislike of him is justified? I am frank to say, that in my opinion, the president is held in so high esteem by the people at large for what he has had the courage to do and for what he is aiming to do. If Sam will be equally frank, we may get, if not an inspired, yet an illumined article from his pen.

Again, Sam is bereft of another lame and halting soliloquy in these stereotyped words;

> I know not whether it is a case of a prophet being honored save in his own country, or, considering the way he is idolized by the people at large, whether it is a case of distance leading enchantment to the view.

Why, Sam! When did you wake up? Don't yon know that President Roosevelt has traveled more widely in the United States than any of his predecessors, so that the "people-at-large" know him nearly as intimately as the people of Washington? He hae traversed every state and territory, with the exception of Alaska, and in his travels their was no evidence of any dislske of him being fomented. On the contrary, continued applause and a display of confidence and good will met him on all sides. Is it not, rather, the fault of the appraiser in sizing up Washington? I attach the blame to the appraiser.

However, if this flippant correspondent to his home paper has read nothing of history, let him betake himself to its pages. He will discover that Moses had his troubles; that Christ was crucified, and that our immortals, Washington and Lincoln, were maligned, criticized and abused most unmercifully. In this connection I beg to quote from Ridpath's History of the United States anent the storm raised over the Jay treaty, as follows:

> Washington, standing serenely at the helm of state, was assailed with incendiary invectives and slanders. Never in his whole career had he been subjected to a like storm of malice, indignity and shameless animadversions. In one instance his home was approached by a mob who hooted and threw stones and clubs in the manner of madmen at the official residence.

The historian adds that the president stood his ground and conquered. Thank God, no one has yet descended to the level of pelting Roosevelt's residence with stones and clubs. Let this careless paragrapher read and reflect concerning men and measures of the past, and on reading and pondering, even he may feel reassured that tho our president is severely criticized in some quarters, he may still be a great and good man, and he would also find less time to employ in an attempt to direct the "people-at-large" to view the president thru the discolored goggles of "official Washington."

—Thomas Germo.

FEATHERED ANGLERS.

How the Great Heron Stabs Fish With Its Lancelike Bill.

While the kingfisher feeds by day, the great heron begins his fishing at dusk just as the stars peep forth When I am about to make the last few casts and stop fishing in a trout pool I hear the loud whiz of his vast-stretch of wings passing close by, flying low to a favorite shallow part of the river and down drop his long legs, and he settles right down to business, motionless as a stone. Sometimes for half an hour not a feather moves.

He watches with unwearied patience When he does strike it is as quick and as sure as fate, for the first luckless fish that approaches within his reach is seized with surprising dexterity Like the kingfisher, the heron beats to death those fish of larger size, swallowing them whole, headforemost, such being their uniform positions when found in the stomach. He will then at once assume the same attitude of silent watchfulness, and the finny tribe though frightened at his first dash among them, return again in a short interval only to be transfixed with his long lance shaped bill.

Hornaday's "Natural History" says "When a heron is fishing it stalks slowly and silently along the shore, preferably in water about six inches deep its head carried well forward, but about on a level with its shoulders while its big eyes keenly scrutinize every object in the water. It takes long steps and plants each foot softly in the true still hunter fashion to avoid alarming its game. When a fish is found within range the kinks of the neck fly straight and the fish is seized between the mandibles. The fish is not stabbed through and through."

This latter statement is only correct when small fish are taken. I have it on expert authority that herons repeatedly stab large trout up to two pounds in weight, making a hole in the back large enough to insert the thumb.—Louis Rhead in Recreation.

How Kingfishers Perish.

Dreadful is the death of the stately kingfisher. A hard winter is his certain doom. Long observation seems to indicate the birds do not migrate, and from having to enter the water for their prey in winter their dripping feet quickly become incased in ice. As in hard weather it is only possible for them to alight either on snow or ice or in water, it is easy to see how the ice around their feet would quickly accumulate and bring about a lingering death.—London Globe.

When we make a poor guess we realize that to err is human, but when we make a good one we are convinced that foresight is a matter of intellectual superiority.

Creameries Inspected.

O. A. Storvick, state creamery inspector, was here yesterday to instect the locaf caeamery and tne cnam delivered to it. In the afternoon he drove out to Lillo to inspect the creamery there. He is accomied by a Kansas buttermaker, named Paul Krueger, who has been engaged by one of the centralizing plants in Kansas and who is now looking into the working of the co-operative creameries thoroughly with a view to improving the conditions in his home state.

Before leaving for Lillo yesterday Mr. Storvick called at the PIONEER office and was asked regarding his inspection of this creamery and the cream. He said he found the creamery in excellent condition and praised the buttermaker who, he said, seemed to thoroughly understand the value of a systematic way of doing things and kept a perfect record of everything so that he knew exactly what he was doing all the time. Regarding the cream delivered at the creamery Mr. Storvick said he found that most of it wes good and some exceptionally good. He found some of it rather bad and a very little exceptionally bad—so bad nhat Mr. Storvick declared that he would prosecute the parties hruling the cream if he finds any more of it as bad as this time. The pure food laws of the state are very strict and Mr. Storvick will enforce them until the careless ones will either bring good cream or quit bringing any at all. He has given these parties a fair warning and if it is not heeded there is no question but that he will prosecute promptly. We do nat know who the parties are who had this very bad cream but it is safe to say that they will find Mr. Storvick keeping his promises to the letter.

Brave Mother Saved Child from Drowning.

On Thursday about noon Mrs. A. R. Harris accomplished an apparently impossible feat in rescuing her little son Roy, aged about four years, from drowning in an unused well at their home in this village,

Mr. Harris is the section foreman here on the Soo line and the family was just preparing for dinner. Mr. Harris had gone down town to get his mail while Mrs. Harris was engaged with her housework. Their two little sons, Roy and Clarence, aged about four and three years respectively, were playing around the house. The mother was startled by little Clarence rushing in and crying that Roy had fallen in the tank. She hurried out and looked in the railroad ditches and water barrels and Clarence followed and pointed out the old well. She immediately looked into the well but could not see the child as he had sunk from sight. In some unknown manners the mother got into the well and down to the water level, a distance of about twelve feet. Just then the boy rose to the surface and she caught him by the hair. How she got out of the well with the unconscious form of her little son she is unable to tell and that they were not both drowned seems a miracle. The well is curbed with ordinary planks with cleats on the inside about four fect apart, and was covered with a board covering in which their was an opening just large enough to allow a pail to be lowered when the well was used. There was about seven feet of water in the well and how the mother got out with the child is hard to understand. She carried the boy into the house and by rolling and artificial respiration treatment she got the water out of his lungs and stomach and he soon regained consciousness. When Mr. Harris returned he found her dripping wet and working over the boy. He was very much startled when he heard her story and altogether thankful that the accident was not fatal.

Death of Katherine Lynch.

About 5 o'clock last Sunday afternoon Katherine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Lynch, of Equality township, died at the home of her parents. She was about 23 years of age and the direct cause of her death was heart trouble.

Kathrine Lynch was born at Hammond, Wis., and moved here with her parents nearly 12 years ago. When she was a little child she sustained an injury of the spine which made her a cripple. During the intervening years she has always been a patient sufferer and full of sympathy for others. She had recently been troubled with some enlarged glands in her throat and her heart was not strong. On Sunday afternoon she quietly went to sleep and passed away in peace. She was the only surviving daughter in the family and leaves her grief stricken parents and five brothers to mourn the loss of one whose suffering had made her the best loved of the family.

The funeral was held on Wednesday morning, the 8th inst, from the Catholic church at Lambert, Rev. Fr. Roy officiating, and the remains were interred in the Lambert churchyard.

Miss Carrie, Kimball, of Seattle, Wash., spent Tuesday here as the guest of her uncle, A. R. Harris. She had been visiting with Mr. Harris' mother at Turtle Lake, Wis., and made it a point to stop here for a day on her way back to Seattle.

George and Frank Bender returned on Thursday morning from St. Paul where they have been visiting for several days and attending to some business matters. They went out to their home in Equality to get ready for spring work on their fine farms.

A Calm Witness.

A lawyer was cross examining a witness with a view to getting him muddled in his testimony. The following questions and answers occurred:

"Did you see the plaintiff faint a short time ago?"

"Yes, sir."

"People turn pale when they faint, don't they?"

"No, sir; not always."

"What! Do you mean to tell me that a person can faint and not turn pale? Did you ever hear of such a case?"

"Yes, sir."

How to Produce Good Cream.

(By the Buttermaker)

Now is the time of year when the creamery patrons need to take special care in handling their milk and cream. Clean flavored butter can only be made from pure, sweet and fresh cream. The taint incorporated in the milk or cream will follow the butter through all its stages of manufacture and into the market where it is discovered and a correspondingly lower price is paid for it. From this it may be seen that care of tne cream while in the preducer,s hands will have a marked influence on the ultimate value of the butter. The causes that produce undesirable flavors and odors in cream are as follows:

First—Milking the cows in a filthy stable or near decomposing material.

Second—Milking with dirty hands, or by not cleaning the udder before milking.

Third—By milking into filthy pails, or pails that have not been scalded with hot water. In washing milking utensils it is advisable to first rinse with warm water; then use hot water and some good washing powder and finally rinse with boiling water. Then keep in a dry, clean place, if possible in the sun, until wanted for use.

Forth—By running the milk through an unclean separator. The separator should necessarily be taken apart and thoroughly washed every time it is used.

Fifth—By running the cream into filthy cans. Care should be taken that the cream be kept in a clean can that has previously been scalded and cooled. The cans should only be used for handling and delivering cream and should be cleaned as soon as possible after the cream is delivered. Never allow the cans to become rusty or rough inside.

Sixth—By not cooling the cream to a proper temperature. After cream has been separated it should be cooled to at least 55 degrees F., and lower, if possible. In putting the cream from two milkings together care should be taken that the cream added last is thoroughly cooled. When new cream is added it should be mixed by gentle stirring. Be sure to keep the cream in pure air and do not have the cans covered tight before the cream is cooled. Never keep the cream in the kitchen or the cellar.

Seventh—By keeping the cream for more than two days before delivered.

Eight—By feeding the cows mouldy or partially decayed food.

Ninth—Milk produced by diseased cows gives abnormal cream.

Skin a rich cream. The cream should contain at least 30 per cent fat. Rich cream is more easy to keep in good condition than a thin. Clean cream, cold cream and rich cream are the three words which tell the secret of producing good cream.

Rules for Milking:

1. Use no dry, dusty food previous to milking.

2. The milker should wash his hands immediately before milking and milk with dry hands. He should wear a clean outer garment. Tobacco should not be used while milking.

3. Wipe the udder and surrounding parts with a clean, damp cloth immediately before milking.

4. If any part of the milk is bloody' stringy or unnatural in appearance, or if by accident dirt gets into the milk, the whole of it should be rejected.

5. Do not fill cans in stable. Remove the milk of each cow at once from the stable to the milk room. Strain immediately through cotton or cotton flannel.

A Remarkable Suicide.

A man who had visited Paris was telling of an extraordinary suicide he had heard of in that gay city. "He was a Frenchman, who was nothing if not original," said the teller of the tale, "and even when he grew despondent he planned his death is a most original fashion. He locked the door of his room in the Rue Nitot and, removing the weights of the window cord, fastened them to the window itself. He added to the weight of the window by attaching six flatirons. On the sill he adjusted a large triangular bread knife, such as is used by chefs, and made ready a small balloon, capable of lifting fifty pounds. The ingenious Frenchman then put his head out of the window after attaching the balloon to his neck and by releasing the clamp that held the window cut his head off completely with the improvised guillotine. The decapitated body was discovered several days later, but it was not until the balloon and the head were found a week later in the field of a peasant, eighteen miles from Paris, that the method of suicide was really known."

Sunny Brook John On Local Option.

Why jump onto the saloon keeper? Jump on the man that gives us the privilege and derives the most benefit from our sales. You probably do not know who this is. I will tell you. it is Uncle Sam. Every time I take a barrel of whiskey out of the Goverment Bond House, old Uncle gets from $45.00 to $49.50 just to put a few shin plasters on it. Now, I am not alone that pays the above penalty but there's hundreds of thousands that pay the same. You even now growl about high taxes but, supposing you will get County Option and saloons thrown out, what will be the consequence? Higher taxes. The fellow that comes around and has meetings and preaches this option business to you is a non taxpayer; merely a sponger, or intruder on generosity. When he comes around again be generous and give him a drink of Sunny Brook Rye and I am perfectly satisfied that he will be convinced that he is wrong.

Houses and Homes.

There have been and there are today in the various lands of the earth many people who have no houses and nothing that you could call furniture even of the antique variety. But there can be no doubt that they are far happier than many who are comfortably housed in mansions which contain everything that money can buy.—Uncle Remus' Magazine.

In every affair consider what precedes and what follows and then undertake it.—Epictetus.

WIT OF AN IRISH STORY.

Lost, as a Rule, When the Tale Is Reduced to Cold Type.

"Irish wit loses more in reduction to cold type than that of any other nation on earth." At least that is the opinion of a St. Louis Hibernian who himself furnishes many excellent examples of the article in question.

"When an Irishman perpetrates a witticism it is always tinged with a personality which in print or even in the retelling is often completely lost. There is always something—a wink, a smile, an arch expression, a shrug or gesture —that emphasizes the joke and must be seen to be appreciated. Sometimes an Irish witticism put into type is mistaken for mere dullness of superstition.

"I remember once hearing an Irishman tell a story about a wonderful old time king on the north coast who caught the devil at some trick and for a punishment made Old Harry carve his own head on one of the cliffs. The story was told as seriously as a sermon would be preached. No one could apparently be more sincere than the story teller. He seemed to believe the legend as devoutly as though it came directly from holy writ.

"After he had wound up the narrative, noticing a smile on my face, he stared in apparent surprise. 'Don't ye belave it? Sure, the old king's hammer and chisel is kept in the church beyant, and what better proof could ye ax?' And he gave a wink and a grin and spread out both hands in a gesture of expostulation just as a lawyer would when posing before a jury and putting his most convincing argument in the form of a question.

"It was the most exquisite bit of acting I ever saw. The tone of perfect conviction in which he told the story was inimitable; then the contrast from solemnity to comic dismay at the idea of any one being so grossly incredulous as not to believe the story and the wink, which indicated that he didn't believe it himself and was simply talking for amusement, were worthy of any actor that ever trod the boards. Yet in the type all this was lost. To appreciate properly the wit of an Irish story you must hear the Irishman tell it."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

SOAP IS ANCIENT.

It Was Used by the Gauls as a Dressing For the Hair.

Who invented soap? That it is not a modern convenience is well known, but just when it came into general use is a mystery.

In Biblical times cleansing agents were used. The books of Job and Jeremiah contain the word "soap." But this is merely a convenient use of the word in translation. The Hebrew word "borith," for which it was substituted, is a general term for cleansing substances. What those substances were is unknown, but they were probably little like the modern soap.

Pliny speaks of the invention of soap by the Gauls, who, however, used it only as a sort of pomade or hair dressing. He also refers to the use of both hard soap and soft soap by the Germans. The use of fuller's earth, which has saponaceous qualities, for cleansing purposes was known to the Romans.

The French word for soap, savon, comes from Savona, France, where it was manufactured. The first manufacture of soap in London is said to have been in 1524, and previously Bristol had supplied it for use in the English cities.

According to the historian Sismondi, a soapmaker was included in the retinue of Charlemagne, king of the Franks, at the end of the eighth century.

In the excavation of the ruins of Pompeii a soap boiler's shop was uncovered, with soap in it, showing that the making of it was known in the first Christian century.

Pliny, who wrote of the eruption of Vesuvius, which destroyed the two Roman cities in 79 A. D., stated that soap was made from tallow and ashes and that the German soap was the best. Galen also referred to the use of soap.

Diagnosed the Case.

A successful oculist recently put in a day or two with his new shotgun in the marshes. He soon noticed that when using the left hand barrel he generally brought down the game, but when using the other barrel he invariably missed. He finally tacked a small target to a bush near the river's bank and fired at it several times with each barrel in order to bring the matter to a test. The result confirmed his suspicions. One barrel was all right, or nearly so, and the other was all wrong.

"Well," said the oculist to a friend who was with him, "as nearly as I can make out this gun has a severe case of strabismus, with strong symptoms of astigmatism!" — Modern Society.

The Cost For Repairs.

"Why did you sell your auto?"

"Cost too much for repairs."

"Wasn't it a good machine?"

"First rate. Never got out of order. But I had to pay for repairing the people it ran over."—Philadelphia Ledger.

IN CONGRESS.

As an aftermath of the passage of the army appropriation bill Senator Hale, chairman of the committee on naval affairs, warned against increases of the military establishment, saying they were inviting a deficit. He moved the reconsideration of the vote by which the army bill was passed and his motion was then laid on the table at his request. Senator Burkett characterized the proceeding as one of bad faith. The senate passed the fortification appropriation bill carrying an aggregate of $12,106,187.

The whole of the session of the house was devoted to the consideration of the District of Columbia appropriation bill. Two amendments were adopted, one providing for 75-cent gas for all district establishments and the other requiring that all outside doors to public school buildings shall open outward. An effort to secure the incorporation of a child labor provision failed. The bill was passed.

The army bill, carrying an appropriation of almost $100,000,000, was passed by the senate practically as reported from the committee on military affairs. The only amendment adopted carried an appropriation of $20,000 for a system of water works for Fort William Henry Harrison, Montana. The bill materially increases the pay of officers and enlisted men of the army.

William H. Hilton of Florida was sworn in as the successor of the late Senator William J. Bryan.

John Sharp Williams and his band of filibusters resumed their dilatory tactics as soon as the house convened. Roll call after roll call was demanded solely for the purpose of delaying legislation. After several hours had been wasted in this way the rules committee brought in a rule applying the "gag law" to the District of Columbia appropriation bill, which was adopted despite the strenuous opposition of the Democrats.

Carrying a total of $11,508,806, the agricultural appropriation bill was passed by the house of representatives. The Democrats then began their threatened filibuster.

VICTORY SURPRISES ANTI-LIQUOR LEAGUE

EXPECTATIONS IN THE SMALLER ILLINOIS TOWNS SURPASSED IN BALLOTING.

TO CARRY FIGHT TO LARGE CITIES

Saloons Numbering 1,014 Are Abolished, While 828 Townships Are Made "Dry"—"Wet" Proposition Wins in 184.

| | |
|---|---|
| Saloons Abolished | 1,014 |
| Townships Dry | 828 |
| Townships wet | 184 |

Springfield, Ill., Apr. 9.—Ernest A. Scroggin, attorney for the Illinois Anti-Saloon league, gave out the following statement Wednesday:

"Returns received at this office indicate that the victory achieved throughout the state has exceeded all expectations. I made a prophecy that this victory would be in proportion to the one of last fall, and that just as great a number of townships and counties proportionately would be swept into the dry column. We now have the facts to prove the truth of this statement. We are up to the gates of the largest cities in the state, and I confidently predict that the next ballot will see many of them banish the saloon.

Campaign Termed Remarkable.

"I suppose this has been the most remarkable anti-saloon campaign ever waged in this country. Five months ago the Anti-Saloon league began to organize the 84 counties in the state under township organizations. We went into every one of these counties. A study of the returns will show that anti-saloon sentiment is confined to no particular section. The political significance of the battle should be noted. A vast majority of the people have declared by their votes that they are in favor of local option legislation, and it will scarcely be prudent to deny them such further measures of protection along this line as they may demand."

Chicago, Apr. 9.—More than a thousand saloons were voted out by the people of Illinois in the great local option battle Tuesday. The "drys" carried many whole counties and small towns, but most of the larger cities voted decisively in favor of the saloons.

The returns, as collected by townships, are even more impressive from the prohibition viewpoint, 828 townships, or three-fourths of the total number, being closed to the saloon.

Only by winning in the larger cities did the liquor interests save themselves from a complete rout.

Springfield Keeps Saloons.

Springfield, Ill., Apr. 9.—Springfield voted in favor of the saloons Tuesday by 1,800 majority. Taylorville, Pana and every other township in Christian county except Assumption went dry.

Rock Island, Ill., Apr. 9.—Rock Island voted for saloons, 3,448, for to 1,657 against. The country district where saloons have been licensed generally went "wet" by small majorities.

Lincoln, Ill., Apr. 9.—East Lincoln, saloon territory, voted 684 for local option and 384 against.

Monmouth, Ill., Apr. 9.—Monmouth township and city gave 102 majority against local option proposition. Five townships of the remaining 14 went dry; nine not heard from.

Bloomington, Ill., Apr. 9.—Bloomington voted against becoming anti-saloon territory by 2,971 to 2,580.

Rose Mayor of Milwaukee Again.

Milwaukee, Apr. 9.—David S. Rose, the Democratic candidate for mayor of Milwaukee, was returned the successful candidate Tuesday with a plurality of about 3,000 votes over Emil Seidel, Social Democrat. Thomas J. Pringle, the Republican candidate, ran over 1,000 behind Seidel. Rose's election makes him mayor of Milwaukee for the fifth time. He was defeated two years ago by Becker. Vincenz Schoenecker for treasurer and August M. Gawin for comptroller are elected on the Rose ticket.

Special dispatches indicate that license won out over no license in a majority of towns in Wisconsin as far as heard from, where these issues were put to a vote. In Kenosha, Mathias J. Scholey (Dem.), agent for a brewing company, defeated Edward S. Alteman by 505 votes. The following places voted for license: Altoona, Kenosha, West Salem, Tomah, Union Grove, Mauston, Lancaster, Galesville, Platteville, Whitehall, Ladysmith, Mineral Point, Peawaukee, Marinette, Wausaukee, Peshtigo, Menominee.

The following places voted no license: Sparta, Viroqua, Laferge, Richland Center, Reedstown, Dodgevile, Wheeler.

At Madison Mayor J. C. Schubert (Dem.) won out over W. J. McKay, who favored Sunday closing.

Scattering returns indicate that John Barnes of Rhinelander has been elected over Robert M. Bashford of Madison as justice of the supreme court.

Woman Refused Commission.

Montgomery, Mo., Apr. 9.—Mrs. Gertrude Barney, who was elected city collector as the candidate of the Republicans and temperance people, was refused a commission by the city council Wednesday because she is a woman, and therefore ineligible. Another election will likely be held.

At Independence, Mo., the Democratic ticket, with the exception of two aldermen, was elected.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

Thousands of Acres Saved.

Washington—The supreme court of the District of Columbia has decided a case in favor of the secretary of the interior, the effect of which will be to turn over to the State of Minnesota several thousand acres of land, the timber alone on which is said to be valued at considerably in excess of $1,000,000. The case was brought by Gus A. Beauleau, who, acting on behalf of the Chippewa tribe of Indians, sought to restrain the secretary from turning the lands over to the state. The Indians claim the lands should be sold and the proceeds divided among them. Secretary Garfield decided that the lands should be given to the state under an act of congress giving to it lands that were swamp in character.

The lands are located on the ceded Chippewa Indian reservation in Minnesota. On behalf of Secretary Garfield a demurrer was filed which set forth that the State of Minnesota was an essential party in the case, in fact a co-defendant, and that under the eleventh amendment to the Constitution a state cannot be sued by one of its citizens, and Beauleau's petition for an injunction should be dismissed.

Powder Magazine Explodes.

Minneapolis — Exploding with a crash that was felt for miles around, the powder magazine at the University of Minnesota went off with a deafening report, completely wrecking the place, throwing debris high into the air, breaking many windows and sending a stream of flame heavenward. No one was killed or seriously injured.

Immediately following the explosion a tongue of flame shot up to a height of about 100 feet and the roof of the cave wherein the explosive was kept, and which consisted of boiler iron, was thrown some 300 feet into the air and came down in a crumpled mass.

The cause of the explosion is not known, though some boys started a grass fire earlier in the afternoon and that may have been the origin of the trouble.

Only a hole in the ground marks where the magazine was. All the windows in the assay building of the mining department were blown in and the chemistry and law buildings suffered similarly. There was no one in the neighborhood at the time.

Timber Cut.

St. Paul—There is a falling off of nearly 50 per cent in the timber cut in Minnesota during the present season as compared with recent preceding years, according to figures and estimates prepared by Forestry Commissioner C. C. Andrews. He says:

"The aggregate output of various kinds of timber and wood from the Minnesota forests this past winter, in round numbers, was: Pine, 800,000,000 feet; mixed timber, including ash, balsam, basswood, birch, cedar, poplar, pine, spruce and tamarac, 79,000,000 feet; number of poles, 213,028; ties, 3,565,750; posts, 1,754,500; cords of pulpwood, 151,800; cords of wood, 75,580; number of feet of mining timber, 500,000; number logging camps, 529; number of men employed, 19,575; average wages, $26 a month and board. These returns are probably 25 per cent below the actual output.

Shortage.

St. Paul—Public Examiner Anton Schaefer filed with Gov. Johnson the report covering the period of the incombency of Fenton G. Warner as state oil inspector, which, he says, shows a shortage of $12,010. The report covers what is known as the Minneapolis division by the Standard Oil company, including Ramsey, Hennepin and twenty-nine other counties.

The report is made by W. C. Heilbron, one of the deputy examiners, and covers about thirty pages, including a mass of figures.

Firebug Again Burns Mill.

Grand Rapids—Neumann Brothers' sawmill on Prairie Lake, four miles north of this city, was partially destroyed by fire; the fire being evidently of incendiary origin. The loss is estimated at $3,000. This is the second fire of the same nature in this mill, the other occurring one year ago under similar circumstances, but much heavier loss.

NEWS NOTES.

St. Paul—Governor John A. Johnson has proclaimed Friday, April 24, as Arbor and Bird day.

Minneapolis—After having been discarded for several days at the Hennepin county morgue as worthless, the coat worn by Carl Hult, who committed suicide at the St. James hotel, was found to contain $500.

Minneapolis.—The attraction at the Bijou Opera House, the week of April 12th, will be "Through Death Valley," the latest western melodrama by Joseph LeBrandt. The cast is identically the same as that which appeared in the piece during its long run at the Academy of Music, New York City.

Crookston—By an almost unanimous vote here the $20,000 in bonds for the erection of a school building to take the place of the Franklin school, recently destroyed by fire, were carried.

Northome—The dead body of an unidentified man was found lying face down in the snow near the Minnesota & International railroad track, one-half mile south of here.

Faribault—An organization of the automobilists was formed at a meeting in the Commercial club rooms of this city.

HIS WHEAT WENT 22 BUSHELS TO THE ACRE.

HE REALIZED $18 PER ACRE FROM IT, WHILE OATS GAVE HIM $17 AN ACRE.

Moose Jaw, Sask., Nov. 18th, 1907.

Writing from Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan, Mr. S. K. Rathwall says:

"I have much pleasure in saying that on my farm this year I had 500 acres in wheat, and 120 acres in oats. My wheat averaged about 22 bushels per acre, and I had 200 acres cut before the frost, which I sold at 85 cents per bushel, thus realizing on that wheat $18.00 per acre, not counting cost of twine, seed and labor. With regard to the other 300 acres of wheat, it got touched with frost but is worth 60 cents per bushel. It will net me $13.00 per acre, but I do not intend to sell it at that price, as I can make more money by feeding it to hogs.

"My oats turned out about 50 bushels to the acre, and at 35 cents per bushel will give me $17.00 to the acre, not counting seed, twine and labor.

"On account of the late spring, a percentage of the grain was touched with frost, but on account of good prices, farmers will realize a fair profit on their farms even this year. We are as usual up against a shortage of cars to get our grain removed."

A Good Point.

The critic is often hard put as he stands between the work he is asked to pass judgment upon and its complaisant creator. He cannot always get off so well as did the critic mentioned in the Baltimore American.

"There are some consistent features of nature in this rural landscape," he said, as he scrutinized the picture.

"What are they?" asked the anxious artist.

"The brow of the hill, which, I see, is placed above the mouth of the stream," was the illuminating answer.—Youth's Companion.

Gazetteer Humor.

Many specimens of unconscious humor are received by the editors of that monumental work, the new Imperial Gazetteer of India. A district was said to be "an extensive rolling plain, consisting of alternate ridges of bare stony hills and narrow fertile valleys." An interesting item of natural history was afforded by the remark, "the buffalo differs from the cow in giving a milk which is richer in fat, in voice, and in having no hump."—London Globe.

Restaurant Prize Seat.

A novel method of advertising a table d'hote has been invented by a New York restaurateur. Every Saturday night he selects a certain chair in his restaurant and places its number in a sealed envelope in charge of the cashier. All the guests select their own seats. The person who is lucky enough to occupy the selected chair receives, as a present, a handsome gold watch.

Evidently Strange.

"A gentleman to see you, sir," announced Mr. Struckitt Wright's new butler.

"Ah—tell him I'll be down in a minute. I guess it's my brother, probably. I'm expectin' him. Does he look anything like me?"

"No, sir—not at all. He is very gentlemanly in appearance."

Perils of Fence Mending.

"I understand that member of congress hurried home to mend his fences."

"Yes. But he doesn't appear to have made a neat job of it. His prospects look as if he had gotten into a tangle with a lot of barbed wire."

THEY GROW.

Good Humor and Cheerfulness from Right Food.

Cheerfulness is like sunlight. It dispels the clouds from the mind as sunlight chases away the shadows of night.

The good humored man can pick up and carry off a load that the man with a grouch wouldn't attempt to lift.

Anything that interferes with good health is apt to keep cheerfulness and good humor in the background. A Washington lady found that letting coffee alone made things bright for her. She writes:

"Four years ago I was practically given up by my doctor and was not expected to live long. My nervous system was in a bad condition.

"But I was young and did not want to die so I began to look about for the cause of my chronic trouble. I used to have nervous spells which would exhaust me and after each spell it would take me days before I could sit up in a chair.

"I became convinced my trouble was caused by coffee. I decided to stop it and bought some Postum.

"The first cup, which I made according to directions, had a soothing effect on my nerves and I liked the taste. For a time I nearly lived on Postum and ate little food besides. I am today a healthy woman.

"My family and relatives wonder if I am the same person I was four years ago, when I could do no work on account of nervousness. Now I am doing my own housework, take care of two babies—one twenty, the other two months old. I am so busy that I hardly get time to write a letter, yet I do it all with the cheerfulness and good humor that comes from enjoying good health.

"I tell my friends it is to Postum I owe my life today."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

SADLY MISTAKEN.

Hubby (disgustedly)—The doctor is a fool.

Wifey—What's the matter, dear?

Hubby—He said I need exercise. Think of it! Exercise! Exercise for a man who has looked after his own furnace all winter, and is now contemplating the opening of the lawn mower season!

The General Demand

of the Well-Informed of the World has always been for a simple, pleasant and efficient liquid laxative remedy of known value; a laxative which physicians could sanction for family use because its component parts are known to them to be wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, acceptable to the system and gentle, yet prompt, in action.

In supplying that demand with its excellent combination of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the California Fig Syrup Co. proceeds along ethical lines and relies on the merits of the laxative for its remarkable success.

That is one of many reasons why Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is given the preference by the Well-Informed. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

GOVERNMENT DRAINAGE

Outline of the Halvor Steenerson's Drainage Plan and What it Means to the Settlers

It is safe to say that the proposed system of government drainage of ceded Indian lands is a very little understood measure by the average settler on the aforesaid ceded lands, and we venture to state that when the public comes to realize the great benefits to be derived from it they will devote considerable energy to holding up Congressman Steenerson's hands and helping him in his fight to get favorable action by congress. It is a sad truth that a small amount of opposition was shown some time ago by some parties from the extreme northern part of the state, and this opposition, beyond a doubt, had some influence in the way of getting the Steenerson drainage measure side-tracked so far as any action at this session of congress is concerned. The fact that this opposition did develop is a proof that the merits of the proposition is very little understood.

Congressman Steenerson two years ago succeeded in getting an appropriation made for a preliminary survey of the lands intended to be drained. This preliminary survey was made and when the engineer's report had been turned in the Secretary of the Interior and the director of the geological survey recommended to the fifty-ninth congress that an appropriation of $1,100,000 be made for the purpose of draining these lands. So far no action has been secured on this recommendation. The plan of drainage contemplated provided for the construction of a series of main ditches and a complete network of smaller lateral ditches, a standard system which should reach every quarter section. The money thus expended by the government was to be repaid by the settlers in ten annual payments, the amounts to be paid to be assessed after a careful examination of each individual holding, regard being had to the varving circumstances, and the amount to be paid fixed accordingly. The estimated assessment on improved lands, or lands already sold, is from $1.22 to to $1.62 per acre, and on the unsold lands $3.65. As before stated the recommendation of the Secretary of the Interior and the Director of the Geological Survey, has not been acted upon by this, the sixtieth congress. but is in the hands of the committee on appropriations.

The opposition which has developed is slight and comes mainly from a few individuals who happen to be located on high spots and a few who think that they can better get the work done by the townships with small ditching machines. In this connection we will cite the experience of Mayfield township and give the following facts and figures as obtained from A. C. Mayfield, former treasurer of that township, and a man whose figures and information we think we can state is absolutely reliable. Mayfield township owns a ditching machine and Mr. Mayfield furnishes these figures from the treasurer's books.

Cost of grader, $450.
Freight on same, $83.61.
Plank for same, $9.70.
Wire cable in Aug., 1907, $28.70.
" " Sept., " $40.00.
Interest, about $90.00.

Mr. Mayfield states further that this ditcher is now badly worn; has been repaired often, and will soon be worn out. A ditch made by this machine can not be slushed out with a scraper, therefore, if used alongside a highway it is a damage instead of a benefit. Water must follow it or it cannot be worked hence it cannot be used in passing a high place from one low point to another. If the ditches cannot be worked to a successful outlet the operator will simply inundate other lands and possibly be personally liable for damages.

This condition in Mayfield township furnishes a good example of what may be expected if it is undertaken to drain these lands by local means. Mayfield is certainly one of the best townships in the ceded Indian lands, both as to dry lands and prosperous people, but we don't believe any one will attempt to deny that it need lots of drainage. Neither do we think that anyone will claim that this township has accomplished much with their ditcher.

The great trouble in attempting to drain these lands either by town work or by county ditching is that the unsettled lands can not be assessed for drainage or any other purpose until the government has given title to the settler. In many cases it would be impossible to find an outlet for a ditch if constructed without traversing government land and in such case the bona fide settler who has made final proof might have the water from other tracts drained onto his land, instead of being carried away, and the chances are that he would have to pay taxes at a very high rate for the construction of a ditch which might ruin his land. If only those who would be benefitted by the construction of such a system of ditches had to pay the taxes, they would find that the cost would be far more than that proposed by the Steenerson system and the benefits derived would be only for a very few.

The Steenerson Drainage Measure possesses many great advantages. It will be the most economical and altogether the most effective, and, as every quarter section will be reached, it will be of untold benefit in the building of roads. The economy is found in the fact that the work will be done directly by the government at the lowest possible cost, and the government is paid on the ten-year payment plan, without interest. Its effectiveness is best realized by considering the perfect system undertaken. Careful surveys have have already been made—elevations being taken upon every section line—and estimates of the amount of standing water, when the swamps are full; the probable amount of future rainfall, and then, taking into consideration the amount of fall per mile, ditches will be made large enough to drain all the lands. There will be no more swamps and the placing of ditches on every section line will cover these lands with a complete network of good graded roads.

Think of the system of drainage and think of the very small cost of it. It is simply impossible to do this work so thoroughly by any other means. This splendid drainage will double the values of farm lands in the districts affected, and when it is done, there will be ready market for every acre of the land involved. Today farmers from the central states are looking anxiously toward these lands to make good homes for themselves in a place where a bountiful Providence supplies the necessary rainfal without fail. Millions of dollars are waiting to be invested in these lands as soon as they are drained. Now, Mr. Settler, why not lend your voice to aid Congressman Steenerson secure the necessary appropriation. Get busy. If you cannot get the appropriation from this session of Congress make it an object to get it from the next. The PIONEER is ready at all times to do its utmost to help along any measure that is for the public good, and we believe that all the other newspapers are equally ready to help. Get busy! Write to your congressman and tell him you want this thing done. Get your neighbors to write to him also, and get your local newspapers to boost the project for all they are worth. These are the things that count. Keep at them and you'll get the appropriation.

W. T. Sawyer, a settler of Kratka township, is fully alive to the benefits to be derived from this drainage and we would suggest that all the rest of the settlers on the Eleven Towns take his advice and "Get off your hats and coats, open up your lungs and holler for Steenerson's drainage."

RAISED FROM A SICK BED.

After Being an Invalid with Kidney Disorders for Many Years.

John Armstrong, Cloverport, Ky., says: "I was an invalid with kidney complaints for many years, and cannot tell what agony I endured from backache. My limbs were swollen twice natural size and my sight was weakening. The kidney secretions were discolored and had a sediment. When I wished to eat my wife had to raise me up in bed. Physicians were unable to help me and I was going down fast when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. After a short time I felt a great improvement and am now as strong and healthy as a man could be. I give Doan's Kidney Pills all the credit for it."

Edward R. Emerson, the president of the American Wine Growers' association, came from Washingtonville to New York the other day and lunched in a Broadway cafe with an editor.

Mr. Emerson, naturally, is a connoisseur of wines. The editor deems himself something of a connoisseur, too, and introduced Mr. Emerson with some pride to a Rhine wine, presumably of the famous '95 vintage.

"Well," he said, "how do you like this Rhine wine, Mr. Emerson? Delicious, don't you think?"

"Not bad," said Mr. Emerson, "only I fancy there's a trifle too much Rhine in it."

THE WIDOW

By DON MARK LEMON

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The body had lain in the pond for a week and consequently it was a bit past recognition when found, but as it wore the clothes of Carl Johnson, in the pockets of which was that party's pocketbook and knife, and as Carl Johnson had suddenly disappeared about a week before, the coroner held that the body was that of Carl Johnson.

No one, however, lost any sleep from the fact that Johnson had walked into the pond and afterwards failed to walk out. He was notoriously stingy, unkempt and drunken, and so few of the villagers had even taken any interest in the drowned man that his death was scarcely discussed.

But men are not wholly done with, even though they are drowned and food for fishes. There is always or generally some property left behind, and always or generally there is someone to claim the property.

In the case of Carl Johnson it was a surprise from the word, money. No one in the village had been aware that the drowned man was married; nevertheless he was no sooner buried than there appeared on the scene a certain stunning blonde, who claimed that she was his widow.

It seems that the deceased had met her the summer before while transacting some business in the city and that they had been married after a very brief courtship. The lady had chosen to remain in the metropolis until her husband could wind up his business at Riverside and rejoin her, while as evidence of her marriage to the deceased and as proof of their mutual affection, certain letters had passed between the two, and when the first of these love epistles was read in court the villagers sat up and took notice.

Indeed, the letter was so interesting that more than one farmer left his haying and came seven miles to court, but that rests between those farmers and their wives, and does not necessarily pertain hereto.

There was now subpoenaed from the city a certain tall, slim clergyman, whose hair and manners were as smooth as vaseline and urbanity could make him.

He testified that he had officiated at the marriage of the lady and the deceased Carl Johnson, and that he had known the widow since her baptism, at which ceremony he had also officiated. The farmers' wives and villagers could hardly credit this last statement. The clergyman looked too youthful but then the stunning blonde was very, very young—and very, very disconsolate.

The case progressed with the courtroom crowded to the doors and a few rustics sitting outside in their teams, discussing what a fool Johnson had made of himself down in the city, and wondering if they could get off from haying and go and do likewise.

Suddenly the people began pouring from the courtroom, not willingly, however, but angrily, and with many a backward look. The court had been cleared that certain of the love letters that had passed between the deceased and his widow might be read only in the hearing of the judge, clients, attorneys, jurors and clerk.

The widow had begged it, blushingly, tearfully; her lawyer had requested it, while the judge had thought it best.

The letters were then read and the case went to the jury, after an eloquent appeal upon the part of the attorney for the widow, in which that lady's tender affection for the deceased was so dramatically drawn that she fell to sobbing on the clergyman's shoulder.

Ten minutes after retiring the jurors filed back into the courtroom and the foreman reported a verdict favorable to the widow as against a distant relative of the deceased, who had contested the widow's claim.

The farmers and villagers received the verdict with an enthusiasm worthy of dollar wheat and the stunning blonde, with all due sweetness and modesty, took possession of the farm and moneys of Carl Johnson, deceased, the clergyman remaining with her as an impeccable chaperon.

Then one day the legally dead Carl Johnson walked into the village and asked the news. When he got it, got it all—his drowning—the widow, the clergyman—the court's decision—he ran his neglected finger nails through his unkempt hair and spat copiously.

"Come along, boys," he said; "I'll introduce you to her. A stunning blonde, you say? Young, plump, big blue eyes and a little foot? Yes, that's her! That's her, all right! She's my wife and—and we're going to settle right down and enjoy ourselves."

Followed by a dozen friends, Johnson entered his farmhouse, where the widow and clergyman were seated at tea, eating honey and biscuits very lovingly together.

At sight of the dead come to life, the widow threw up her hands and fainted, while the impeccable clergyman distinctly said damn. But then he had spilled his tea over his knees and hot tea is certainly hot.

Johnson sought to take the unconscious form of the widow into his arms and cover the rosy mouth with kisses, but he was stayed by the clergyman.

"What have you got to say about it?" demanded the legally dead Johnson. "Didn't you swear in court that you married me and her?"

The clergyman paled and stared past the other through the open door, when suddenly the widow came from her swoon and slapped the amorous Johnson resoundingly.

"Oh, you dreadful, dirty creature!" she cried. "Your mouth is full of tobacco; how dare you attempt to kiss me!"

Johnson scratched his greasy chin. "I call this a nice way to treat your own dead husband come to life."

"My husband! You!" The stunning blonde looked scorn unutterable.

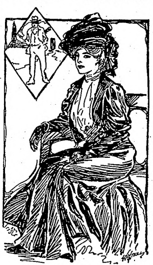
"What! ain't you?' demanded Johnson.

"Ugh!" the lady shivered.

"How about them letters?" leered the other. "The letters I wrote and them you wrote me! Them beauties they had to clear the court 'fore the judge would let 'em be read! How about them?"

The widow retreated nearer the clergyman, and Johnson turned to his friends. "I guess I won't need you folks any longer," he said. "Tell everybody how me and my wife are as happy as two kittens to be in one another's arms again." Then he turned on the clergyman. "And you pack along, too. Me and my wife want to be alone. Don't we, sweetcakes?"

The lady took the clergyman's arm. "Don't leave me, Cyril, dear. Don't let that horrid creature attempt to kiss me again!" Suddenly her woman's cunning reasserted itself and she cried: "You are an impostor, sir! You are not my Carl!"



His Widow.

Carl Johnson started to laugh, but hearing a murmur at his back turned angrily about.

"You all know me! Am I Carl Johnson, or ain't I?"

"You look like him," admitted one of his friends. "But you are dead in the law and you will have to get out papers and be brought back to life before you can kiss the lady."

The clergyman steped forward and spoke with his former urbanity: "Such is precisely the case, sir. This lady is the widow of one Carl Johnson, who is legally held to be dead, and until you prove you are that Carl Johnson you have no claim upon her. I advise you to leave the house at once."

"Leave my own house! I guess not!" growled Johnson.

"Then this gentleman and I will, sir!" The widow swept from the room and returning quickly with her hat and cloak, under which latter article of apparel there was concealed a small but heavy satchel, she offered her arm to the clergyman, and the pair hurried through the door and down the road.

"Good-by, sweetcakes!" leered Johnson over his gate. "Them letters certainly were the kind I'd have writ you, and you're the prettiest peach that ever fell over my fence and rolled out again."

A shrug of the stunning shoulders was the only sign that the lady had heard him, then the pair was lost by a turn of the road. Johnson scratched his greasy chin and leered at his neighbors.

"You heard about them letters! Well, you beat them, and then you beat—her!"

Cocktails for His Tobacco.

Barkeepers, when they become confidential, usually tell good stories, says the New York Tribune, and he is a novice who does not carry bar secrets under his jacket and who does not know stories about the men who come in "to see what time it is." "Now, there," said a white-aproned total abstainer member of the profession pointing to a tin box on the glass shelf, "is one of my regular customers —this tin box." In answer to the look of inquiry he said: "It belongs to a man who never takes a drink, but who smokes a lot of cigarettes, which he rolls himself. Every little while he gets a box full of some particular kind of tobacco and comes here and orders a cocktail of his own invention. He empties the drink into the box, watches the tobacco absorb it; then hands me the box, which I keep till he returns in the evening and takes it home. No cherry goes with the cocktail, and although I've never known the tobacco to curl up and find fault because the drink was too dry or too sweet, I mix it as carefully as I do those for our crank customers."

PRESCRIPTION PURIFIES BLOOD

Neutralizes Poisonous Acids and Stops Rheumatic Pains and Catarrh

The following prescription is very simple, but is the most effective obtainable for neutralizing acid poisons in the blood and relieving rheumatism and all its kindred ailments; it will also quickly restore the system to a healthy condition. Any one can prepare this simple mixture. The ingredients can be obtained at any well stocked drug store:

"One ounce Compound Syrup of Sarsaparilla; one ounce Toris Root Compound; half pint high grade whiskey. Mix and use a tablespoonful before each meal and at bed time. The bottle must be well shaken each time." Toris Root Compound is a product of the laboratories of the Globe Pharmaceutical Co., Chicago.

The good effect of this treatment is said to become apparent after the first few doses and that it is a remarkable system builder and renovator.

HOW TO APPLY PAINT.

Greatest care should be taken when painting buildings or implements which are exposed to the weather, to have the paint applied properly. No excellence of material can make up for carelessness of application, any more than care in applying it can make poor paint wear well.

The surface to be painted should be dry and scraped and sandpapered hard and smooth. Pure white lead should be mixed with pure linseed oil, fresh for the job, and should be well brushed out, not flowed on thick. When painting is done in this manner with National Lead Company's pure white lead (trade marked with "The Dutch Boy Painter") there is every chance that the job will be satisfactory. White lead is capable of absolute test for purity. National Lead Company, Woodbridge Building, New York, will send a testing outfit free to any one interested.

"About twelve or fifteen years ago I had a breaking-out, and it itched, and stung so badly that I could not have any peace because of it. Three doctors did not help me. Then I used some Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Resolvent and began to get better right away. They cured me and I have not been bothered with the itching since, to amount to anything. About two years ago I had la grippe and pneumonia which left me with a pain in my side. Treatment ran it into my leg, which then swelled and began to break out. The doctor was afraid it would turn to blood-poison. I used his medicine but it did no good, then I used the Cuticura Remedies three times and cured the breaking-out on my leg. J. F. Hennen, Milan, Mo., May 13, 1907."

A Bold Arrest.

Up at Emerson on Wednesday H.A. Rider, a U. S. Secret Service man, arrested Herbert Wright, a Canadian Customs officer and brought him to Thief River Falls where he was arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Browning an the charge of attempting to smuggle one Margaret Pierson, an alleged immoral woman of Winnipeg, into the United States after she had been refused admission by the immigration officials at the boundary line. Wright was placed under $500 bonds and his hearing put off untill Saturday.

The arrest was a most sensational affair. Rider found Wright on the American side and at the point of a gun handcuffed his man and placed him on the soo train for Thief River Falls.

There has been for some time an underground current of retaliation with U. S. official since the arrest last February of U. S. Revenue Collector Fowlds on the charge of kidnapping a wheat smuggler from Canadian to American side. Fowlds was discharged by the Canadian Judge with complete exhoneration.

Favors Pioneer's Plan.

C. N. Martz, County Superintdent of Highways, was a visitor here on Wednesday ovening from St. Hilaire. He was on his way to Brooks where he had some roads and bridges to examine with county Commissioner Pigeon. When coming here he examined the bridge over the creek about six miles west of here on the Red Lake Falls road, and says he will see to it that this bridge is put in first-class condition. He has been over a large portion of the Eleven Towns during the past few weeks and says that there will be found the garden spot of Northern Minnesota if a good, thorough system of drainiage is established.

Mr Martz favored us with a call and talked of the plan advocated by the PIONEER two weeks ago to call a meeting or series of meetings of the town road officers for the purpose of discussing the duties of such officers under the present state law. Mr. Martz is very much in favor of snch a plan and he has taken the matter up with the county auditor and state officials with the hope that such a system can be established.

A Model Friend.

What true friendship consists in depends on the temperament of the man who has a friend. It is related that at the funeral of Mr. X., who died extremely poor, the usually cold blooded Squire Tightfist was much affected.

"You thought a great deal of him, I suppose?" some one asked him.

"Thought a great deal of him? I should think I did. There was a true friend! He never asked me to lend him a cent, though I knew well enough he was starving to death!"

Too Expensive.

Two little girls who were taken to see "Othello" were much impressed by the death scene.

"I wonder whether they kill a lady every night?" asked one.

"Why, of course not," said the other. "They just pretend to! It would be too expensive to really kill a lady every night!"

Sweet Sorrow.

"I can't please my friends," sobbed the young bride.

"What's the matter, pet?"

"They insist that I can't be happy with a fathead like you, but, oh, husband, I am!"—Washington Herald.

Domestic Amenities.

Knicker—I've waited an hour for you to get your hat on straight. Mrs. Knicker—Well, I've waited longer than that for you to get your feet on straight.—New York Sun.

Mayfield Murmurs.

News is rather scarce this week.

Ed Stevens made a bnsiness trip to Plummer Monday.

Sever Grothe and Osten Ostrom visited with Sever Maaren last Sunday.

A large crowd of young people gathered at the home of Sever Grothe last Sunday. They strated a big snow ball war and had the biggest kind of a good time.

Mr. and Mrs. Charley Johnson, visited at the home of Gunnar Rystad on Sunday.

Jens Grothe went to Plummer on Monday with his brothers Arthur and Sigvart and Tommy Thompson. These three left on that day for North Dakota where they will spend the summer working on a farm.

Werner and Ole Magnel left on Monday last for Saskatchewan where they will spend the summer farming. They were quite sorry to leave this beautiful Mayfield Paradise.

The Concertina.

The accordion, which was a development of a previously existing aeolina, was invented in 1829 by a Viennese named Damian and consists, as every one knows, of a small pair of bellows and a range of keys which regulate the admission of wind to metal reeds. The accordion sounds notes in one key only. The concertina proper was invented on the same date by Charles Wheatstone, who later became a famous man of science. It seems curious that a man whose reputation rests chiefly on his electrical work and discoveries, who was one of the earliest men of science to make experiments in connection with submarine cables and who, moreover, was an extraordinarily skillful decipherer of cryptographic writings, should also have dabbled in musical inventions. But, as a matter of fact, Wheatstone's musical work preceded his scientific discoveries. He went straight from school to the business of manufacturing musical instruments, and it was in 1829, at the age of twenty-seven, that he took out his patent for the concertina. But he was more interested in the scientific principles on which musical instruments are constructed than in music itself, and his acoustical and musical experiments soon drew him into the path which led to his many electrical discoveries.—London Globe.

An Emended Sign.

Many a householder at the mercy of the painter will find a bond of sympathy with the students of Stanford university in the incident taken from the San Francisco Chronicle. The score of fraternity houses on the campus were in the process of being cleaned up in preparation for the receptions and luncheons to be given to visitors on the day of the big football game. A man got the contract to paint one of the houses white with the understanding that the job must be done and dry by a certain day. After making a rush start the painter asked permission to hang out his sign. His request was granted, and he put up a conspicuous announcement over the front porch, "These Premises Being Painted by Blank Blank."

Then the work dragged. He would come one day and stay away two. So the impatient collegians added to the sign until the announcement read:

"These Premises Being Painted by Blank Blank, Now and Then."

A Stuttering Story.

A noted humorist tells a stuttering story: "It is about two blacksmiths, both stutterers. The first snatched a redhot lump of iron from the forge, rushed with it to the anvil and then began this conversation: 'N-n-now, th-th-then, st-strike qu-quickly!' 'W-w-where shall I strike?' 'J-j-just at the end. H-h-hurry up!' 'Th-th-this end?' 'Yes, of c-c-course. Mind you hit s-s-straight.' 'All r-r-right. Shall I l-l-let her g-g-go?' 'N-n-no, you f-f-fool; the iron's c-c-cold.'"

Republican Conventions.

The Republican county convention held at St. Hilaire last Thursday. was very poorly attended. Thief River Falls. Red Lake Falls and St Hilaire had full delegations, and only five other precincts in the county were represented. A solid Taft delegation was elected to attend the district and state conventions at Crookston and Minneapolis this week. D.P. O'Neill, of Thief River Falls was elected as chairman of the county committee and Thos. Germo, of Red Lake Falls, as secretary. The other members of the county committee will be announced later.

The attendance at the county convention shows that the interests of the Republican party in this county did not prosper under the chairmanship of H. E. Ives during the past two years and it is to be hoped that with Mr. O'Neill at the head of the county committee it will liven up some.

THE DISTRICT CONVENTION.

The District convention was held at Crookston on Wednesday of this week and was most enthusiastic. For delegates to the National Convention E. E. Corliss, of Fergus Falls, and John Hedberg, of Roseau, were chosen, and C. A. Nettland and Dan Patterson as alternates.

The resolutions endorsed the Roosevelt administration and Taft for president and commended the splendid work of Senators Nelson and Clapp and Congressman Steenerson.

THE STATE CONVENTION.

At the state convention in Minneapolis on Thursday resolutions endorsing the candidacy of Taft were passed unanimously and the delegates-at-large to the National convention were chosen as follows;

Frank B. Kellogg, St. Paul; W. W. Heffelfinger, Minneapolis; E. B. Hawkins, Duluth; F. E. Putnam, Blue Earth City.

The Alternates-at-large are: F. E. Bentley, Montevideo; C. M. Sprague. Sauk Centre; D. C. Sheldon, Pine Island; W. B. Mann, Aitkin.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS—At large: John J. Eklund, Duluth; Job W. Lloyd, Le Sueur.

First District, R. E. Thompson, Preston: second, A. C. Dunn, Winnebago City; third, H. L. Sump; fourth, James E. Melin, Center City; fifth, Stewart Gamble. Minneapolis; sixth, A. H. Turretin, Rice; seventh, Thomas Anderson; eight, Daniel Anderson Cambridge; ninth, E. J. Herringer, Ada.

Echos From Equality

Spring is here and the farmers are getting their harrows, drills, ect., in shape for seeding.

The Clearwater Creamery is running right along and is having big success for this time of the year. The "Governor" is trying to get some cream from here for his creamery in Lambert but we dont think he'll get much from this vicinity.

At the annual town meeting in March we voted in the cash system to build roads and will try how that will go. We have been here now nearly twelve years and have practically no good road yet and we have spent from $800 to $1,000 in road work every year.

The Standard Drainage Co. has its crew here again to continue the work on the big Judicial Ditch. They are busy putting the dredge in shape and expect to begin actual work in less than two weeks. They expect to get finished by Sept 1st, but will have to do better than last year to have it done by that time. Yesterday they measured up the wood the farmers have hauled for them to make power to move the dirt with and found they have between 600 and 700 cords. One man has to handle all this wood three times before it gets into the dredge, which means that he will have some work in the four months.

Judicial Ignorance.

"Did the clock stop when you dashed it down cellar?" asked the police judge of the man who was charged with being disorderly.

"Of course it stopped. Did you suppose it went through to China?"

Modern Facilities.

"Who was dis Rip Van Winkle?"

"An old time guy wot slept in de mountains."

"Didn't have no public libraries, I s'pose, in his day?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Cruelty and fear shake hands together.-Balzac.

Thief River Man Drowned.

Wednesday morning the body of August Peterson was found in the Red Lake River at Thief River Falls by a workman at about 5 o'clock.

Peterson, who is an old time resident of Thief River Falls was addicted to drink, and late night before last he left a saloon and headed for the power house, where some of the old timers are in the habit of sleeping off their jags because of the warmth they can soak up free. It is supposed that in walking along the river bank he fell in, as the remains were found a short distance from the power house.

Deceased was a widower, about 55 years of age, and leaves several children who will be taken care of by relatives.—Crookston Journal

Mayfield Murmurs.

Sam Lovaas and family spent last Sunday visiting with Ole Breiland at Krathn.

Dan Carroll is anxious to get busy seeding. It wont take long now untill we see him using his drill.

L. T. Bergh and Anton Fevig were at Crookston laet wednesday to transact some necessary buisness.

Carl Magnell, one of our most up-to-date farmers, will put up a big addition to his dwelling house this spring anb has the material hauled ready to begin work.

R.O.Gorden is getting ready to make some extensive improvements on his fine farm this summer and among other things he will clear off all the brush and willows completely.

Nine teams went to Plummer last week after the material for the new bridge. The material is all on the ground now and the work of construction will be commenced just as soon as the water in the river goes down.

Ole Rel[illegible]gaard, the mail carrier between Malone and Garnes, is at present using a boat to cross the swollen Clearwater river, but it wont be long untill he can cross with his team and buggy over a fine steel bridge.

Eccentric Editions of Books.

Mr. George Somes Layard in a book entitled "Suppressed Plates, Wood Engravings, Etc.," writes of the ridiculous people who value such books as the first issue of the first edition of Dickens' "American Notes" just because there is a mistake in the pagination, or a first edition of Disraeli's "Lothair" because the prototype of "Mgr. Catesby" is divulged by misprinting the name "Capel," or "Poems by Robert Burns," first Edinburgh edition, because the Duke of Roxborough appears as "the Duke of Boxborough," or Barker's "Breeches" Bible of 1594 because on the title page of the New Testament the figures are transposed to 1495, or the first edition in French of Washington Irving's "Sketch-Book" because the translator, maltreating the author's name, has declared the book to "traduit de l'Anglais de M. Irwin Washington," and in the dedication has labeled Sir Walter Scott "barronnet."

Cornish Humor.

The magistrate at the Liskeard police court might well have excused the laughter which greeted the remark of a police witness only a short time ago who said with all seriousness: "He was drunk, your honor, and couldn't stand. I told him to go away, and as he wouldn't I locked him up."

The laugh in another court was against the solicitor who severely asked, "Were you present when you heard this?"

Mixed metaphors are not a peculiar nor indeed a common failing of the Cornishman, but a certain eloquent town councilor quite recently got entangled when in the course of a protracted debate on the momentous subject of the local dust bins he declared indignantly, "It is time we put our foot down with a loud voice."—English Illustrated Magazine.

A Fair Jury.

In a suit some years ago between father and son before an Indiana justice of the peace the sextet comprising the jury came in after three hours' deliberation with the following impartial verdict: "We, the jury, agree to find judgment for neither plaintiff nor defendant and find that each pay half the costs." It is said the verdict struck every one as being so unusually fair that even the parties to the action were satisfied.—Case and Comment.

Fooled.

Lazy Lewis—I was told dat de farmer wot lives on dat hill paid his hands jist de same whedder dey worked er not, so I went an' hired t' him. Tired Thomas—Den youse played off sick, I reckon? Lazy Lewis—Yep, an' at de end ov de mouth I found dat he never paid nobody nothin' nohow.—Chicago News.

Flying Fish.

At one time it was widely credited that flying fish possessed the power to accelerate their passage through the air by flapping their "wings," as their enormously elongated pectoral fins are sometimes called. Had this been proved these fish would have actually shared with bats, birds and insects a power which has been denied to all other living creatures. But men of science are now agreed that the motion of the fins sometimes seen when the fish leaves the water is merely a continuation of its swimming movement and in no way aids the passage of the fish through the air. The method of the fish's flight is this: It rushes through the water at high speed, hurls itself into the atmosphere and, spreading its huge winglike fins, glides rapidly forward until its momentum is exhausted. Then it drops back again into the water. So great is the impetus gained that these fish under favorable conditions will "fly" for a distance of 500 feet. But when once the impetus is exhausted the fish is quite unable to sustain itself in the air by muscular effort.—Scientific American.

Where the Joke Lay.

He was an Englishman, taking a trip on a Welsh excursion steamboat, and he was watching a group of Welsh colliers larking with one another, when they suddenly seized one of their companions and swung him to and fro. The victim shrieked in terror as the ringleader shouted:

"Now, boys, overboard with 'im!"

So real was the horror of the collier that the Englishman jumped up and interfered successfully. The collier picked himself up and backed to a safe seat next the Englishman, who sternly reproved him for uttering such nerve shattering cries.

"It was only a joke, and you must have known it," he said.

The collier wiped his forehead.

"Iss, I knowed famous it wass a joke," he retorted, "an' that's why I did screech blue murrdurr. Eu don't know the boys, surr. The joke with them wass to chuck me overboard. Thank eu kindly forr stoppin' 'em!"—Pearson's Weekly.

PATENT MEDICINES.

They Were Known In Japan as Early as the Year 1632.

Though Americans have got the idea into their heads that this country takes the palm for the use of patent medicines, it appears that it falls far behind Japan.

A report by one of Great Britain's consuls in Japan shows that the "Yankees of the east" began to develop the patent medicine business long before the United States was more than a few little Atlantic coast hamlets—that is, in the year 1632.

The business had its origin at Toyama, on the west coast. Its founder and patron was Prince Seiho Maeda. While daymio of the province his making of medicines for the poor attracted such attention that Bandai Jokan, a physician of Katakami, brought a supply of Han-Gon-Tan ("medicine that calls back the dead to life"). This was distributed from door to door, to be paid for when convenient, and from that time has been a popular remedy.

The industry took root and flourished. Medicines were distributed in the last century by thousands of agents, who made collections once a year, taking back unused supplies.

The medicines—none being in liquid form—are usually given suggestive names, like "brain healing pills" and "heal everything powders." Toyama has a special guild for loaning capital, a dealers' club of 3,000 members, a patent medicine school and a patent medicine magazine.—Philadelphia Press.

JACK CADE.

He Was Killed With an Arrow by the Sheriff of Kent.

One of the mysteries of history is that surrounding the arch traitor Jack Cade. Nearly all historians have described him as an Irishman. He was really born in Sussex, where he was as a youth a servant to one Sir Thomas Dagre.

This Sir Thomas Dagre, or Dacre, was a Sussex knight of great eminence, who had seats at Hurstmonceaux and Heathfield, in that county.

Cade has for several centuries been a common name about Mayfield and Heathfield, as is proved as well by numerous entries in the parish registers as by lands and localities designated from that family. After his defeat near London Cade took to the Sussex woods, and he finally would have escaped if his reckless courage had not brought him out into the open.

It is traditionally related that he was engaged in a game of bowls in the garden of a little ale house at Heathfield when a Kentish squire, Sir Alexander Iden, sheriff of Kent, taking him unawares, killed him with an arrow.—London Saturday Review.

First Surgeon In St. Louis.

Dr. Antoine Francois Saugraine settled in St. Louis in 1800 and was the first surgeon to locate west of the Mississippi river. He spent all of his leisure time in experiments in chemistry and with electricity. The Indians were frequent visitors at his laboratory and, not understanding the mystery of his experiments, held him in great awe and wanted to worship him as a god. Before the village of St. Louis was incorporated Dr. Saugraine acted as postmaster. He tied the mail up in a blue silk handkerchief and left it on the doorstep. When any citizen wanted to know if he had a letter he untied the handkerchief, looked the mail over, paid for the postage in a piece of coonskin, which was legal tender, and walked on. The first lucifer matches ever made in this country were made by Dr Saugraine. The small wooden sticks were dipped, one at a time, in the combustible substance and then lit by friction, as at the present time. He also made the first thermometer used in the west.—Kansas City Star.

Funeral on Skates.

Among the Wends—a remnant of the ancient Slavonic race inhabiting the Spreewald, a region inclosed by an arm of the Spree river, about fifty miles south of Berlin, are seen the most curious funeral processions of the civilized world. As in Holland, the thoroughfares are waterways. In the winter time, when these are frozen over, funeral processions pass along the ice on skates. The coffin is carried on a sledge drawn by six mourners on skates. The immediate relatives of the dead, men and women alike, skate along behind the coffin surrounded by their friends. The women carry a Bible in one hand and wear the ancient national costume.—Popular Mechanics.

ONE LESSON WHOLLY WASTED.

Little Surprise Planned by Billiger McSwat Not a Success.

"Lobelia," asked Mr. McSwat, who was rummaging in one of the closets, "have you done anything with that old coat of mine that used to hang on the last hook in here?"

"Yes," answered Mrs. McSwat. "I gave it to the Volunteers."

"You did, did you?" Well, you'll be sorry to learn, perhaps, that there was a five-dollar bill in it which I was going to give you if I found that coat undisturbed at the beginning of March."

"O, I think not, Billiger. I searched it thoroughly before I gave it away."

"You're a pretty smart woman, Lobelia, but it didn't occur to you to look inside the lining."

"O, yes, it did, and I found the five-dollar bill. I spent it for the rubber plant in the front parlor that you have admired so much and wondered how I managed to buy out of my allowance. You're a pretty smart man, Billiger, but there are times when you don't look the part."

There being no further business before the house, Mr. McSwat adjourned without form.

MADE HIS MEANING CLEAR.

Professor's Son Translated Father's Speech Into the Vernacular.

A college professor, in company with his son, was enjoying a walk in the country, when he met an old farmer. It had been a very wet season, and the professor, thinking to start the conversation in a way that would prove interesting to the farmer, remarked:

"There has been a rather abnormal precipitation of late."

The farmer seemed somewhat embarrassed, and the professor's son, who used a different vernacular, though he was a student in the college to which his father was attached, attempted to straighten out the matter. Drawing the farmer to one side, he said in a superior way:

"The governor means that we've been having a devil of a lot of rain."—Harper's Weekly.

GIRL WAS DELIRIOUS

With Fearful Eczema—Pain, Heat, and Tingling Were Excruciating—Cuticura Acted Like Magic.

"An eruption broke out on my daughter's chest. I took her to a doctor, and he pronounced it to be eczema of a very bad form. He treated her, but the disease spread to her back, and then the whole of her head was affected, and all her hair had to be cut off. The pain she suffered was excruciating, and with that and the heat and tingling her life was almost unbearable. Occasionally she was delirious and she did not have a proper hour's sleep for many nights. The second doctor we tried afforded her just as little relief as the first. Then I purchased Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills, and before the Ointment was three-quarters finished every trace of the disease was gone. It really seemed like magic. Mrs. T. W. Hyde, Brentwood, Essex, England, Mar. 8, 1907."

Recommended His Wife.

Irvin Cobb, humorist of New York, was recommended to a lecture management. The latter sought an introduction through a friend, Mr. McVeigh

"Come here, Irvin, I want you to meet a friend of mine," said McVeigh After a few minutes' conversation, the lecture man broached the subject of lecturing as follows:

"I was just wondering, Mr. Cobb what you would think of a proposition to do some lecture work next season?"

Cobb looked at his questioner for just a moment in blank amazement. Evidently such a thought had never entered his head before. Then reaching out his hand confidentially, he said:

"I've got it. My wife will do it. She is the best one I know."—Lyceum and Talent.

FLOOD WIPES OUT MONTANA TOWNS

CRAIG AND HAUSER LAKE ARE DESTROYED BY BURSTING OF RIVER DAM.

WATERS ADVANCE UPON CITY OF GREAT FALLS

At Last Reports Are Within Seven Miles of That Place—Couriers on Horseback Warn Persons in Path —Much Damage Is Reported.

Helena, Mont., Apr. 16.—A great body of water, released from Hauser Lake by the bursting of the dam across the Missouri river 15 miles below Helena, is now pouring down the Missouri river. The little village of Craig and Hauser Lake have been destroyed by the rushing waters, a dozen cabins at Oxbow, where another dam is being constructed, have been swept away, while numerous ranches have suffered losses in buildings and live stock. The flood was within seven miles of Great Falls, where the great Boston and Montana smelter is situated on the river bank, but the hundreds of employes, working all night, probably saved the plant from serious damage by the construction of a wing dam.

Couriers Warn of Flood.

Couriers on horseback and warning by telegraph have sent the people living along the river fleeing to the hills. Only one loss of life is reported, Carl Ide, a smelter employe at Great Falls, being swept over the dam and drowned Tuesday night while working to save the property from threatened destruction.

M. H. Gerry, general manager of the company, Wednesday received advices from New York that the dam would be rebuilt at once. Already preliminary work is being done.

To Rebuild Smelter at Once.

Officials of the smelter comapny announce their intention of beginning the rebuilding of the structure at once and have made plans to supply their customers with power until the work is completed. Because of the fact that the Wisconsin Bridge and Iron Company of Milwaukee had not yet been released from its bond for the construction work, it is said that this firm will be held responsible for any litigation to recover damages, which may arise.

The loss to the power company, according H. H. Gerry, Jr., manager of the local plant, will range from $300,000 to $350,000.

Blast Black Eagles Dam.

The Black Eagles Dam across the Missouri at Great Falls was Wednesday blown up with dynamite in order to prevent the destruction of the Boston & Montana smelter. This materially helped, and a serious danger from the flood is now probably over. A smelting workman, name unknown, was drowned when the dam was dynamited, the second man to lose his life as a result of the flood.

Cattle and Houses Swept Away.

Cascade, Mont., Apr. 16.—The water is rising rapidly and the big steel bridge at this point is doomed. The surface of the flood is black with ranch houses, live stock and haystacks.

Lightning Burns $125,000 in Oil.

Beaumont, Tex., Apr. 16.—Six inches of rain fell here. The rain was accompanied by a terrific thunder and lightning storm that lasted all day. All streets in the city were under water for several hours and street car service and other traffic was stopped. Every kind of wire service was paralyzed and damage to rice farms was large, but no loss of life has been reported. Lightning struck an oil tank at the plant of the Security oil refinery, containing 45,000 barrels of oil in process of refining. A part of the oil was pumped from the tank and saved and the remainder burned. The total loss in oil, which is covered by insurance, is about $125,000.

Chief Arrests Police Judge.

Carmi, Ill., Apr. 16.—During an altercation Tuesday between Police Judge Alfred Pendell and Chief of Police H. S. Parsons over the release of a prisoner, Judge Pendell, it is claimed, attempted to shoot the chief and was knocked down by him and placed in jail. There has been ill-feeling between the two officials for some time.

Ex-Physician a Suicide.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Apr. 16.—Dr. G. A. Curriden, a traveling salesman for a New York tablet house and for a number of years a practicing physician in Washington, D. C., committed suicide here Wednesday in his room at the Herkimer hotel. His home had been in Detroit for the past few months.

Confesses to Embezzling $23,000.

Madison, Wis., Apr. 16.—The confession of Edwin C. Story, cashier of the Citizens' State bank of Belleville, Wis., places the amount of money he embezzled at $23,000. Story is now suffering from the effects of the poison he took in trying to commit suicide.

Train Ditched; Two Killed.

Helena, Mont., Apr. 16.—A special from Glendive says that the North Coast Limited train on the Northern Pacific was ditched Tuesday by running into a burned bridge. Fireman Gustavs and an unknown tramp were killed. Engineer Waddingham was seriously injured.

Pe-ru-na Prevents Catching Cold.
One Dose in Time, Saves Nine.

NO ONE CAN ALWAYS AVOID

Catching Cold on the Street Car

Many people persist in riding on the street cars, insufficiently protected by clothing.

They start out perhaps in the heat of the day and do not feel the need of wraps.

The rapid moving of the car cools the body unduly. When they board the car perhaps they are slightly perspiring. When the body is in this condition it is easily chilled. This is especially true when a person is sitting.

Beginning a street car ride in the middle of the day and ending it in the evening almost invariably requires extra wraps, but people do not observe these precautions, hence they catch cold.

Colds are very frequent in the Spring on this account, and as the Summer advances, they do not decrease. During the Spring months, no one should think of riding on the car without being provided with a wrap.

A cold caught in the Spring is liable to last through the entire Summer. Great caution should be observed at this season against exposure to cold. During the first few pleasant days of Spring, the liability of catching cold is great.

No wonder so many people acquire muscular rheumatism and catarrhal diseases during this season.

However, in spite of the greatest precautions, colds will be caught.

At the appearance of the first symptom, Peruna should be taken according to directions on the bottle, and continued until every symptom disappears.

Do not put it off. Do not waste time by taking other remedies. Begin at once to take Peruna and continue taking it until you are positive that the cold has entirely disappeared. This may save you a long and perhaps serious illness later on.

Bad Effects From Cold.

Mr. M. J. Deutsch, Secretary Building Material Trades Council, 151 Washington St., Chicago, Ill., writes:

"I have found your medicine to be unusually efficacious in getting rid of bad effects from cold, and more especially in driving away all symptoms of catarrh, with which I am frequently troubled.

"The relief Peruna gives in catarrhal troubles alone is well worth the price per bottle. I have used the remedy for several years now."

Spells of Coughing.

Mrs. C. E. Long, writes from Atwood, Colorado, as follows:

"When I wrote you for advice my little three-year-old girl had a cough that had been troubling her for four months. She took cold easily, and would wheeze and have spells of coughing that would sometimes last for a half hour.

"Now we can never thank you enough for the change you have made in our little one's health. Before she began taking your Peruna she suffered everything in the way of cough, colds and croup, but now she has taken not quite a bottle of Peruna, and is well and strong as she has ever been in her life."

Pe-ru-na for Colds.

Mr. James Morrison, 68 East 16th St., Paterson, N. J., writes:

"I have given Peruna a fair trial, and I find it to be just what you claim it to be. I cannot praise it too highly. I have used two bottles in my family for colds, and everything imaginable. I can safely say that your medicine is the best I have ever used."

Couldn't Spare O'Connell.

Daniel O'Connell had got a man off at one time for highway robbery and at another for burglary; but on the third occasion, for stealing a coasting brig, the task of hoodwinking the jury seemed too great for even his powers of cajolery. However, he made out that the crime was committed on the high seas and obtained an acquittal. The prisoner lifted up his hands and eyes to heaven and exclaimed: "May the Lord long spare you, Mr. O'Connell —to me!"

No Visible Signals.

"Yessum," said Sandy Pikes, as he devoured the wedge of pumpkin pie, "I sternly object to the nefarious practice of clipping off de tails of dogs."

"Ah, I am glad you are so tenderhearted, my poor man," sympathized the good housewife.

"Well, it ain't exactly dat, mum, but when a dog hasn't any tail I can't tell by de wags if he is in a good humor or not and it makes me skeery about approaching de house."

A Gentle Request.

"Charley, dear," said young Mrs. Torkins, "I wish you wouldn't pay so much attention to the personal popularity of horses this year."

"What do you mean?"

"You have a dreadful habit of picking out animals who are favorites before the race and absolutely friendless after."

Real Calamity.

"And are you out of work, my good man?" inquired the kind lady whom he met.

"Worse, ma'am," returned the listless one. "I'm out o'terbaccer."—Ally Sloper.

This woman says she was saved from an operation by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lena V. Henry, of Norristown, Ga., writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I suffered untold misery from female troubles. My doctor said an operation was the only chance I had, and I dreaded it almost as much as death.

"One day I read how other women had been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I decided to try it. Before I had taken the first bottle I was better, and now I am entirely cured.

"Every woman suffering with any female trouble should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

The Power of Love.

Love as many persons and as many creatures as you possibly can. Love is the only power by which you can make yourself rich in a moral world. —Blackie.

Church—And did you mail it?

Gotham—No; she forgot to give it to me!—The Congregationalist.

A Counter Stroke.

A stylishly-dressed woman entered a Chinese laundry and paid for a laundered shirt.

"Why do you wear those 'rats,' I think you call them, in your hair?" inquired the Chinaman, who had an inquisitive turn of mind.

"Tush, Mr. John," replied his customer. "I always thought it was Chinese etiquette not to talk about the things they like best."

The Oriental blinked his eyes as the lady passed out.

An End Missing.

An Irishman who served on board a man-of-war was selected by one of the officers to haul in a towline of considerable length that was towing over the taffrail. After pulling in 40 or 50 fathoms, which had put his patience severely to proof, as well as every muscle of his arms, he muttered to himself:

"Surely it's as long as to-day and tomorrow. It's a good week's work for any five in the ship. Bad luck to the leg or the arm it'll leave at last. What, more of it yet? Och, murder! The say's mighty deep, to be sure!"

After continuing in a similar strain and conceiving there was little probability of the completion of his labor, he suddenly stopped short, and, addressing the officer of the watch, exclaimed: "Bad manners to me, sir, if I don't think somebody's cut off the other end of it!"—The Pathfinder.

LOST $300.

Buying Medicine When Right Food Was Needed.

Money spent for "tonics" and "bracers" to relieve indigestion, while the poor old stomach is loaded with pastry and pork, is worse than losing a pocketbook containing the money.

If the money only is lost it's bad enough, but with lost health from wrong eating, it is hard to make the money back.

A Mich young lady lost money on drugs but is thankful she found a way to get back her health by proper food. She writes:

"I had been a victim of nervous dyspepsia for six years and spent three hundred dollars for treatment in the attempt to get well. None of it did me any good.

"Finally I tried Grape-Nuts food, and the results were such that, if it cost a dollar a package, I would not be without it. My trouble had been caused by eating rich food such as pastry and pork.

"The most wonderful thing that ever happened to me, I am sure, was the change in my condition after I began to eat Grape-Nuts. I began to improve at once and the first week gained four pounds.

"I feel that I cannot express myself in terms that are worthy of the benefit Grape-Nuts has brought to me, and you are perfectly free to publish this letter if it will send some poor sufferer relief, such as has come to me."

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

More Shortage.

Duluth—A further alleged shortage of $1,975.05 in the accounts of F. G. Warner, formerly state oil inspector, was reported by Public Examiner Anton Schaefer. The report is based on an examination made by W. C. Heilbron, assistant corporation examiner for the department, and covers what is known as the Duluth district, including the counties of Aitkin, Beltrami, Carlton, Itasca, Lake Pine and St. Louis.

The report made a few days ago charging an alleged shortage of $12,010 covered only the Minneapolis district, which includes Hennepin, Ramsey and twenty-nine other counties. In this second report Mr. Heilbron states that there still remain for examination the records of the other three districts, Mankato, La Crosse, Wis., and Fargo, N. D., the designation of these districts being that adopted by the Standard Oil Company. It is from these offices that the inspection in the counties included in the districts are made.

A Bad Man.

Eden Prairie—Frank Miller, a storekeeper, paraded with a shotgun and for a time he had the whole town subdued. Miller is now locked up in the county jail, but it took an automobile and three deputy sheriffs to capture him.

Residents telephoned the sheriff's office that Miller was brandishing a double-barreled shotgun on the streets. Later more residents telephoned that he was firing the gun. Finally an official request for aid came to the office, and a posse headed by Frank Johnson, deputy in charge of the insane, started for Eden Prairie in an automobile.

When they arrived, Miller had the field to himself, but he submitted to arrest without objection. Residents of Eden Prairie say that Miller is insane, but Frank Johnson, who has handled enough insane patients to know, says that Miller simply dallied too long with the cup that cheers.

State Borrows $400,000.

St. Paul—The last legislature authorized a bond issue to provide funds for enlarging the university campus and for the erection of certain buildings.

Fifty thousand dollars of the bonds have been taken by the state of Minnesota permanent school fund, and the remaining $400,000, bearing 4½ per cent interest, have been sold to the Minnesota Loan & Trust company.

The deposits, surplus and bank clearings of Minneapolis are everywhere favorably commented upon, and this important sale of securities to a local trust company is additional evidence that Minneapolis is making good as a banking and financial center.

A large amount of the bonds have already been resold to investors here and in St. Paul and to banks and individuals in other Minnesota cities.

Cost of Kiss Cut to $4,750.

Duluth—Mrs. Olga Bergman of Hibbing was awarded $4,750 for a kiss. This is a reduction of $250 from the verdict at the first trial.

Since the first trial of the case Mr. Kitz has settled with a good many people and now declares that he is all in financially, but he has been reputed to be wealthy. The case has excited a great deal of interest in this section.

She was a tenant of Jacob Kitz of Hibbing and declared that he stole a kiss from her by force one day when he came for the rent. Mr. Kitz set up a defense that he was being blackmailed, but two juries have found that Mrs. Bergman was kissed against her will and fixed the damages.

Death of D. R. Noyes.

St. Paul—Daniel R. Noyes, head of the wholesale drug firm of Noyes Bros. & Cutler, died at his home, 366 Summit avenue, St. Paul, after a brief illness. He was taken ill last Thursday and it was at first thought that there was no grave danger, but a sinking spell followed, from which he failed to rally. Deceased has been prominently identified with the business interests of St. Paul for nearly a half century and was well known all over the Northwest.

NEWS NOTES.

Red Lake Falls—The funeral of Mrs. Margaret Emard, a pioneer resident 102 years old, was held from St. Joseph's church.

Minneapolis—Otto Stann, 9 years old, was drowned in the Mississippi river at Thirty-fifth avenue north while playing on the boom with his friend, Willie Zeeb.

"Buster Brown," one of the best known of the many musical comedies that are now bidding for favor, will be seen at the Bijou, Minneapolis, for the week of April 19th. Master Reed, who takes the part of the mischievous little fellow, is said to be thoroughly imbued with the artist's spirit of Buster, and will be supported by a company of forty players.

Monticello—While raking leaves in her yard, Mrs. Rosina Lyrenmann's clothing accidentally caught fire and she was burned to death. She was 70 years old and lived four miles south of this village.

Mankato—The first electric streetcar to run in Mankato was sent over the new line to try out the machinery and test the track, which has now been completed.

St. Paul—Three attempts to burglarize homes in the neighborhood of Dayton's Bluff were frustrated by the householders.

NEW ARRIVALS IN CANADA NEARLY 300,000 IN 1907.

ABOUT SIXTY THOUSAND FROM THE UNITED STATES.

Now that it is known that in the year just closed nearly sixty thousand from the United States declared their intention of making their homes in Canada, it might not be out of place to search for some reasons that would bring this about. These people are but following the example of the fifty-five or sixty thousand who did the same thing the year previous, and an almost equal number who the year before that but followed the example of the thousands of the year preceding. An excellent climate, certain and positive crops of grain of all kinds, good markets for their produce, land —and good land, too— at low prices, easy terms of payment, (not forgetting the 160 acres of land given free by the Government, particulars of which the Canadian Government Agent whose name appears elsewhere will tell you about) and then the splendid social conditions. The situation is pretty well sized up by a writer in one of the magazines. Quoting from this article, we find this: "Those of us who made good in the States," interjected another settler as if to continue the story of his neighbor, "have had it easy from the start; a little money is a mighty good thing on coming into a new country. But those who make an entry, or even buy lands at low rates, are able to square things in two or three seasons' crops. There are hardships in building shanties, and then with increasing prosperity getting things into shape for better homes. But affairs go much as in the States. We have the largest liberty in the world; there is more home rule in the Provinces than in the several states of the Republic. Taxes are light and with only a few million people west of Winnipeg we don't get in each other's way. One's friends over the line probably thought we would not live through the winter; and while it is cold, real cold, it is free from the moisture experienced in the east. Schools are good as encouraged by the Government; the enterprising American promoter and Yankee drummer see to it that we take notice of the latest improvements and best agricultural machinery. Altogether we are as near to affairs as we would be on our own farms in the States. Winnipeg bears the same relation to us as Chicago did at home; and Edmonton with the surrounding region advances as Omaha did in the days when we were as young as the boys yonder. We get together much as they did in the granges over the border; the government has established experimental schools of agriculture, and progress in every line is stimulated. This is a great region for grazing," we hear the Calgary citizen continuing, "and then with building elevators of wheat at one dollar a bushel, many of us find time to go over to the live stock exhibition in Chicago or visit old friends during the course of the winter. Every man is taken for what he is worth or for what he can raise; and in this good air and on this fertile soil we intend to show our old friends that we are made of the right stuff—that we are chips of the old block who built up the American West."

Hope.

Walter Damrosch tells of a matron in Chicago who, in company with her young nephew, was attending a musical entertainment.

The selections were apparently entirely unfamiliar to the youth; but when the "Wedding March" of Mendelssohn was begun he began to evince more interst.

"That sounds familiar," he said. "I'm not strong on these classical pieces, but that's a good one. What is it?"

"That," gravely explained the matron, "is the 'Maiden's Prayer.'"—Harper's Weekly.

MACHINE-GROUND PAINT.

Occasionally one hears the "hand-mixed" paint of the painter slightingly spoken of as "unscientific" and "not thoroughly mixed." The facts are all on the side of the painter and his hand-prepared paint.

It is the most "scientific" paint there is, because it is made on the spot to suit the particular purpose for which it is to be used. It is as scientific as a good doctor's prescription. If the painter did not mix it thus it would be as unscientific as a patent medicine. Moreover, the paint which a good painter turns out is made of genuine white lead and pure linseed oil. If he does not mix it himself he is not sure what is in it, and consequently his client cannot be sure.

As for not being thoroughly mixed by machinery, that is simply a misstatement. White Lead as made by National Lead Company is thoroughly incorporated with 7 or 8 per cent. of pure Linseed oil in the factory, making a paste. This paste need only be thinned with additional linseed oil to make it ready for the brush.

The thorough incorporation of pigment and oil has already been accomplished before the painter gets it.

To know how to tell pure white lead is a great advantage to both painter and house-owner. National Lead Company will send a tester free to anyone interested. Address the company at Woodbridge Building, New York, N. Y.

An Undesirable Article.

When Mr. B. went to call upon some friends the other afternoon, he was on his way out of town and so had his traveling bag with him. This he placed in a corner, and when he rose to leave he overlooked it. His hostess happened to notice it before he had reached the door, and called to her little daughter:

"Marie, run after Mr. B. and tell him he has left his grip here!"

The little one gave her mother one swift glance of surprise, but flew dutifully to obey orders.

"Oh, Mr. B.," they heard her say, "mother says you have forgotten to take your grip with you." Then she added, quickly, in a tone of polite apology: "You see, most all of us have had it this winter, and we'd rather not have any more!"

"I don't know, madam," was the reply. "I never saw any of it."

Wonder if the great army of republicans who have been voting for Gov. Johnson will vote for John A. Johnson for president?

The Republican party in Red Lake county is to be congratulated on their selection of a county chairman. The new man, D. P. O'Neill, of Thief River Falls, known something of the game of politics and is naturally considerable of a hustler.

Harry Ives, better known as the man who brought the celebrated county printing injunction case, has filed as a candidate for the Republican nomination for the legislature from this district. We have a faint idea that Mr. Ives will be a close reader of the Plummer Pioneer during his campaign.

M. W. Savage, of International Stock Food fame, has announced himself as a candidate for governor on the Republican Ticket. If a sussessful business career counts for anything as showing executive ability Mr. Savage should be well qualified for the office. And then he has some money to put into a campaign which will require lots of the "dough" to be fought to a victorious end for the Republican party.

Congressman Volstead has introduced a new drainage measure which contemplates giving the state the right to drain the unsettled lands of the government in Minnesota. If Mr. Volstead's measure should become a law it would, of course, be a good thing for northern Minnesota—in time. It can not bring the prompt and perfect results aimed at by Congressman Steenerson's drainage bill. Under the state drainage system it would take fifteen to twenty years to drain the tracts which the Steenerson measure would at once. The benefits would be delayed for years and consequently the lands involved would have no earning capacity while the expense would not at any time be any less, if anywhere near as little, as estimated in the recommendations of the Secretary of the Interior and the Director of the Geological Survey after the preliminary survey had been made under Congressman Steenerson's original bill. If the best results are to be obtained let us have the drainage asked for by Steenerson.

Not Caught Yet.

The young clubman had been introduced to the beautiful Russian actress. He was charmed, entranced, and he finally led her to the conservatory, where they might have a quiet minute to themselves.

"Pardon me," he said. "I did not quite catch your name."

"What is it that you did not do?" she asked in bewilderment. "Oh, your language is so strange. Do you want my name?"

"Yes; your own full name."

"Will you catch it this time?"

"I'll do my best."

"Well, it's Vera Federovina Kommisarjewskaya."

He muffed it.—Los Angeles Herald.

Showed Him How.

The gardener at the Jardin des Plantes in Paris gave an undergardener two of the first ripe figs to take to one of the governors. On the way the man gave way to temptation and ate one.

"Where is the other fig?" said the governor to him, having been told of the present beforehand.

"I ate it."

"But how could you do that?"

"Like this," said the servant, swallowing the other.

A KING'S DREAM.

Belief In the Vision Might Have Changed History.

On June 12, 1645, Charles I. slept at the little inn in Naseby village. Scouts had brought news of the approach of the parliamentary army, and the king was resolved to give them battle.

In the middle of the night the lords of the bedchamber, who slept in the outer room, were disturbed by an extraordinary noise in the king's room. Upon entering they found Charles sitting bolt upright in his bed and in a much excited state.

On asking what the noise was, the king said he had heard no noise, but that their entry had roused him from an extraordinary dream. He said that Strafford had stood at the foot of his bed and implored him not to give battle, for if he did he would be so disastrously defeated as to threaten his crown and even his life.

The next morning Charles told Prince Rupert and his generals of his dream, but declared that he would fight. They in vain tried to dissuade him. In the evening news arrived that the enemy were close at hand. That night Charles again dreamed the same dream. Strafford warned him that it was the last time he would try to help him.

The next morning the king led his army out and by sunset he had lost cannon, baggage and four-fifths of his troops and, as events proved, the war as well.

Strafford's ghost was right. Had Charles not met Cromwell at Naseby it is quite likely he would not have met his death at Whitehall.—Pearson's Weekly.
